Fear Foul Play.

Quebec, Nov. 15.—Grave rumors are current in this city relative to the death of Arthur Cardinal, whose body was found drowned last week in the Louise Basin. Cardinal was last seen on Oct. 26, when he was in company with another man on St. Andrew street. On leaving home he had nearly $100 on his person, and a watch and chain. Neither the money nor the watch and chain were found on the body, which leads to the belief that the unfortunate man met with foul play.

To Recognize All Degrees.

Ottawa, Nov. 15.—The dream of complete reciprocity in the recognition of medical degrees which has been entertained by the progressive physicians and surgeons of Canada for a generation past seems to be on the eve of realization. Soon after the opening of Parliament, Dr. J. B. Blackburn, of Halifax, N.S., will introduce a bill to amend the act of 1902 and to the recognition of degrees by all the provinces.

Another Automobile Fatality.

Reduction of assessment was ordered totalling $40,000 on buildings and $5,000 on business tax.

These volumes are well worth the perusal of any practitioner, and should be read by every ophthalmologist. Gould has been accused of hobby-riding and crankism by a number of prominent oculists, but he has defended his case so ably that it seems to me the profession of the United States, and the world, for that matter, must consider seriously what he has had to say.

It is from the inspiration derived from reading Gould's "Biographic Clinics" that I am impelled to write this paper; in order to pass on some of are not fully experienced unless the the benefits which I have derived therefrom.

TOWN TOPICS.

Only One Alderman Opposes a Motion To Keep Absentees

Ald. Carlaw thought this was a matter that should be dropped. Aldermen's seat was evidently secure and it was not fair proceedings to declare Ald. Green's seat vacant under such distressing circumstances.

Ald. Robinson said he had asked in the Council if any member had been absent from the Council long enough to vacate their seats. He (the speaker) studied the statute in the matter obeyed and if the Aldermen had legally vacated their seats they should be declared vacant.

Ald. Thompson said that this matter of endeavoring to unseat him had in no sense to attend the meeting of the Council. Ald. Green was one of the oldest members of the Council and was a valuable member when he was present at meetings. Ald. Thompson, he said, had been doing his duty, as far as his Aldermanic duties were concerned, and the intention of the law was not to disqualify such an Alderman.

Ald. Woodley said he would be the last person in the Council to unseat Green's seat vacant, as he (Ald. Green) had proved to be a worthy Alderman during many years.

The motion of Ald. Chown was almost unanimously carried, Ald. Robinson alone voting against it.

WATER RATES.

In regard to the recommendation that water rates be lowered next year, Ald. Wallbridge said that the Water Works Committee felt that it would make a reduction in water rates next year impossible, fact that the cost of pumping would be materially decreased.

The recommendation passed.

The Market Committee recommended an additional expense of $190 for erecting a shed in the old meat market, which is being remodelled for other purposes.

Ald. Wallbridge wished to enter his protest against further expense to the already loss on the old meat market.

The recommendation was adopted.

The recommendation that a deputation be sent to interview Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann in reference to making Belleville a divisional point was discussed.

Ald. Wallbridge did not think it was necessary to send a deputation to interview Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann in reference to making Belleville a divisional point. The proper memorial might be forwarded to these gentlemen asking them to do so.

Ald. Robinson thought the appointment of a small deputation being sent to interview Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann.

Mayor Marsh said it was worth thousands of dollars to the city if the divisional point on the C.N.R. is located here. An expenditure of $25 at the most would be all the cost to the city. It was worth trying to secure this advantage to the city.

Ald. Wallbridge was of the opinion that the cost of a deputation would be more than $25. A deputation of two from the Council, one of whom was Ald. Robinson, the chairman of Railways and Industries Committee, would cost $65. The deputation sent to Toronto and was absent for two or three days. He moved in amendment that a properly worded resolution be forwarded to Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann in reference to the matter and a deputation be sent if those gentlemen requested that such be done.

Ald. Robinson said he handled no money on the trip to Toronto, as requested to by Ald. Wallbridge, but the Clerk did and there was no objection from the city on the deputation.

The amendment of Ald. Wallbridge passed.

TAXES COLLECTED.

Tax Collector Diamond presented the following statement, showing all the taxes collected on the various tax rolls since the last meeting of the Council.

Amount collected on 1907 tax roll	$0.03
Amount collected on 1908 tax roll	20.40
Amount collected on 1909 tax roll	307.56
Amount collected on 1910 tax roll	3,607.29
Balance due on 1908 tax roll	1,602.36
Balance due on 1909 tax roll	11,571.93

Ald. Fairfield desired to know what had been done in regard to collecting back taxes.

A motion was passed that the bailiff be given three days to return moneys collected instead of one, and the question of remuneration be left with the special tax committee.

C. N. R. BRIDGE.

A letter was read from Mr. Simmons, engineer of the Railway Commission, which stated the Commission had decided that 5 piers be built in the river, which would make the spans of the bridge 86 feet 6 inches instead of 66 feet apart.

Ald. Wallbridge thought it rather strange the Commission had decided this matter without giving the city an opportunity of being heard. There seemed to be something wrong somewhere. Could the Clerk give any information in reference to the matter?

The Clerk—"No. I was somewhat surprised myself, but I suppose that the Commission no doubt decided that it was right to have five piers. They were a deciding body."

Ald. Wallbridge contended that it was not in the city's interest to have the City Clerk act as Solicitor for the C.N.R. He (the speaker) was of the opinion that no man could serve two masters. This matter of the number of piers was most important to the citizens of the city.

City Clerk—"No. I can insinuate that I have drop anything wrong." I have tried to do work in this matter in the city's interest. I have passed a few titles for the C.N.R. and that is all I have done for the railway."

Ald. Thompson was of the opinion that there had been something done in this matter that the Council was not apprised of.

The Clerk was not aware upon what evidence the Railway Commission act. ed upon in recommending that five piers be erected in the river upon which the C.N.R. will place their bridge.

Ald. Robinson said Mr. Simmons, the railway engineer, had intimated that he would recommend that five piers be erected. As far as the city was concerned, he (the speaker) had no fault to find with it. If he made a few extra dollars, Mr. Mikel was an efficient Clerk and worked for the city's interest.

Ald. Wallbridge moved that the Council write the Railway Commission that the city has not had a hearing in regard to the bridge matter over the Moira River, and that it should be heard by them before any definite action is taken.

Ald. Carlaw said that it appeared that the Railway Commission had decided that five piers should be built and that the Council was in favor of five piers as against seven piers, which was a mistake.

Ald. Vermilyea protested on behalf of the citizens affected against the building of five piers in the river, and a petition to that effect was being circulated and largely signed by property owners.

The motion of Ald. Wallbridge was adopted.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

ENQUIRIES.

Ald. Thompson—"Can an Alderman contract a debt on behalf of the city without the consent of the Council?"

Ald. Robinson had done it to extent of $15 or $20 with a photographer for some views for a certain publication.

Ald. Robinson—"Has anything been done in the matter of changing names of certain streets?"

Mayor Marsh—"Make a motion to that effect."

Ald. Bogle asked that a fool of stagnant water in front of Mr. Mills' residence on Moira Street be drained.

Ald. Lott—"I will attend to same."

Ald. Thompson—"Why are certain city matters given to the press before they come before the Council?"

Mayor Marsh—"It should reach the Council first. He was not responsible for anything being given out."

Ald. Parks—"Will the indention in the sidewalk in front of the Bank of Commerce be repaired?"

Ald. Lott—"Not this season. It is too late, and it is not dangerous."

Mayor Marsh—"Will a few loads of gravel be placed on Evans Street near the railway track?"

Ald. Lott—"Yes."

INTRODUCTION OF BY-LAWS.

Ald. Vermilyea introduced four by-laws, namely:

A by-law to confirm an agreement between the city and County of Hastings re administration of justice account.

A by-law to confirm an agreement between Messrs. Thompson and Donohue for building a sewer on Pinnacle and Church streets.

A by-law to construct cement sidewalks in various parts of the city.

A by-law to construct certain lateral sewers in the city.

The Council went into Committee of the Whole on by-laws, Mr. Thompson in the chair. The by-laws were passed through their various stages and numbered respectively 1609, 1610, 1611 and 1612.

MOTIONS.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Under this head Ald. Wallace desired to know what the Building Inspecting Committee was doing.

Ald. Adams—Waiting until we can secure the services of the engineer.

Mayor Marsh stated that the tax roll of 1907 had been returned, as all taxes had been collected.

Ald. Fairfield—"When will the tenders for Front Street sewer be opened?"

Ald. Lott—"I will call a meeting of the Public Works Committee to attend to same."

Mayor Marsh suggested it would be a wise move to clean Front Street.

Ald. Lott—"Cheaper to let it freeze up than clean it up."

This concluded the business and the Council adjourned.

Good Form

"Informal formal invitations" is what one calls all those which come in a line written on a visiting card. The recipient takes for granted that such a card means too many guests to write notes to all, which in itself indicates a certain formality, and yet the occasion is not sufficiently formal to require engraved invitations.

Invitations to tea, cards or even to musicals may be sent out on visiting cards, and that there may be no mistake as to the entertainment provided it is designated on the card. The only exception to this is when one is merely bidden to afternoon. In that case only the day and hours are written on, the absence of any other information meaning simply that the hostess will b eat home at be time specified. Such cards are by all means the easiest and most satisfactory way of letting friends know one is at home for the winter, and one has a social afternoon at small expense. Nothing more than sandwiches, cakes and tea need be served, the table being in the drawing room or dining room, as suits the hostess best.

Informal dressing such an afternoon would have written on it, after a before the hostess' name:

Monday afternoon, October fifteenth, From four to seven.

Two lines are required for the hours and date.

If the hostess intends playing bridge or other card games she writes:

Monday afternoon, October fifteenth, Bridge at three o'clock.

Dinner Tables Smaller.

Smaller dinner tables are required this season, formerly because vegetable dishes are never placed thereon. When one lives with any degree of formality the roast also is handled by the maid, not being put, as used to be, before the head of the household.

Even when there is little or no pretense of service in the dining room vegetables are not supposed to be always in evidence, for the arrangement of a side dish, first in point, most wanted, in the center, serving as a hub around which other decorative pieces, useful as well, are placed. Odd or fancy silver forks and spoons are laid on the cover, although they are not required for the courses during the meal. Four tiny vases of flowers, one at each corner, four candlesticks, or even one, take room and are decorative, as they could not be were they side by side with large dishes of food.

Good Form For Housewife.

A good housekeeper is a useful member of society, but the mistress of the home must not carry her zeal so far as to make everybody around her worship on her, busy days. Where is the heart that has not felt a pang on account of the weekly washing, especially the Saturday baking, the Monday wash? Everything is turned topsy turvy, and temper dominates, and for even the breadwinner of the home to expect a square meal is regarded as a positive unkindness. So it is sometimes that a little rift is made in domestic felicity that is never bridged over. This is the time when the sweet tempered neighbor, who lets her housekeeping go to the dogs in order that she may pass pleasanter moments with her family, becomes an angel in contrast with the indefatigable worker next door. In housekeeping, as in everything else, when it comes to endangering domestic peace there is something that may be left undone. It will be the second housekeeping everybody in the home is to be driven wild let the queen of the hearthstone choose the better part—minister first to the hearts about her.

No doubt about an enamelled bed's hygienic merits; many people think so. Nor say about its being worth its price, but it bears the Good Form ban on the bootjack.

That Chinaware assures you of more than mere surface excellence. It is thoroughly vitrified all the way through. It warms well and will last. Its imitators will not work loose like.

In The Wide World Of Woman.

The girl who is popular is she who makes a study of the things that are better left unsaid. One need not be aggressive in speech to be a social failure.

Oh, those things that mean no actual harm, yet make us squirm!

Sometimes this happens when, as at fault, again a too hasty tongue, more often lack of fine feeling.

There is nothing, for instance, in announcing you have been invited to a certain luncheon or dinner, yet, when that announcement makes another person realize she is a left up, far better would it be to say nothing about it.

You may think it shows how popular is your guest to remark the number of things that are being given in her honor. Tell of this entertaining to a friend who feels she should do likewise, but is prevented by poverty. It is one of the things far better left unsaid.

If you are the hostess who has achieved at much trouble two fables of bridge or a simple luncheon, don't tell a friend's home guest, don't you feel when that friend announces that she was compelled to turn down a elaborate luncheon for your invitation that the information might with better taste have been suppressed?

Better unsaid is the gloomy greeting to an imaginative friend: "Don't you look! Have you been sick?"

To the average fat woman fat her fond girl friends are facetious on fresh dumplings, big hips and double chins. The handsome woman may not be sensitive, but the ninety-nine secretly resent being asked, "How much do you weigh now?" Or, "You look older than the last time we met?"

The Notes to Write.

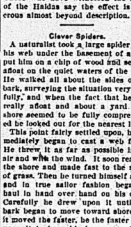
A girl need not be a brilliant writer to send out pleasing wedding notes. What is needed is sincere gratitude, gracefully but not grushingly expressed. Overpraise is almost as annoying as indifference.

Never be guilty of a set form; your friends are sure to compare notes and laugh over ready letter writer effects. Also to give the individual touch, to reproduce the fog, to spell it, make the sender realize that she is really being thanked, and, lo, lot, of green, it is customary to decide your fiance in thanking for a wedding present. Though the gift comes to the girl, it is actually for both and, should be so acknowledged.

It is also the custom to tell your friends you will be glad to have them come in and see your presents. This is particularly necessary when there is to be no reception and you are to be out of town. Set, however, be mentioned if you do not wish to be bothered with a run of visitors.

Many brides write notes to their own friends and work a substitute for the friends of their husbands. This is a great mistake, since strangers have often no other way to judge the bride than by her gifts and her notes.

The First Writing Pan.



The reed, which was the first pen in Egypt a sacred and intimate growing in many parts of the east. These reeds were cut in the manner of a quill and are still used in lands where the people write the Arabic characters. Nations which have adopted the Chinese characters use a camel's hair pencil, which is held perpendicularly in the hand. This would seem little adapted for rapid writing, yet the Chinese write their complicated characters by means of these implements with a rapidity seldom equaled by European writers.

The quill appears to have been first in use about the year 600. The word pen, meaning a quill, is not found in any work older than that period. Previous to that we find usually the Egyptian reed, or a reed. The quill is finer and more lasting than the pen, but is more often cutting for writing and months. It is said that Pliny wrote his work with a single pen and celebrated his achievement in this verse:

With one sole pen I wrote this book,
Made of good quill;
A pen it was when I it took;
A pen I leave it still.

A Queer Country.

An explorer recently returned from the middle of Asia, where he had visited a land that no other white man had ever seen. It was a strange land. There the weather was cold in winter and warm in summer, flowers grew in the spring and snow fell in January, leaves put forth on trees and were green, and water flowed downhill. The people that he has told about this strange land will not believe that he is telling the truth.—Chicago News.

PRINCESS FUSHIMA.

The pretty princess of the mikado's realm, Princess Fushima, and her husband, Prince Fushima, a second cousin of the emperor of Japan, are visiting in this country. The princess is a fascinating little specimen of femininity of the oriental grade dame

Cookery Points

Eggs, with ultra tinted complexion and in marked contrast to the confidence and assertiveness of the smart American woman. Paris was writ in large letters all over the costumes of the princess, and she wore them with a charming grace. But how commonplace seems even a Fortuny dress compared with her own Japanese robes!

Princess Fushima, like the empress of Japan, is in sympathy with the higher education movement and the uses which in Japan has lately made such wonderful strides. While in New York city the princess bought a number of American toys which she said would delight her three small sons.

The royal Japanese visitors are making a tour of the world by way of Europe and the United States.

After using a gas stove for cooking leave the oven open for a little while to allow the gas to escape. This will prevent sweating and rusting.

If chops and small steaks are placed in tin pie plates and set on top of the broiling grate they can be well cooked, and the fat that drips into the pans easier cleaned than the broiler grate would be.

Keep the range black by wringing out a sponge in hot water, rubbing in warm water and rubbing well with soap. Wash the stove while it is not warm. In can this way be kept black and free from grease spots.

Use the oven lighter for articles needing long, slow cooking—as, for example, tapioca and Indian puddings, bread, etc., etc. It will be found to answer best when used alone and burn much less gas.

Gas may be saved by remembering that matches are cheap and turning off the gas as soon as through using. need it—by turning off the gas a lit tle before the cooking is done and finishing with the heat already generated.

When anything you have been cooking has been heated to the boiling point, turn off the blaze low enough to keep the heat just at that point.

The Way It's Done Cuzzin.

The young girl who would be the greatest success should always go up to the house where she is going, and not have to stay and talk; she does not have to go far out of her way. But when she finds herself near the number of one of her friends or any older woman to whom she is known—particularly one of those hostesses who has been invited—she should go up and say, "Mamma told me I must call, so do?" as though she wanted to say it. Better not say it at all than say it grudgingly, says the Milwaukee. It is the way of doing it that counts, and the way is pointed out in the thought that is kindly and in the manner that is glad. At the foundation of such calls is the desire to cultivate acquaintance of self, a certain joyous belief and faith in the goodness of others, and the giving of that gift rather than sulkily taking all in. To sum it up, the young girl who thinks the world owes her a living and herself nobody is pretty sure to be rather solemn about herself.

The use of "soothing syrups" is much more general than is supposed. Ignorant mothers are the worst offenders in administering them, who go out to work and who resort to these preparations to quiet the children during their long absences. While it is pitiful enough to hear the wails of a neglected child, it is even more pitiful to see the stupefied child sleeping off a drug debauch provided by its own mother.

The children of the rich often suffer through the ignorance of their nurses, who wish to secure exemption from their care and so put them into an unnatural sleep. Nothing could instant discharge should follow attempt to a recommendation.

The Event.
By every sign we know,
By every working law,
By warm and tender greetings
From men you never saw,
By chaos who pour their woes
And misery in your ear,
By these we know the end
Will very soon be here.

The true, the wise and noble,
The giving, the pure and brave
Are running after office,
If you get it from these straight,
You wouldn't have believed it
Had it come from first hand.
That there was so much merit
In all the booming crowd.

Some men you wouldn't fancy
Or oiling for a job
Are running for positions
Just like a run of mill,
Had you the names been picking
To guess the party right
You'd let them know how noble
And fine it was to run.

But here they come in bunches.
The lean, the fat, the tall,
For something party wants,
They thought they heard a call.
In legions they are coming
They come from near and far
To offer you a friend.
But very rank cigar.

MIRACULOUS RESULTS IN DONYEGAN, C.B.

GIN PILLS Brought Relief

"I suffered untold misery even when under treatment from the best doctors for over ten months, and nothing seemed to do me any good or relieve my painful condition. My trouble was inflammation of Kidneys and Bladder.

I finally determined to go to the Victoria Hospital, Halifax ,for treatment.

Two days, however, before my intending departure, a neighbor called and happening to have a GIN PILL in his pocket, insisted on my taking it. I did so and six hours after taking it, the results and benefit I derived were simply nothing more or less than miraculous. Instead of going to the hospital I sent for a box of GIN PILLS with the result that I am cured quot. I recommend GIN PILLS to everyone suffering from Kidney Trouble."

Armed Mexicans Invading Texas

Governor Campbell Calls Out State Troops

Orders Organization of Posse To Head off Invaders

Serious Military Situation Confronts The State.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 16.—Governor Campbell will call out the State troops as a result of a long distance message from the sheriff of Edwards County, announcing that armed Mexicans are reported to be coming on Rock Springs, because of the recent lynching.

He got into communication with the State Rangers at once and ordered the sheriff to organize a posse to stop the Mexicans.

A SERIOUS SITUATION.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 16.—A serious military situation faces Texas to-day as the result of an anti-Mexican outbreak in Edwards County, and the alarming report that many of the members of the National Guard have threatened to disobey an order to assemble.

Members of the militia have been dissatisfied since the conviction of Sergeant Manley, in Dallas. Manley was charged with running his buzzwagon through a spectator while President Taft was there a year ago, and after receiving a severe sentence many of his comrades resigned. Friends of Manley declare that the whole body of State troops would quit.

CANADA WILL STAND FOR PEACE

Talk Before This Country, Says Dr. Macdonald Of Toronto

N. Y. CANADIAN CLUB

The Celebration Of The Centenary Of Peace Discussed At Banquet.

New York, Nov. 16.—International peace, with incidental reference to tariff matters, was the topic of interest at the annual banquet at the New York Canadian Club, among the guests was Hon. W. L. M. King of Ottawa.

Dr. J. A. Macdonald of Toronto, it was announced, was unable, owing to illness, to attend, but his address on "Canada in the Anglo-Saxon Fraternity," was read by J. F. MacKay, president of the late Toronto Canadian Club.

Hon. Mackenzie King could see only one danger in the celebration of the centenary of the peace movement—that some political or society would try to usurp it all and create friction. Already he had heard of several proposal for adequately commemorating the centenary. To his mind, things had been established to such an extent the U.S. had been enabled to amicably settle all disputes between them, and the moral, he believed, was that there was a warning of the war spirit throughout the world.

Hon. Adam Bell of Nova Scotia showed some independence. Canada, he said, desired to be friendly with the republic, but did not intend to surrender any of her rights to assert their interest at any time. An Anglo-Saxon alliance would ensure the peace of the world.

In Dr. Macdonald's address, he said:

"And to our friends in the United States we give full assurance that while we are prepared to recognize how much of what is best in our life we have in common with them, yet our nationalities are distinct, and the great lakes and the forty-ninth parallel will continue to divide the sovereignty of the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes. But there are still in the United States any who dream of impossible schemes would distur their dreams with words of truth and sincerity. Annexation is dead, and if it ever were a living issue in Canada your tariff laws would have killed it. We desire friendly relations and trade agreements. We will buy with you, sell with you, labor with you, walk with you, eat with you, drink with you, pray with you, but we will not join your republic or follow your flag.

"Canada's part is that of peace-keeper. She stands for peace, not for her own sake alone, but for the sake of the whole Anglo-Saxon ideal, and for the world's sake. She will not even consider the possibility of war in the Anglo-Saxon family. The military man who talks of arsenals and fortifications on the great lakes we mock at, and laugh out of court. We repudiate, as a guilty fallacy the notion that in peace we should prepare for war. Canada's maxim is: In peace prepare for more peace. Thus the spirit of peace along the international boundary is the pledge and the prelude of an enduring peace more vital, more helpful, more beneficent than all conventions and to the world than as yet has been dreamed.

London Paper Suggests Monarchial Revolution As A Result of Crisis

Daily News Creates Excitement In John Bull's Land

Inspired Through Fear Of Crown Allying Itself With Lords

Declares Such A Move Would Mean Real Revolution

Other Papers Make Similar Comment--King in London

(Intel'gencer Special.)

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Great Britain or, at any rate that part of Great Britain which reads the Morning News, got a severe shock this morning upon reading a passionate editorial suggesting monarchial revolution as a result of the present political crisis. The article says, in part: "In a survey of the critical possibilities of the political situation one is compelled to take into consideration the practically unexplained question that the Crown may ally itself with the House of Lords to prevent the legislating of the people's judgment. Such a move would mean monarchial revolution, added to peers' revolution, and in such a fact the gravest happenings that the country has met in centuries are to be expected."

This article is apparently inspired by a report that King George has refused the request to create enough Liberal peers to overwhelm the Tories in the Upper House and pass the Government legislation on the veto proposal.

While the Morning News is the only paper that came out quite so boldly this morning, there are others whose comment is along the same line. Lord Lansdowne, Unionist leader in the Lords, to-day demanded that the Government introduce in Parliament the plan Lansdowne has added to the difficulties of the position.

The King arrived in London today.

BROAD HINT OF SCANDAL IN RECENT TRIAL OF DR. CRIPPEN

Was Crippen Sacrificed That Ethel Clare Leneve Might Go Free? Newspaper Said To Have Supplied Funds.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—"A victim of legal bungling," or, worse still, "legal sacrifice," is the epitaph that might properly be placed on the tomb of Dr. H. H. Crippen, who he is hanged on November 23 for the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore, is the opinion of the big majority of English lawyers.

Nearly everyone who followed the famous murder case, is convinced today that somewhere along the line of the defence a mistake was made or created. People everywhere are asking: "Was Crippen sacrificed that Ethel Clare Leneve might go free?"

When Crippen was brought back to England from Canada, eminent English lawyers, who will bet on anything, were willing to wager five to one that he would be hanged. Crippen pen was found guilty in less than half an hour. It is hard to find a parallel for such a startling reversal and there was no development during the trial, according to legal experts, that adequately explains it.

Here are some of the important facts that are now being examined to support the charge of the "peculiar conduct" of Crippen's defence.

Solicitor Arthur Newton, who prepared Crippen's case, was well supplied with funds, believed to have been contributed by a leading news paper, and was well able to hire the best barristers in England to conduct the actual trial of the case. Instead of doing so, Newton went outside of London and selected A. A. Tobin, of Liverpool. Tobin is a provincial lawyer with a reputation made wholly in the bankruptcy court and police court. He was inadequated by the methods of prosecutor at Old Bailey as greatly as a small town lawyer in America would have been had he suddenly been thrown into an important case in New York City.

Solicitor Newton sent Barrister Tobin into court with a brief that was prepared, and the latter had but half mastered even the average case presented to him for the trial opened. When the trial of Miss Leneve, Crippen's fiancee, was called immediately following the trial of Crippen, Newton still in charge, employed F. E. Smith, one of the ablest practitioners at the English bar. Smith got Miss Leneve off with scarcely an effort.

What the public wants to know is why Newton engaged an untried barrister for Crippen, charged with murder, and the best counsel that could be obtained for Miss Leneve, charged with the less serious offence of being an accessory after the fact.

Newton prepared Miss Leneve's case for Smith just as he had Crippen's case for Tobin. And the very first thing that Smith did—on the strength of the case Newton furnished him—was to refer to Crippen, in the plainest of terms, as "a murderer beyond the shadow of question."

In doing all he does now for the fact that Newton probably thought he had done all he could for Crippen and might as well admit that he was a murderer, if by so doing he could benefit Miss Leneve. British lawyers say he acted peculiarly. Dr. Crippen's appeal was still pending and it was not certain but his own solicitor might be prejudicing his case.

When the Court of Criminal Appeal sat to decide on a date for hearing Crippen's appeal, Barrister Huntley Jenkins, Crippen's junior counsel, asked for all the time the bench could allow him to prepare his case because his senior, Tobin, "had unexpectedly withdrawn from the case." The Court was startled by this information.

"For a barrister to withdraw from a murder case," said Justice Darling, who was presiding, "after his client has been convicted and has an appeal still pending, is most unusual. I don't understand it."

And the very next day the London afternoon Times announced that Tobin was not only going to argue the Crippen appeal, but that he had never withdrawn from the case at all. What all this tangle meant no one has yet been able to learn, but it is considered significant in connection with the other peculiar features of the case.

But one thing is clear, there was trouble of some sort among Crippen's defenders and that is perhaps most damaging to the unfortunate convicted doctor's interests.

GOV'T TO BUILD NORTHERN ROAD

Ottawa Will Construct And Finance Hudson Bay Line

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

Government Will Also Undertake Construction of Docks.

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—It is officially announced that the Hudson Bay Railway is to be built and financed by the Government. It will be about 400 miles long, from a point on the Saskatchewan River (The Pas), near the south of Pasuka and Carrot Rivers, through the valley of the Nelson River to York Factory. The Nelson River will supply abundant cheap hydro-electric power.

The Canadian Northern is already built to the Pas, and the G.T.P. have announced that they will also reach it from some point on their system. But the Government will not give control of the road to either of these companies. It says in what is an official statement:

"The most ample provision has been made for financing the Hudson Bay Railway through its period of construction, and as one line is all that is necessary, it will be in the interest of all parties, including the people of Canada, to have but one line, which is to be constructed directly or indirectly by the Government."

CHIEF POINT OF THE CROWN ASSAILED

Defence In Blondin Trial Would Throw Out Statement

NOT ADMISSIBLE

Miss Wood Gave Dr. Empey Morphia Just Before He Accused.

L'Original, Ont., Nov. 16.—An endeavor by the defence to have the deposition statement of Dr. W. A. Empey, of Vars, with whose murder Albert Blondin of the same place is charged, declared inadmissible at evidence, was the chief point in the trial of the latter, which opened here yesterday morning before Justice Britton of Toronto. The statement was laid over till to-day for further argument as to its legality.

E. Meredith, K.C., for the prosecution, in addressing the jury, gave an indication of the course the crown's case would take when he emphasized the fact that the prisoner's wife was working at Dr. Empey's place on the day the doctor was shot, and that this was the first time she had been there for a year and a half. He laid great stress on the doctor's dying statement in which he said that Blondin had entered, fired, turned the gun and fired at him, and that it was not an accident.

Evidence was then given by Dr. McDougal of Russell, one of the medical attendants of the deceased, and Coroner Boyle of Casselman, the first of which said that Dr. Empey had been clear in mind previous to his death.

That Blondin had summoned Dr. Empey, saying that he was ill, and that he was cleaning his gun before the doctor came, was stated by Louis Grosloude, son-in-law of the defendant. After hearing a shot upstairs, he assisted Dr. Empey, wounded, from the house and then fled with his own and the prisoner's family, as he considered the killer was crazy.

Dr. Empey had made a verbal statement to the same effect to Rev. Ian Cormack, Presbyterian minister, stated the latter when called. He gave evidence, which was supported by Mr. and Mrs. L. Empey, in whose house Dr. Empey died, by Miss Lindsay, a friend, and by Miss Mary Empey, sister, to the effect that Dr. Empey had caused Miss Wood to administer two hypodermic doses of morphine and one of strychnine shortly before making his last statement to the shooting.

The question of the admissibility of this statement was then deferred till to-day on the objection of Mr. Lemieux, for the defendant, though the defence later, almost nullified their partial success, when Mr. Lemieux questioned a statement made by Dr. Empey in his dying declaration, although, if this statement were proven incorrect, it might affect the correctness of the whole declaration of Dr. Empey. It would also mean the admission of the latter as evidence, so the matter was let drop.

BLONDIN ON THE STAND

(Intelligencer Special.)

L'ORIGINAL, Ont., Nov. 16.—That he killed Doctor Empey, accidentally, as he was changing his gun when the doctor came to see him. This was the story tearfully and pathetically told by aged Arthur Blondin, on trial for murder, when he was called to the witness box in his own defence this morning. Blondon said the gun was discharged from some unaccountable reason, the prisoner declaring regarding his previous confession was admitted. It is plain that the jury is showing a great deal of sympathy for the aged prisoner.

WHITE GIRL PERIL IS GREAT IN EAST

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 16.—That the white girl is a greater peril to the Orient than the "Yellow Peril" is to the Occident, and while the Chinese opium den has invaded our land, no less deadly poison is the alcohol that has invaded China, declared Mrs. Katharine Lent Stevenson, State President of the W. C. T. U. of Massachusetts, to the national convention. Mrs. Stevenson based her remarks on what she had observed on her recent tour of the world.

THE CHRISTYS HAVE AGREED TO DISAGREE

ZANESVILLE, O., Nov. 16.—In spite of the hopes of relatives that a settlement could be effected between the two people, there is to be no reconciliation between Howard Chandler Christy, artist and illustrator, and his wife, Mrs. Maybelle Christy. Mr. Christy was seen at his home at Duncan Falls, near Zanesville, and asked when his wife was coming back home to live.

"As far as I know, and from the present indications, she will never return to Duncan Falls," said the artist.

"I will not join her in New York, nor will our daughter, Natalie."

Fire Causes Considerable Excitement--Report of Casualties

MONTREAL, Nov. 16.—Fire, fanned by a strong wind, destroyed the Sameur window and door factory on Sanguinet Street at seven o'clock this morning, and swept a whole block of more than a dozen houses, turning fifteen families out on the street in scanty attire. The damage is about $200,000. Large stocks of grained lumber and household furniture were burned. There was great excitement during the progress of the fire. It was reported that several were burned to death, but it is not known definitely if anybody is missing.

Pictures And Plays

Not long ago a newspaper man made this remark:—"If I did not publish stories of murder and suicide and divorce and the like, a certain element would cease to read my paper." He spoke the truth. And the opinion of a man who conducts a nickel show is not dissimilar to that of the editor. If he tabooed all films of the "wild and woolly west" or "villain still pursued" types, a certain element would give show where these types were presented the preference. As long as the authorities permit demoralizing films to be shown the nickel theatre man will feel compelled to show them. The man who buys a newspaper needn't read the stories which are distasteful to him, but the man who pays his nickel or dime to see a moving picture show feels constrained to see the whole programme, whether he likes part of it or not.

That some of the pictures work harm, particularly among the young, few will dispute. The need of a censor in every city is apparent. But it is by no means an easy task to obtain one with the necessary qualifications. The moving picture man might find himself placed at the mercy of a censor whose judgment was faulty or whose character was unstable. And what a fine opportunity there would be for grafting.

Perhaps a national law covering the whole question of theatre productions would be in order. There are almost as many pernicious speaking plays presented as moving picture plays. A well defined law might solve the problem. The production of speaking and picture plays depicting the commission of a crime, for instance, should be prohibited. Likewise, the production of plays containing such characters as drunkards or immoral persons or diseases. The law, if enacted fully and judiciously thought out, would be found to be workable. With such a law in force both the nickel theatre and higher priced place of amusement would be elevated to a standard which no one could take exception to.

The situation, as it stands to-day, is a deplorable one, both as regards the production of picture plays and the production of speaking plays. While such film producers as the Edison, Biograph and Imp concerns are striving to elevate the moving picture business, other companies of lesser magnitude and responsibility are keeping it down by producing a line of blood and thunder which has the traditional dime novel beaten to a frazzle.

ECLIPSE OF MOON

There will be a total eclipse of the moon to-day. The cause will be the moon getting so nearly in line with the centre of the earth, and the sun, as to pass into the great shadows of the earth. The first contact of the moon with the shadow will be at 5.45 p.m., and it will be entirely within at 6.55. At 7.47 it will begin to pass out so that it will be within the shadow for fifty-two minutes, being all way at 7.21. This eclipse comes at a convenient time for observation and will be well worth watching, but will be seen to be reddish, or copper-colored.

FASHIONABLE WEDDING HERE THIS MORNING

Miss Wardrope United In Marriage To Major Little of Port Arthur—Ceremony Takes Place In St. Andrews Church In The Presence of Many.

A pretty wedding took place in St. Andrew's church this afternoon at half past two o'clock, when Miss Ethel Marguerite Wardrope, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wardrope, of this city, was united in marriage to Major J. A. Little, of Port Arthur, Ont. The church was decorated with palms and white chrysanthemums.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of white Liberty satin, trimmed with rose point lace. She wore a wreath of orange blossoms and a tulle veil and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid, Miss Ruth Wardrope, sister of the bride, wore a gown of maize satin, with an overdress of lace and trimmings of gold, and a black velvet picture hat. She carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Miss Dorothy Wardrope, youngest sister of the bride, who was flower girl, wore a white gown and black beaver hat and carried a basket of white carnations. Mr. George Little, brother of the groom, acted as best man. The four ushers were Edward Theogarth and Mr. Shanley Rutan, Port Arthur; Mr. Charles Grier, Montreal, and Mr. Tannehill, manager of the Bank of Montreal of this city.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Wardrope, grandfather of the bride, assisted by Rev. A. S. Kerr, pastor of St. Andrew's Church. While the register was being signed Miss Mansel Stork sang very sweetly and was accompanied on the organ by Miss Vera Riggs.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was daintily decorated with palms, white chrysanthemums and smilax. Mr. and Mrs. Little, who will reside in Port Arthur, left for Toronto on the 5.45 train, the bride travelling in a seal coat, mink hat and furs, the gift of the groom.

The groom presented the bridesmaid with a pearl pendant, the flower girl with a pearl crescent, the four ushers with tie pins, horseshoes of whole pearls.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Grier, Montreal; Mrs. (Dr.) Douglas Corsan, Fernie, B.C.; Miss Jean Corsan, Mr. and Mrs. Fielding, Toronto; Miss Forbes, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Wardrope, Hamilton; Mrs. Hamlin, Mr. Rupert Hamlin, Oshawa; Miss Mc-Allister, Guelph; Miss McMahon, Kingston; Mr. and Mrs. Bywater, Trenton; Mrs. Little, Trenton; Miss Young, Trenton, and others.

Living Example of Missionary Effort

Rev. G. S. Murata of Japan Delivers Interesting Lecture In Tabernacle Church—Dwells on Work Of Missionaries In His Country.

Rev. G. S. Murata, who addressed the Convention of the Belleville District League at the Tabernacle church last evening, is a living example of the results of Methodist missionary efforts in Japan. Born in the northern part of Japan, of Buddhist parents, the well-to-do class, he is a typical specimen of the vigorous, patriotic little brown men who went over to Japan and overcame the fact that he had a hand himself in tanning the Russian Bear, and refers very modestly to his wounded knee and broken head, and his long term in the hospital. On leaving the hospital he quit the army of Japan, and started active service in the larger army of the Cross of Christ.

Mr. Murata is a very interesting personality. He is a fluent speaker in his own language, has the winning smile and ready gesture of the Eastern races. He has been in Canada only four weeks, but has given seven-six months on the Pacific coast in the States, and a number of addresses. His English is very broken, but is so much the more attractive.

He referred to the fact that he is the fruit of seed sown by the Methodist missionaries in Japan, that he had baptized the Canadian Methodist missionary, Rev. Mr. Mackenzie. He reviewed briefly the history of modern Japan, and the time Commodore Perry of the United States navy came knocking at the door of Japan and forced them to open to the world over sixty years ago. At first Japan's attitude was "our civilization is better than yours; we will keep it and you keep yours," but by and by they saw good things in the civilization of one nation after another, and the effort to assimilate them all has been given them the atmosphere of Missionary work started in Japan about 50 years ago. At first the work was fruitless, and the missionaries had to suffer much and be very patient, but now there are 70,000 christians. The Methodist church is well organized, has a native Bishop, recently elected Bishop Tonda, and the church is doing well. Methodism seems to be the best adapted of all the denominations for Japan. Its organization, government, its policy and principles seem best suited to Japanese requirements, and he trusts that Methodism will soon be the strongest denomination in Japan. The work is now being carried on mostly among the students and the educated classes.

For five years Mr. Murata was a missionary from Japan to the Koreans, in the city of Pingyang in northern Korea, a "small city" of 200,000 population. He graphically told how Korea has been deprived of her self-government, and of her natural resources, till it now has practically for a Korean to get any of the splendid smokeless coal from the Korean mines. Deprived of all worldly things, they are turning to things spiritual, and he told of a wonderful revival in Korea, and of the real ambition of the Korean church to get ten per cent. of the population converted, and to be a reconstructive factor in that nation, the first of the Eastern nations to win Christ's name.

The results in Korea have been so marvellous that Japan wants the same. There is no vital power in Confucianism or Buddhism to meet christian morality or philosophy caught away in Japan. What they need is the Holy Spirit. The Japanese can fight the Russians, but they cannot fight Satan without the aid of divine power, and that is what they want so Japan may become a christian nation, and through her China and India may also become christian nations. In this generation all doors are open wide, and inviting christianity, and Mr. Murata closed with a strong appeal to Canadian christians to take advantage of the opportunity.

FRONT ST. PAVEMENT

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—In "public improvements," there is no question but that the one now under consideration, viz., permanent paving of Front Street, is of the most far-reaching importance, and when completed will add more to the general appearance of the city than any public work done here in recent years.

For 65 years that I have been a resident of Belleville, it has been the one subject that has enlisted my sympathy, and I have at different times written to the press regarding it, and at one time submitted figures to the City Council and Board of Trade re the cost of doing the street from the upper bridge to the Corby office building, thirty-two thousand dollars being amount of estimate given at that time, which figure is said to be very little astray. (Block asphalt material figured upon.)

That Front Street should have been permanently paved thirty-five or forty years ago, everybody will be ready to admit, and if it had then been done, I firmly believe there would have been double the population in Belleville to-day. The street has been a standing disgrace, that no other place in Canada, occupying the same position commercially and educationally, would have tolerated all these years. Visitors, tourists and commercial men have frowned at us, and one shuff that we were "some pumpkins" till we have been ashamed to look a barrel of "Lehigh Cement" in the face and have almost denied belonging to this city.

The foregoing is but an introduction to the main issue. "Who will have to pay the fiddler?" Are the already over-burdened merchants along Front Street to stand the big end of the burden, or will it be an arrangement that every foot of real estate within the city limits shall stand its legitimate share of the cost.

There is no argument against the proposition that a well paved and well kept roadway through this city will do more, and do it quicker, toward placing Belleville in its proper class than any other dozen improvements that could be added, and if that be the case, and the manifold benefits accruing will be enjoyed by every man, woman and child in the community, then why should not every property owner be willing to pay their share of the cost?

I am leaving the city in the near future to make my home in Toronto, so the improvement is coming too late for me to enjoy, but I could not resist giving the question one more whirl and trust the effort may tend to encourage all loyal citizens to unitedly assist in the cost of the work.

Yours respectfully,

T. Pe BROWN.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—May I be permitted to quote from Mr. T. P. Brown's most excellent letter a few words? Speaking of the pavement, as if it was an accomplished fact, he says: "The manifold benefits accruing will be enjoyed by every man, woman and child in the community, then why should not every property owner be willing to pay their share of the cost?" I have pointed out the manifest unfairness of taxing the property owners north of the avenue with precisely the same sum per foot that the owners of the commercial centre of Front Street (the business heart of the city) are required to pay. Walk from Victoria avenue south to the upper bridge and see the large number of small buildings on trifling value, paying necessarily small rents, and then think of the grievous burden which this bylaw would place upon the already overburdened taxpayers owning such properties.

But the above is only one of many arguments against the by-law. I understand there is a main sewer running north only as far as Mr. St. Charles' premises. Beyond this there appears to be no public sewer. Is it just to tax these properties with the same basis as the other portions of Front Street which have a sewer, was obliged, in order to get an outlet from one of these buildings, to construct a sewer at a cost of one hundred dollars. Others had to do larger sums. Then what a spectacle does Front Street present almost constantly and in every month of the year, notably in winter and in spring? Great excavations, frequently to the centre of the street from the sidewalks, horrible to look at, dangerous to vehicles. There is a huge trench dug for the water works. Another for the gas pipes. Another for the sewer. Constantly, during the freezing weather, water pipes freeze, gas pipes leak, huge fires have to be built to thaw the frozen earth, and immense holes dug to reach and repair the pipes. Put down the pavement as these matters are at the present time, and before its completion you will find the new pavement torn up here and there, and these excavations made. In order to have a pavement (which, all desire), I submit that the water and gas pipes should be laid in the same trench as the sewer, with manholes, which would enable men to enter and repair the pipes without tearing up and destroying the new pavement. In Front Street in any proper condition at the present time, to lay such a pavement? I am as much in favor of a pavement properly laid upon a fair basis as any one public, but I am sure every citizen must agree with me that the only wise course to be taken to give a permanent pavement, and one which will be a "thing of beauty" and "a joy forever" would be to prepare the foundation properly in such a manner that when the pavement is completed it will remain complete and perfect, save necessary repairs, for years of hard wear. It is said the pavement would last twenty years. Assume that this bylaw is correct and $20,000 is paid in twenty years. Who obtains this $20,000? Is it not the entire body of citizens? Then what is the object of these unfortunate property owners who contribute about fifty per cent. of the entire cost by the 40 cents per foot tax and their proportion of the 60 cents general tax? Is it equitable and just to force these owners to lose such a large amount, and the whole city and all the citizens to be the gainers by this extortion?

Fair play is a jewel, and all that is asked is fair play.

Bribery By Public Works

When E. M. Macdonald, M.P., served notice on the city of Lethbridge that it would get no coast defence until it voted Liebral he was simply following the regular Liberal plan of bullying constituencies by promising unnecessary public works if they vote Liberal and threatening to withhold needed public works if they vote Conservative. Here, for example, is the sort of campaign which the Liberals ran in Halifax against Mr. R. L. Borden and his colleague, Mr. Crosby:

Promise of bringing the Grand Trunk Pacific terminal to Halifax; promise that the Canadian Pacific would come to Halifax; promise of a dry dock; promise of a steel bridge across the narrows; a steamboat pier at Dartmouth; the Halifax and Musquodoboit line all the way. In addition it was urged that the Government had insurred an expenditure of 25,000,000 on that port; that it had built a $250,000 customs house; that it had spent $200,000 in improving the harbor; that it had spent $100,000 on the coast of Halifax County; that it had reopened the dockyard; that it had manned the fleet with Canadian troops.

Then when Halifax voted Conservative the Liberal newspapers served notice that the Nova Scotia constituencies which had dared to vote Conservative must expect punishment. The Halifax Chronicle said on the day after the election:—"In this election all the most important public interests that Liberals in Halifax have been struggling for for years, and that they es have pretended to desire, were hanging within our reach. The Government policy meant the beginning of a new era for the port of Halifax. . . . And now, just at the critical time, when these things were within our grasp, our own people, misled by a treacherous Tory newspaper and by unpatriotic Tory leaders, have by their votes thrown our great opportunity to the winds." And later on: "If the Government takes the people of Halifax at their word, who will have cause to complain? And again: "They have declared by their votes that they do not want these things, and if the Government is disposed to take them at their word, and extend these favors to other constituencies and other ports which have been loyal to their interests, the Tories of Halifax and their dupes will have themselves to blame."

The Chronicle said in the same issue: "Halifax has, if the majority of the electors mean anything, declared that it does not want to share in the great traffic of the Dominion, and does not want the N.T.R. and the All-Red Line. Certainly it will never get either if the election of Borden and Crosby. Let there be no mistake about that.

After having had time for reflection, the Chronicle returned to the subject as follows: "Halifax, Colchester and Cumberland, through which the national highway runs, have declared against the All-Red national ports, and against the Liberal Government take heed of these emphatic expressions of opinion, go on."

for they are unmistakable. . . . Let, then, our statesmen like good constitutional governors review their plans, and not remodel them as not to encroach on forbidden ground. Fortunately there were other constituencies which were not punished, and which will make room, so that the splendid structure may not lose its symmetry, nor be shorn of its usefulness to Canada. With these exceptions, so far as these Maritime Provinces are concerned, let the good work

SQUARE DEAL FOR CYRUS II.

G. Hope Jones' Fifteen Cent Lecture at Huckleberry Hill Shows That There Is a Good Side to All Badness—Historical Blemishes Toned Down.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

MY DEAR FRIENDS—After a hard tramp over the railroad ties of twenty-two miles I have reached Huckleberry Hill and am standing before you and observing that among the nineteen people in the hall eight are deadheads. That fact will make no difference with my lecture, however, the subject of which is, "The Good Side of Badness." Before I have finished I hope to make you feel more tolerant toward certain people whose memories have been jumped on with both feet for several generations past.

"It has cost me much time and money to gather my statistics and see them properly vouched for, but the price of admission to my lectures has remained at the old figure of 15 cents. That is the cost of admission to any hall to see a trained dog, and, compared to the performance of a trained dog, my lecture is as corn to the husks. Q. Hope Jones belongs to no trust, and because he has got a good thing he is not going to be selfish about it.

"For hundreds of years, my friends, the name of Nero has been held up to scorn and detestation because he killed when Rome was hurling and because he had a little way of slaughtering from 5,000 to 10,000 prisoners in a batch to any rations. Nero also had a trick of wiping out towns and despatching farming communities, and we have read of his putting out eyes and shaving off toes and fingers. Historians have gone at it and made out that he was never so happy as when slicing up orphans or sticking old women full of pins.

"We are down on Nero because we have heard but one side of his character. It's just another case of Standard and Oil brought down to date. When Mr. Rockefeller sets the price of kerosene a gallon we are down on him; when he gives $1,000,000 to bent the hookworm we haven't a word of praise.

The Good That Was in Nero.

"Who was Nero? Has any man or woman in Huckleberry Hill asked the question? No. You have gone right along not carling a durn who or what he was, but ready to believe the worst of him. As a kid Nero was one of the best of the bunch. A little sugar tied up in an old rag contented him. As a youth he was never charged with stealing eggs or stoning the schoolhouse windows. He drew water for the washing, and he mowed the lawn, and he took all the prizes in Sunday school. Industrious, honest and truthful, he was a living example to be pointed out to others. I have been told that Nero and I are alike in this respect.

"Such was the probity of the young man when he reached his majority that you might have searched his record from top to bottom without coming across the photo of a chorus girl or a love letter from the cashier of a restaurant. This evidence alone ought to be sufficient to satisfy you as to what sort of a young man he was, but it isn't always been rigidly suppressed by historians.

"Nero was twenty-three years old when the blow fell—that is, he fell in love with a female trainer of lions. We have all been there. The thing is bound to happen. We have done just as Nero did when the chance came. That rajiet hailed young man on the back next will do it. I think Nero would have done better to fall in love with a stenographer, but I'm not going to criticise. As it turned out, the female trainer was after his cash and didn't care a tusk for him. If that young woman had not toyed with Nero's heart and busted his bank account he would have married happily and been taken on as keeper of the elephant and driver of the band wagon. But she toyed, and when he discovered that she was toying he became a terror on wheels. A bird has told that I am like Nero about that. Let a woman toy with my heart and I should become a raging lion. He went in to slam things around from that date on. Home suffered. The enemy suffered. He had a mandering to wipe things off the face of the earth. He had been thrown down, and thrown hard, and he hadn't the sand to bid his aching heart cease to ache and look around for another mash.

"Let us not be too hard on Nero. Give him a show. Nade your boy tables after him. Ask yourselves if you wouldn't have done the same in his place.

Lucrezia Borgia Not All Bad.

"And take notice how history has picked up Lucrezia Borgia and held her up as the monster of that age. History has committed a great wrong. I started out on Lucrezia's trail feeling that hanging was too good for her, but as I traced her career step by step I had to leave prejudice behind. As a child she wouldn't hurt a fly. The sight of a bullfrog picking up a cat by the neck would have thrown her into convulsions.

"As a girl Miss Lucrezia was considerate of other people's feelings to a wonderful degree. Had a young man with a pimple on his nose been courting her she would have died before asking him why he didn't have it shaved off. She was a favorite in society. She always sat down on the edge of a chair and folded her hands and replied "Yes, ma'am," and "No, ma'am," and she knew nothing whatever about flirtation.

"It was only when Miss Lu. R. has become a young woman and discovering her she would have died before asking him why he didn't have it shaved off. She was a favorite in society. She always sat down on the edge of a chair and folded her hands and replied "Yes, ma'am," and "No, ma'am," and she knew nothing whatever about flirtation.

A REMARKABLE NOTE.

George Cruikshank's Bank Bill Was the Beginning of Penal Reforms.

It was no banking corporation, but an artist, that issued what was perhaps the most remarkable banknote ever put out, and this artist was no other than George Cruikshank. The issuance of this note was coincident with the beginning of the last century, at a time when the penalties for crime in England were excessively harsh. About three hundred offences were punishable by death, these ranging from murder to the theft of a piece of cloth or the passing of a counterfeit one pound note. Hanging was, therefore, so common that to witness an execution was among the most popular forms of amusement. All windows that commanded a view of Newgate or Tyburn were let at high prices, and parties were made up among people in the country to go to see a hanging.

Now it chanced one day, in the year 1818, that George Cruikshank was passing Newgate when a great crowd was gathered before it. His curiosity was excited, and he went forward and saw the executions of several men and women. Horrified at the spectacle, he inquired as to the crimes committed by the unfortunates and learned that the women were being hanged for passing one-pound notes. He learned, too, that the poor creatures had passed them in ignorance, being the dupes of men who sent them to buy some trifle and return the change.

Cruikshank went home and, moved by pity and shame, sketched a grotesque caricature of a banknote. He called it a bank-restriction note—not to be imitated, says a writer in Harper's Weekly.

On it he represented a place of execution with a row of criminals hanging by the neck. The spaces were filled in with hitters and manacles. There was a figure of Britannia devouring her children, and around it were transports bearing to Australia the lucky or unlucky ones who had escaped death. In place of the well-known signature of Abraham Newland was that of "Mr. Ketch."

This note was seen by Cruikshank's publisher, Hone, who begged it for publication. So Cruikshank sketched the note and gave it to Hone, who exhibited it for sale in his window with startling effect. Crowds gathered round and purchased so eagerly that the issue was soon exhausted. Cruikshank was kept hard at work making more etchings, and the crowds grew so great that the street was blocked and the mayor had to send soldiers to clear it. Hone realized three thousand five hundred dollars in a few days.

But the effect in other directions was still more startling. The bank directors were furious. They had met with trouble from the prison reformer, Elizabeth Fry, for they seemed to have defeated her. Here, however, was an adversary of a different stamp than they had ever met—a prescience nor crush. They held a meeting and stopped the issue of one pound notes, a measure which had a steadily effect in diminishing the number of hangings at Newgate. Soon afterwards an indignant public compelled Parliament to make juster laws.

Churches In Colonial Days.

The New England churches in colonial days were all unheated, for Miss Earle's book on "Home Life in Colonial Days," we find that all these places of worship had stoves until the middle of the century. The chill of the damp places, never relieved from autumn to spring and closed and dark throughout the week, was hard for every one to bear. In some of the built sometimes because for bags made of wolf skins were carried to the seats, and in the larger church attendants thrust their hands into them. Dogs, too, were permitted to enter the meeting house and lie on their master's feet. Dog whippers or dog pelters were in full control or kept them when they became unruly or unbearable.

Old-Time Gambling.

The gambling of to-day is a mild affair compared with the extent reached in Colonial days, when it was never again see the days when Gen. Stark won a fortune of $100,000 at whist, chiefly by dint of keeping sober. And high play, it must never be forgotten, is a relative term. When Lord Stavedale gained $55,000 by a single game at hazard he only cowent was that if he had been playing "deep" he might have won millions. When the dimensions of modern wealth are taken into account, the wildest excesses ever witnessed at the card table would have a timid and parsimonious aspect to the bucks of the regency.—London Saturday Review.

A Lesson In Tracking.

Mr. E. P. Stebbing gives in his "Jungle By-ways In India" an interesting instance of the wonderful tracking powers of the natives: "One hot day we were on a barren, rocky hillside of rock. I asked Bishu, the shikari, how he could possibly say that a bison had gone over that way. He pointed to a small piece of stone, and picked it up and could just see that it was slightly darker on the face which had uppermost. I had been turned over by the bison's hoof shortly before."

A Question.

Vera (eight years old)—What does transatlantic mean, mother? Mother—It means to cross the Atlantic, of course; but you mustn't bother me, Vera—Does it? Vera—I always mean to.—Mother —I suppose it does. Now, if you don't stop bothering me with your questions I shall send you right to bed.—Vera (after a few minutes' silence)—They does transparent mean a cross parent?

A Record Catch.

The largest and most valuable catch of herrings ever made this season has been landed at Scarborough by the Jeannie Ell, of Arbroath, which made a haul of a few miles off Robin Hood's Bay, of 120,000 herrings, that were sold for $1,000.

High Notes.

A reporter once said to Caruso: "What is your price per night?" "Per night?" Caruso chuckled. "You mean per note."

Rescued From Death.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 16.—Rescued from a horrible death last night, an unknown man owes his life to immigration Inspector Prentice. He was alighting from a car at the foot of Simcoe street. Prentice saw the man lying within a foot of the brink of the precipice, having a sheer drop of over 150 feet to the rocks at the water's edge.

As Prentice watched the man, the latter began rolling towards the precipice's brink. Rushing the iron railing, which runs along the river bank, Prentice caught the man's coat in time to save him from rolling to instant, horrible death.

The man was taken to police headquarters, and was in a stupor, the police say, from drink, unable to speak. The only thing found on him that would give a clue to his identity was the return portion of a ticket from this city to Hamilton.

Disastrous Experiment.

Fort Monroe, Va., Nov. 16.—In an experiment to test the effect of an unconfined explosion of high explosive nitro-glycerine, the monitor Puritan was badly damaged in Hampton Roads yesterday, after two charges of 200 pounds each had exploded, one against her after turret, and the other against her armor bell.

In a sinking condition the vessel was rushed to the Norfolk navy yard.

The first detonation and shock was plainly felt in Portsmouth, ten miles away. An hour later, with less shock apparently, another charge was exploded against the armor bell along the waterline of the ship.

The result of the test will have a bearing on the construction of future warships.

Car Workers Strike.

Amherst, N.S., Nov. 16.—One hundred men in the erecting shop of the Canada Car Co. went on a strike on account of a reduction in the wage schedule. The men are unorganized and have no union behind them, and, if they do not resume work this week, their places will be probably filled at once.

The company contends that the wages paid were unreasonably high. Only piecemakers are involved in this strike.

VETO GOES TO LORDS

Mr. Asquith Accedes Lord Lansdowne's Request.

British Premier Will Send His Bill to Upper House on Condition That No Dilatory Tactics Are Employed —Austen Chamberlain to Place Unionist Platform Before Supporters at Glasgow.

London, Nov. 16.—A general election before Christmas is a practical certainty, but the steps whereby this will be brought about are still unknown. The King is evidently taking an active part in the crisis, and his Majesty's influence may have an important bearing on the situation.

It was announced last night that the Government will accede to Lord Lansdowne's demand to have the veto bill submitted to the House of Lords, on condition that no dilatory tactics are employed for the mere purpose of gaining time. As it cannot be supposed that the Lords would accept the bill, this move is not likely to have much effect on the general situation.

Premier Asquith's official statement will not be presented to Parliament until it is delivered to Mr. Balfour, who has an engagement to address an important political meeting at Nottingham on Thursday.

An indication of the Unionist policy in connection with the abolition of the veto resolution which Austen Chamberlain, after a consultation with Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne, will submit to the Unionist conference at Glasgow on Nov. 23. These resolutions contemplate that the possession of a peerage should no longer of itself carry the right to sit in the House of Lords, and welcome any reasonable proposal which will increase the efficiency of the House of Lords by the addition of life peers, or representatives elected for a term of years from those outside the peerage. At the same time the resolutions maintain that when the two Houses disagree on vital issues, it is the people alone who have the right to decide between them.

Is It a Bluff?

London, Nov. 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the House of Lords Monday evening Lord Rosebery created a surprise by calling upon the Government to submit the Parliament bill for the decision of Parliament without delay. This will add to the difficulties of the Cabinet, which to-day, Ministers are flying about that the House of Lords is ready to accept the Government's plan, with modifications, but in several quarters, especially in the Ministerial ranks, it is described as a mere bluff, or at most an attempt to postpone the evil hour, although the bill has been read once in the Commons.

Lord Rosebery enquired what has become of the Government's plan in form of the Upper House. Lord Crewe promised to make a statement to-day.

After consultation with Mr. Balfour, Lord Lansdowne's statement in the House of Lords that: "Some of us are not without hope that, although the particular conference has been unproductive of a definite conclusion, another conference may be held which will be more successful."

The News hints plainly that Asquith is experiencing difficulty in obtaining from the crown guarantees that his veto policy would be rendered effective if the Ministerialists are returned to power.

The principal Liberal agents are practically unanimous for an immediate fight.

A Child Suicide.

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—Grieving over the death of her mother who died when she was six years old, ten year-old Harriet Owens yesterday ended her life with her father's revolver. Her body was discovered lying beside a wreath, which had been taken from the coffin of her mother.

Lying nearby was a childish screwl, which said: "Good-by, papa. I am going to join mother, and I hope that God will forgive me."

Fumes Suffocated Him.

Trenton, Ont., Nov. 16.—George Blakeley, a man about 35 years old, was found dead yesterday morning in the Gilbert House sheds. It seems he went into the sheds about 12 or 1 o'clock, and going into a stall in which the hostler uses, he lit a small oil stove, sat down and went to sleep. There was very little oil in the stove, and the fumes from the stove suffocated him.

These volumes are well worth the perusal of any practitioner, and should be read by every ophthalmologist. (Could has been accused of holding-riding and cranking for a number of prominent oculists, but he has defended his case so ably that it seems to me the profession of the United States, and the world, for that matter, must consider seriously what he has had to say.

It is from the inspiration derived from reading Gould's "Biographic Clinics" that I am impelled to write this paper, in order to pass on some of the benefits which I have derived therefrom.

In considering the physiology of vision it may be well to conceive of the eye as a rolongation of the optic tracts of the brain, associated with specially developed cells which are sensitive to light. This arrangement gives us the retina.

Yesterday's Convention Of The Epworth League Largest and Best Held

Encouraging Reports Received From Eighteen Leagues--Six New Ones Organized--Miss Louise Rush of Campton Is Re-elected President and Mr. J. Arthur Mars', Secretary-Treasurer.

A large number of delegates gathered in the Tabernacle Church yesterday afternoon and evening from the surrounding district to attend the sixteenth annual Convention of the Belleville District Epworth League, and it is agreed that it was the largest and best convention the District Leaguers have had for many years. Large parties drove in from Holloway, Foxboro, Carnahan, Shannonville, Bayside and other points, and were well repaid by the excellent program provided by the League.

Encouraging reports were received from the 18 Leagues in the District, and these, together with the Secretary's report, showed that six new Leagues have been organized in the District since the last convention, that one prayer meeting has been started and others strengthened, and that two missionary departments have been organized during the year. Most of these results have been the direct result of a special campaign conducted by the District officers and others during the last two months.

The Business Committee elected by the convention selected the following officers for the ensuing year, which selection was ratified by the convention:

Hon. Pres.—Rev. G. B. Greatrix.

President—Miss Louise Rush, of Campton. Miss Rush is a business-like woman, and her work during the past year elicited much praise from many quarters of the convention.)

Vice-Presidents—Miss Ida Martin, Miss Ethel Adams, Miss Alice Bell, Mr. Geo. F. Stewart and Miss S. M. Whitworth.

Secretary-Treasurer — J. Arthur Marsh.

Conference representative—Rev. E. B. Cook.

The Business Committee also made the following recommendations, which were adopted by the convention:

That the convention be held in Campbellton next year;

That the committee endorse the action of the Executive Committee in publishing the Yearly Bulletin," and recommend continuing its publication.

That each circuit aim at sending out at least one worker each year, either as a missionary, minister, deaconess or other worker.

That the Executive Committee finish its campaign of the district for the purpose of reviving or stimulating existing Leagues or starting new ones.

That two or four speakers on the programme for the afternoon session, all of whom were worthy of an extended address, be appointed next year.

Miss Florence spoke of the Summer School, held annually at Wellington, for the study of mission problems in the Methodist Church. There were 180 students at the school last year, and a much larger number was hoped for next year.

Miss Sadie M. Whitworth gave an instructive address on Junior League work. Miss Whitworth is a socialist in this department, and her address will doubtless bear fruit in increased activity in junior work through the district.

The Methodist General Conference made several changes in the Epworth League affairs in general, one of which was the authorizing of a new "Citizenship Department." Two addresses were given on this subject by Mr. Henry Pringle, and Miss Guest, of the Belleville High School. Mr. Pringle pointed out that the present rate of increase Canada would have a population of 120 millions in 100 years, and that not more than twenty million of these would be native born, and asked who then would rule the country. He urged the importance of our church training its young people in the right principles of christian citizenship to hold the balance of power in future years. He emphasized the necessity of clean elections and clean civic and national administration, and said he would not advise any young man to desert his party because of party wrong doing, because the other party was probably just as bad, but said if 300 christian men would unite and tell the party leaders elections must be clean or they would not vote, the party leaders would sit up and take notice, and would be compelled to accede to the demand.

Miss Guest gave a splendid address also on Christian Citizenship, in the course of which she stated that Canada is not now producing as good grade of citizen as she should, and pointing to the criminal records, and other slace statistics in support of the statement. Some of the vilest crimes of recent years have occurred right here in Ontario, and by our native born citizens, and church people should endeavor to rear better samples of christian citizenship.

In the evening session Rev. L. S. Wright, Conference League President, gave a stirring and practical address on "Evangelism in Epworth League Work," that this should be the paramount aim of all Epworth League work, and that only by personal contact could the best results be secured.

The final session of the convention was given by Rev. G. S. Morris, a native Japanese preacher, a condensation of which appears in another column.

OBITUARY

MARY AGNES MANLEY.

On Saturday last Miss Mary Agnes Manley, who resided with her parents on St. Charles street, was taken suddenly ill with appendicitis, and despite medical skill, passed away last evening. Deceased, who was in her 19th year, was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Manley, and was born in this city. She was possessed of a lovable disposition, which endeared her to her many young friends, who deeply regret her demise. Miss Manley was a graduate of the Ontario Business College and was proficient in music, which was one of her favorite pastimes. She was a member of the Children of Mary and the Sodality in connection with St. Michael's church. The bereaved parents and relatives will receive the heartfelt sympathy of their many friends in this sad case, whereby a bright life has been brought to an untimely close.

MRS. MARY JANE DOWNEY.

At an early hour this morning Mrs. Mary Jane Downey, widow of the late Mr. Arthur Downey, died after being ill for some time. Deceased, who was 64 years of age, was born at Fredericksburg, Ont., being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Smith. For the past five years deceased had favorably known to many here. Mrs. Downey was a devoted member of the Anglican church. Mr. Downey died but a few weeks ago. No family survives. The remains will be taken to Napanee to-morrow for interment. Four sisters and two brothers of the deceased are living.

The Cause of Colds

GOOD ADVICE REGARDING THE PREVENTION OF COUGHS AND COLDS.

If people would only fortify and strengthen the system, the majority of cases of coughs, colds and pneumonia might be avoided. These troubles are frequently due to weakness, which produces a catarrhal condition of the mucous membrane, which is an internal skin of the body. When this skin is weakened it becomes easily infected with germs which cause many of the diseases to which the flesh is heir. Healthy mucous membranes are essential safeguards of the body's general health.

We have a remedy which we honestly believe to be unsurpassed in excellence for the prevention of coughs, colds and all catarrhal conditions. It is the prescription of a famous physician, who has an enviable reputation of thirty years of cures gained through the use of this formula. We promise to make no charge for the medicine should it fail to do as we claim. We urge everybody who has need of such a medicine to try Rexall Mucu-Tone.

It stands to reason that we could not afford to make such statements and give our own personal guarantee to this remedy if we were not prepared to prove the reasonableness of our claim in every particular, and we see no reason why any one should hesitate to accept our offer and try it. We have two sizes of Rexall Mucu-Tone, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Sometimes a 50-cent bottle is sufficient to give marked relief. As a general thing the most chronic case is relieved with an average of three large bottles. You can obtain Rexall Remedies in Belleville only at our store.—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown.

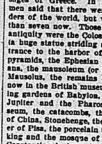
Cookery Points

"We Are Seven."
So said the little girl in Wordsworth's well known poem. Many things, if they could speak, might make the same answer—the days of the week, for example, the notes of the musical scale, the colors of the rainbow. The Germans say that "all good things are three," but seven also is certainly a remarkable and distinguished number. There were said to be seven kings of Rome and seven sages of Greece. In ancient times men said that there were seven wonders of the world, but we have more than seven now. Those "wonders" of antiquity were the Colossus of Rhodes (a huge statue striding across the entrance to the harbor of Rhodes), the pyramids, the Ephesian temple of Diana, the mausoleum (or tomb of King Mausolus, the remains of which are now in the British museum), the hanging gardens of Babylon, the statue of Jupiter and the Pharos. The Coliseum, the catacombe, the Great wall of China, Stonehenge, the leaning tower of Pisa, the porcelain tower of Nanking and the mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople have been called "the seven wonders of history." There were seven famous cities of antiquity —Rome, Antioch, Nineveh, Babylon, Athens, Tyre and Carthage. Rome stood upon seven hills, and London city has seven hills—Ludgate hill, Snow hill, Ludgate hill, Fish street hill, Gracechurch street hill, Holborn hill and Tower hill.



They Didn't Bag the Birds.
Two New Jersey boys found a woodcocks' nest with four eggs in it and laid a plan to capture a pair of woodcock as well as the eggs. John was going to place a bag over the female sitting while she sat on her nest. Will was going to do the same to the male when he came to take his mate's place on the eggs, and then the boys intended to carry the nest and birds to the barn and see the birds raise their young. The boys found the female on the nest, and John was about to bag her when she shot into the brush so suddenly that two little fledglings fell out of the nest. John's shout of surprise brought Will to the spot, but before they could replace the birds the parent woodcock came whirring through the bushes and darted at the intruders. They stared at the boys' faces with their sharp bills, and the boys were incapable of defense. After trying in vain to shield themselves, they ran away in a rout. The next day they recovered their courage and stole up to the nest again, but found that the woodcocks had taken the little birds away.

Conundrums.
Why is a thunderstorm like an onion? Because it is put up to peal.
What did the potter say to the clay? Beware.
When is a dow's neck like a bell? When it is rung for dinner.
What is the difference between a fool and a looking glass? A fool speaks without reflecting, and a looking glass reflects without speaking.
What is there that the fewer there are to guard it the safer it is? A secret.

A Rainy Day Game.
Lots of fun can be had with a peanut tournament. Have four people at each table and in the center of each table have a large bowl of peanuts and a pair of tongs, such as come in candy boxes. Each person must try to remove the peanuts one at a time without stirring the other nuts. At the end of twenty minutes a bell is rung, and the one having removed the largest number of peanuts is awarded a simple little prize.

A Sand Pile.
A sand pile is a good thing for the active child. A dollar's worth of building sand placed in a corner of the yard and confined by a few boards will keep the children from digging up the flower beds. That they must dig is a fact demonstrated by more ages of human life than any of our text book lore ever. This and pile in some back yards can be protected from the sun and rain by a square of canvas stretched over it in the shape of a tent, or the pile can be put on the shady side of the house.

NEW BRAIDED SET.
In line with the popularity of black and white effects this season that royal petit, ermine, has come into more than usual favor from the fashionable world. It not only adorns hats, trims evening gowns and street suits, but makes the stunningest of the new small piece sets. The illustration gives a good impression of how attractive is the new makeup in collar and muff sets of ermine.
The belted feature of this pointed stole is particularly smart, as is also the turned down collar with its broad tie of silk.

The Separate Waist.
Persian effects in separate waists are one of the latest comers in the dress world, and they are certainly attractive when soft colorings are selected.
The natty blouse in the cut is of pale though rich Persian colorings carried out in chiffon, which material is used over a foundation of navy blue satin. The folds and simulated buttonholes and covered buttons are of the blue satin. Such a waist worn with a dark blue cloth costume is exceedingly good taste.

Doesn't Know Her Age.
There is a glorious phase of unfairness in the position of the two sexes despite all our struggles for the suffrage. A woman still dreads to tell her age, no matter how youthful she may look, while as long as a man looks youthful he is generally willing to admit and even to boast of how many milestones he has passed. There is at least one father who understood this problem in time and who gave his daughter a fair chance in life by never telling her know how old she was. He realized at her birth that a time would come when she would not want to tell her age, and he spared her the humiliation of having to prevaricate, as she otherwise must, either her age or the place where she was born, and there were no birth records preserved in the family.

For Oily Skins.
When one's skin is oily do not try to conceal it by excessive use of powder. It makes the face pasty and clogs the pores.
There are various drying lotions that are excellent for this condition. Wiping off the face with pure alcohol has a drying effect on the skin. Various good lotions are sold for this purpose, but a teaspoonful of borax in a basin of water is excellent.
If you fear pure borax try this lotion: One tablespoonful of powdered borax, two tablespoonfuls of glycerin and a quart of camphor water. Dip a soft linen cloth in the and mop the face several times a day.
Do not make the mistake of using spirits of camphor, which is diluted in alcohol and much stronger. Camphor water is made by letting two ounces of gum camphor stand in water for twenty-four hours. The lump can be used repeatedly, as its size is little decreased.

What Are Your Eyebrows Like?
Straight and level eyebrows denote mentality. Muskins often have these. Brows that meet over the nose usually prove the love of authority and mark a resolute person.
Beautifully arched brows usually adorn a rather empty forehead and indicate an opposite degree of intelligence to that shown by the long, straight brow.
When the arch is but slight the forehead may be strong, full of individuality and with a fine central spread. When like this, however, there is usually a lack either of time, tune or locality.
Very fine, distinctly outlined brows indicate an artistic nature.
Much elevated eyebrows show artistic perception of color and shape, good taste, organization and mathematical powers.

A Toilet Economy.
The particular hostess now uses individual pieces of soap in her guest room and gives to each new guest a fresh piece. Where much entertaining is done this means numerous odds and ends of fine soap.
One woman has hit upon the plan of using this for the children in a wire soap shaker, such as is found for dishwashing. The tiniest pieces can be thus utilized. A basin is filled with warm water and the shaker agitated until a thick lather is formed.
Another way to use up small pieces of fine soap is to put them into small cheesecloth bags and use as one would a bran or almond meat bag.

Low Shoe Peril.
The constant wearing of low shoes and slippers will spoil the shape of the ankles, especially if one must be much on the feet. An exercise which gives shapeliness to the lower limbs consists in standing straight, hands on hips, heels together, then rising slowly on the tips of the toes while drawing in the breath; then while exhaling it slowly return to the first position, feet flat on floor. Do this every morning and evening for ten minutes; also as much as you can wear high laced boots, drawing the laces as snugly as comfort will permit. Draw them in by degrees, not all at once.

Perfuming the Hair.
The perfumed hair cap has met with favor with women who are fond of dainty conceits, and one may be easily made at home. After the shampoo and at night these caps should be worn, and the process is lasting. Fashion them after the style of the Dutch bonnet. Between two layers of silk put a sheet of cotton batting with plenty of sachet powder, using always the same perfume. Many women prefer the Florentine orris, but when you find a perfume to your liking use it all the time, as it bespeaks more refinement than having all sorts of essences about your garments.

OLD TIME CEREMONIAL AT OPENING OF HOUSE.

ALARM FELT IN ENGLAND

Dire Misfortune Threatens Her, Says Old Superstition.

THE CORONATION

Lloyds Demanding High Rates For Insurance Against Losses!

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The Marquise de Fontenoy, writing in the New York Tribune, says:—

Everyone will recall the strange approbation which prevailed after the death of Queen Victoria, to the effect that something would occur to prevent the coronation of Edward VII. —an apprehension which he himself is known to have shared, and which was in a measure realized when he became so dangerously ill two days before the date first appointed for his coronation that the ceremony had to be postponed for several months, and was consequently shorn of much of its splendor. Fears of the same sort are already being expressed about the coronation of King George. Indeed, they are even still more widespread and deep rooted than those of the previous reign, and arise from the fact that an old English saying, which has been current among the people for many centuries, predicts misfortunes for England whenever God Friday falls on Lady Day—that is to say on March 25. What is what happens this year, and the last occasion on which it occurred was in 1861, the year of the death of Queen Victoria's husband, the Prince Consort. The saying is as follows:

If our Lord falls on our Lady's lap,
England shall have a great mishap.

Never has this proverb failed to come true and that is why a feeling of considerable uneasiness prevails, especially among all those who are in any way inclined to be superstitious, and why Lloyds and other similar concerns which insure persons against monetary losses in connection with the postponement or abandonment of great public pageants, such as the coronation, are already demanding bigger premiums than in the late reign.

SHARPE IS PROMOTED

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—The speeches from the throne to-day, at the opening of Parliament, will contain a general deal of notice of prospective legislation.

After the usual reference to the homilies bestowed by Parliament at the death of the King will come in for a sympathetic reference. The arrival of the warships Niobe and Rainbow will be mentioned, implementing the legislation of last session.

The Hudson Bay Railway, the deepening of the Welland Canal and the Fisher's copyright act will be referred to.

Regarding the bill creating a commission to regulate and investigate freight between Canada and the United States, it was stated last night that, as such would be of no avail without similar legislation on the part of Congress, Mr. Graham will leave the matter with the Washington authorities, with a view to arranging a conventional treaty respecting this traffic.

Major Sam Sharpe of North Ontario was given the position of Ontario whip of the Conservative party by Mr. Borden, and accepted. Major Sharpe has only been a member of Parliament for about two years, but he is acknowledged to be the most effective men in the House. He has done excellent work in the public accounts committee. He is a youth, as politicians go.

George H. Perley, the chief Conservative whip, stated last night that there would be no business at the sitting of the members. Therefore Hon. Geo. E. Foster will occupy his old place on Mr. Borden's left hand.

Usually there is a caucus of the party on the Friday after the opening of the House; but this session the caucus will be delayed until next week, when all the members will be present. Mr. Borden's speech, therefore, will not be ratified until that event.

The debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne will not begin until Monday, and no idea has been formed as to how long it will last. Probably, however, it will occupy most of the week.

DATE OF DISSOLUTION.

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 17.—It is given out on good authority that November 28th will be the date for the dissolution of Parliament, and that the House will pass the Budget before appealing to the country.

ITALIAN HAS MANY WOUNDS

Tapetto Dying At The Soo as The Result of Drunken Row

TWO OTHERS HURT

Tapetto Said To Be The Prime Factor In The Lamentable Affair

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Nov. 17.—Vezeezi Topetto, an Italian, is in a dying condition at the General Hospital, and two of his companions, Frank Francovois and Ulizi Stornelli, are also suffering from minor injuries, as the result of a stabbing affray which took place in the Italian quarters Tuesday night at eleven o'clock.

It appears that Topetto was the prime factor in the affair, the others being on the defensive. Topetto, according to Jno. J. F. Gimby, who arrived on the scene about fifteen minutes after the knifing took place, had sixteen to twenty stab wounds on his body. His breast was slashed from shoulder to shoulder, and there was a wound under the arm, from which the breath of the man escaped when he attempted to breathe. His abdomen was cut in such a manner that his intestines protruded, and the doctor was compelled to remove a portion of the stomach. Dr. Gimby stated yesterday morning, that in his opinion, Topetto could not recover.

The stabbing took place at the house of E. Palumbo, who conducts a boarding house in a lane leading from Superior street. It appears that Topetto arrived in the house Tuesday night shortly before 11 o'clock. Those who participated in the affair say that he was under the influence of liquor. He immediately created a disturbance, and proceeding upstairs, got the other men out of bed. The melee followed. Francovois and Stogmelli both admitted that they used knives when the man became unruly.

Dr. Gimby was the first to arrive on the scene, and he had applied his needle to some of the wounds of the men when the police made their appearance. According to statements made by the men at the hospital, there was no cause for the stabbing outside of the trouble which occurred Tuesday night.

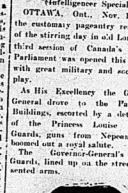
Speech From Throne Forecasts Rearrangement With States

RECIPROCITY FAVORED



Earl Grey As Usual Refers To The Prosperity of The Country

(Intelligencer Special.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 17.—With the customary pageantry reminiscent of the stirring day in old London, the third session of Canada's eleventh Parliament was opened this morning with great military and social display.

As His Excellency the Governor-General drove to the Parliament Buildings, escorted by a detachment of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, guns from Nepean Point boomed out a royal salute.

The Governor-General's Foot Guards, lined up on the streets, presented arms.

EARL GREY.

In the Speech from the Throne His Excellency referred to the prosperity of the country despite the fact that the crops in some portions of the west had been poor.

The chief feature of the speech, however, was the reference to the tariff question, which said, "While recognizing the importance of Canadian home trade and the value of the market for our staples in the United Kingdom, my Government feel that they should place themselves in every opportunity to promote friendly commercial relations with British colonies and foreign countries.

"The desirability of more equitable tariff arrangements between the United States and Canada has been felt on this side of the border. We have fought largely from them, but they have benefited from us in return. It is gratifying to note that a more liberal policy is now favored by the neighboring country. Wide discussions have been reached, the free discussion which the latter takes place encourage my Government to hope that at an early date, without any sacrifice of Canada's interests, an arrangement may be made to permit the admission of many products of the United States on satisfactory terms."

On the whole, the speech on the tariff was very diplomatically worded, and, while friendly to reciprocity to a certain extent, showed some regard for the feelings of protectionists.

Roman Catholics In Annual Session At New Orleans

A PROTEST SOUNDED

President Feeney Regrets Lack Of Catholics In Office—Mayor Nathan Scored.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 16.—Protests against the proportionately small number of Roman Catholics holding Federal and State offices in this country and the failure of the State to pay for secular education in Roman Catholic schools, featured the annual report of President Edward Feeney, of Brooklyn, N.Y., at to-day's session of the ninth annual convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies.

"The Federation has no candidate for public office," he said, "but it does urge that in proportion to the number of Catholics under the flag here and in our insular possessions, we have by no means a sufficient representation in the public service. Further, those selected by our government for responsible positions should be real and not nominal Catholics."

Turning to theatres, he said: "An indigenous Catholic product is the votives of the vocalist advanced school during the last few years have deluged the theatres with obscene drama, which scoffs at marriage, and as a result, social purity has become the target for shafts of the vulgar. Many, a fertile source of ribald jest to the vulgar humorist and a fever fallen mine of indelicate allusions to the dramatist. The obscene play has been supplemented by the immoral and pernicious motion-picture show, which debauches young children.

"Extravagance," said Mr. Feeney, "rules among many of our people, and, sad to relate, in proportion as some of them prosper, their love of God weakens. The fight for morality goes on today as it did a hundred years ago. We pray that the fastest living and extravagance of some of our people may not endanger the life of the republic. We believe that the without religion the most enlightened government of to-day would drift into decay and chaos that overwhelmed Greece and Rome."

President Feeney commended the efforts of the individual and of the social justice league to combat socialism. The league's avowed object, he said, was to make clear the principles at the base of American thought and life and the necessity of their preservation proposed by socialism to uphold the American ideal of home, the integrity of the family, the right of country and to sustain the everlasting reality of religion as the foundation of our civilization."

President Feeney paid his respects to Mayor Nathan, who has been attacks on the Pope, and the Catholic Church, and urged the federation to "protest against a course that has heaped upon the sovereign pontiff by the lawless who find the lion of the fold hewed within the walls of the Vatican."

He drew a parting shot to the "scurrilous" newspaper writers and the "cesspoolers of the magazines" and said that in this day of universal reading the members of the faith must be vigilant in controverting the misrepresentations and lies of the Catholic religion and the defamation of its members.

All Troubles on Eastern End of Grand Trunk Disposed of Satisfactorily

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—It is stated officially this morning that the increases given by the Grand Trunk to their firemen under the agreement announced in a morning paper varied from five to ten per cent. of present wages, according to runs.

At the headquarters of the Canadian Pacific it was stated that their firemen and engineers had also been dealt with some time ago, and that all trouble on the Eastern lines had been disposed of satisfactorily to the men. So far as the Western lines of the C. P. R. are concerned this is being influenced by the big movement amongst the unions on the other side of the line, however, expected that a similar amicable arrangement will be eventually arrived at.

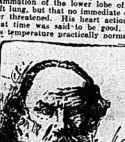
Count Tolstoi Passes The Crisis In His Attack.



CONFLICTING STORIES

One Time Reported That He Was Dead—Later Word Reassuring

St. Petersburg, Nov. 17.—The report of the death of Count Leo Tolstoi at Astapova was received here Tuesday night by the various newspapers and agencies. The Novoe Vremya's Moscow correspondent first telegraphed that Tolstoi was dead, but at an early hour yesterday he sent a further despatch, saying that a message had been received from Astapova that Tolstoi was living, and that the crisis of the disease had been passed.

At 4.15 yesterday morning, the Vestnik News Agency reported that the death of Tolstoi was not confirmed.

The reports emanansating from Astapova, where Tolstoi has been lying ill with a fever for two days, have been conflicting, however. The official despatches, as given by the attending physicians Tuesday night, was that Tolstoi was suffering from an inflammation of the lower lobe of the left lung, but that no immediate danger threatened. His heart action at that time was said to be good, and his temperature practically normal.

COUNT TOLSTOI.

Only one day before, according to the doctor's Tolstoi's temperature was 104 and that was a delirious state.

On Wednesday the attending physicians confirmed the original statements, but added that the inflammation was spreading, and that the condition of the patient was critical, although not dangerous. His temperature during the night rose to 102.6, and he had an attack of bleeding from the lungs. Some time later it was reported that his temperature had fallen to 101.4, and came the report of his death and finally a message from Astapova that he had successfully passed the crisis of the disease.

Western Farmers Will Catechize Their Members at Ottawa.

Saskatoon, Sask., Nov. 17.—The executive of the Provincial Grain Growers' Association met in session here, at which E. A. Partridge, secretary of the co-operative system, whereby farmers would eliminate the middlemen.

Attention was offered to impress federal members with the grain growers' attitude on public ownership and cooperation of the Hudson Bay Railway, the Georgian Bay canal and other questions are to be taken up at the annual convention and legislated upon. It was finally decided to hold a delegation from the various constituencies should go to Ottawa, to wait on their members and have them declare themselves in the House on all these logics, so that in future elections the grain growers would vote only for those men whom they could rely upon to uphold the western farmers' views at Ottawa.

Partridge also brought up a new proposition regarding Hudson Bay Railway. As the leader of the Government was opposed to Government ownership and operation of the road, it was decided that as an alternative scheme, a co-operative farmers' company should be formed, to secure a charter, and build and operate the road. Five hundred farmers might form such a body, when articles of incorporation could be drawn, and application made for a charter. The idea caught the audience so thoroughly, that a motion was made unanimously endorsing the scheme, and the same came forward with $10 each to show their earnestness, and others intimated their intention of doing the same.

Lords Bow To The Will of Liberals And Consent To Abolition Of Veto Power

But Concession Will Probably Not Satisfy Government And Early Election Is Looked For—King Fears For Safety of Crown—Asquith Speaks Tomorrow—An Anxious Populace.

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 17.—That the House of Lords fear the result of an appeal to the country at the present time is evidenced by the acceptance by the Conservative Commons leader of the Upper House, this morning to the effect that the Lords would consent to the abolition of the hereditary principle and grant others, reforms demanded by Asquith. It is thought, however, that this belated concession will not satisfy the Liberals, who will take the action as indicated weakness of the Lords to press an election immediately. King George was again in conference with the leaders of both parties this morning, but is not thought to have come to any arrangement. Those in close touch with His Majesty know that he feels for the permanence of the crown in the present crisis. In the meantime all Great Britain and the dominions beyond the seas are awaiting with anxiety the statement of Premier Asquith to-morrow.

Earl Grey As Usual Refers To The Prosperity of The Country

(Intelligencer Special.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 17.—With the customary pageantry reminiscent of the stirring day in old London, the third session of Canada's eleventh Parliament was opened this morning with great military and social display.

As His Excellency the Governor-General drove to the Parliament Buildings, escorted by a detachment of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, guns from Nepean Point boomed out a royal salute.

The Governor-General's Foot Guards, lined up on the streets, presented arms.

EARL GREY.

In the Speech from the Throne His Excellency referred to the prosperity of the country despite the fact that crops in some portions of the west had been poor.

The chief feature of the speech, however, was the reference to the tariff question, which said: "While recognizing the importance of Canadian interests in the value of the market for our staples in the United Kingdom, my Government feel that they should avail themselves of every opportunity to promote friendly commercial relations with British colonies and foreign countries.

"The desirability of more equitable tariff arrangements between the United States and Canada has been felt on this side of the border. We have long been largely free from them, but they have bought less from us in return. It is gratifying to note that a more liberal policy has prevailed in the neighboring country. While no conclusions have been reached, the free discussions which have taken place encourage my Government to hope that in an early date, without any sacrifice of Canada's interests, an arrangement may be made to permit the admission of many products of the Dominion into the United States on satisfactory terms."

On the whole, the speech on the tariff was very diplomatically worded, and, while friendly to reciprocity to a certain extent, showed some regard for the feelings of protectionists.

"The federation has no candidate for public office," he said, "but it does urge that Catholics have the number of Catholics under the flag here and in our insular possessions, we have by no means a sufficient representation in the public service. Further, those selected by our government for responsible positions should be real and not nominal Catholics."

Turning to theatres, he said: "An indignant protest is made that dozypteses of the so-called advanced school during the last few years have deluged the United States with obscene drama, which scoffs at marriage, and at a remedy, social purity has become the target for the shafts of the lunatic fringe, a fertile source of ribald jest to the vulgar humorist and the fertile laughing mine of indelicate innuendo to the dramatist. The obscene play has been supplemented by the nauseous and pernicious motion-picture show, which debauches young children.

"Extravagance," said Mr. Feeney, "rules among many of our people, and, sad to relate, in proportion as some of them are blessed with the gold of goodness. The fight for morality goes on today as it did a hundred years ago. We pray that the riotous living and extravagance of some of our people may not endanger the life of the republic. We believe that the without religion the most enlightened government of today would drift in to decay and chaos that overwhelmed Greece and Rome."

President Feeney commended the efforts of the individual and of the social justice league to combat social sin. The league is not political, he said, was to make clear the principles at issue between American ideal of home, the integrity of the family, the laws of country and to sustain the everlasting reality of religion as the foundation of our civilization."

President Feeney said his respects to Mayor Nathan in the matter of the rocks on the Pope and the Catholic Church, and urged the federation to add its protest to that which had been heaped upon the scurvious pontiff by the Mayor because of the fine of the fold hemmed within the walls of the Vatican.

He drew a parting shot to the "scurrilous" newspaper writers and the "muckrakers of the magazines" and said that in this day of universal reading the members of the faith must be vigilant in controverting the misrepresentations in many of the Catholic religion and the defamation of its members.

ADVANCE FOR THE FIREMEN

Varies From Five To Ten Per Cent of The Present Wages

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

All Troubles on Eastern End of Grand Trunk Disposed of Satisfactorily

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—It is stated officially this morning that the increases given by the Grand Trunk to their firemen under the agreement announced in a morning paper varied from five to ten per cent. of present wages, according to runs.

At the headquarters of the Canadian Pacific it was stated that their firemen and engineers had also been dealt with some time ago, and that all trouble on the Eastern lines had been disposed of satisfactorily for some men. So far as the Western lines of the C. P. R. are concerned this is being influenced by the big movement amongst the unions on the other side. It is however, expected that a similar amicable arrangement will be eventually arrived at.

PAYS $1,000 FOR A CUP OF TEA

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—One thousand dollars was paid for a cup of tea last night in Chicago. The cup was put at the charity bazaar at Orchestra Hall, the proceeds of which will be for the benefit of the Home for Destitute Crippled Children.

Thomas Griffin, wealthy manufacturer, stepped into the tea room conducted by Mrs. Graeme Stewart and ordered pretty debutantes and ordered a cup of tea.

Griffin took a sniff. "Great, isn't it," complimented the young lady who served it.

"Yes, indeed."

Mr. Griffin drained the last dollop, then put the cup down and filled out a check for $1,000.

"Never mind the change," said Mr. Griffin.

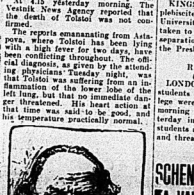
Count Tolstoi Passes The Crisis In His Attack.



CONFLICTING STORIES

One Time Reported That He Was Dead—Later Word Reassuring

St. Petersburg, Nov. 17.—The report of the death of Count Leo Tolstoi at Astapova was received here Tuesday night by the various newspapers and agencies. The Novoe Vremya's Moscow correspondent first telegraphed that Tolstoi was dead, but at an early hour yesterday he sent a further despatch, saying that a message had been received from Astapova that Tolstoi was living, and that the crisis of the disease had been passed.

At 4.15 yesterday morning the Russ News Agency reported that the death of Tolstoi was not confirmed.

The reports emananating from Astapova, where Tolstoi has been lying ill with a high fever for two days, have been conflicting throughout. The official diagnosis, as given by the attending physicians Tuesday night, was inflammation of the lower lobe of the left lung, but that no immediate danger threatened. His heart action at that time was said to be good, and his temperature practically normal.

COUNT TOLSTOI.

Only one day before, according to the doctor's Tolstoi's temperature was 104 and he was in a delirious state.

On Wednesday the attending physicians confirmed the original diagnosis, but added that the inflammation was spreading, and that the condition of the patient was critical, although not entirely hopeless. His temperature during the night rose to 103.6 and he had a fit of coughing and bleeding from the lungs. Some time later it was reported that his temperature had fallen to 99.6. Then came the report of his death and finally a message from Astapova that he had successfully passed the crisis of the disease.

MISS WILKES HORSES CAPTURE MANY PRIZES

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Miss Katherine L. Wilkes, of Galt, Ontario, a sister of Mathew Wilkes who married the daughter of Hettie Green, is a most conspicuous bidder for prizes in the trotting classes shown at the National Horse Show today. She divided honors with Hiram Bain, of Poughkeepsie, receiving a blue, three reds and a white ribbon, while the latter's farm got three blues and a red.

Miss Wilkes, who is an enthusiastic horse-woman, has the distinction of being the only woman riding over the grand circuit, her only rival, Lotta Crabtree, having practically retired last year.

Liquor is Banned.

Toronto, Nov. 17.—From now on no liquor may be placed upon the tables of freshmen tables of secret, fraternal or other societies without the sanction of individual members liable to prosecution, is the ruling of the Inner Council. This is the view taken by the Council in the matter of the enactment of a recent decision in the courts, and further definite action was taken by the department upon the case in point. Some months ago the caretakers of one or more of the public buildings were warned that the must be careful in permitting the consumption of liquor, but they had no idea that the order meant the barring of intoxicants from the refreshment tables of secret societies.

A second circular was sent out yesterday to the caretakers of all the public buildings (about a hundred in number) in Toronto defining clearly the law upon the point.

SCHENCK'S CHAUFFEUR "A VALUABLE WITNESS" IS NOT TO BE FOUND

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 17.—A chauffeur who has been in the employ of John D. Schenck, the millionaire packer, whose wife is accused of poisoning him, has disappeared mysteriously.

Steps were taken by the police today to ascertain his whereabouts as he is expected to be an important witness in the case.

Lundy Wilson, the missing man, has been the personal "chauffeur" of Mrs. Schenck since her husband purchased the magnificent touring car. A short time ago the police say, he admitted that Mrs. Schenck had told him that he would be his advantage if he should drive over a cliff with her husband in the machine.

Western Farmers Will Catechize Their Members at Ottawa.

Saskatoon, Nov. 17.—The executive of the Provincial Grain Growers' Association held a session here, at which E. A. Partridge outlined the co-operative system, whereby farmers would eliminate local stores and middlemen in the case.

A motion was offered to impress federal members with the grain growers' attitude on the Hudson Bay railway and operation of the Hudson Bay Railway, and, if agreeable, elevators and terminations are to be taken up as early as possible and legislation upon it was finally decided that delegates from the various constituencies should go to Ottawa, to wait on their members and have them declare themselves in the House, and to impress upon them that in future elections the grain growers would vote only for those from whom they could rely upon to uphold the western farmers' views at Ottawa.

Partridge also brought up a new proposition regarding Hudson Bay Railway. As the leader of the Government opposed any Government ownership and operation of the road, Partridge thinks that as an alternative scheme, a co-operative farmers' company of John D. Scheneck, the millionaire packer, whose wife is accused of poisoning him, has disappeared mysteriously.

As the leader of the Government opposed any Government ownership and operation of the road, Partridge thinks that as an alternative scheme, a co-operative farmers' company should be formed, to secure a charter, and build and operate the road. Five hundred farmers might put up $10 each, when a charter or incorporation could be drawn, and application made for a charter. This idea caught the audience so thoroughly, that a resolution was passed unanimously endorsing the scheme, and it was decided to call a meeting in Regina, to show their earnestness, and others intimated their intention of doing the same.

Opposition Convention.

Regina, Nov. 17.—Hon. F. W. G. Haultain yesterday morning announced that he would call a convention of the provincial opposition party, to be held probably in Regina, before the close of the session in January or February, when important political questions will be discussed. He declined to say anything more on the report of the elevator commission at the present time.

Lords Bow To The Will of Liberals And Consent To Abolition Of Veto Power

But Concession Will Probably Not Satisfy Government And Early Election Is Looked For—King Fears For Safety of Crown—Asquith Speaks Tomorrow—An Anxious Populace.

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 17.—That the House of Lords fear the result of an appeal to the country at the present time is evidenced by the suggestion of Lord Lansdowne, Conservative leader of the Upper House, this morning to the effect that the Lords would consent to the abolition of the hereditary principle and great othering, but is not thought to have come reforms demanded by Asquith. It is to any arrangement. Those in close thought, however, that this belated touch with His Majesty know that he concession will not satisfy the Liberals, who will take advantage of the indicated weakness of the Lords to press an election immediately. King George was again in conference with the leaders of both parties this morning feels for the permanence of the crown in the present crisis. In the meantime all Great Britain and the dominions beyond the seas are awaiting with anxiety the statement of Premier Asquith to-morrow.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Did you see the red moon and eclipse last night? Most everyone did.

The police force seems to be settling. During the past year only one change in the personel of the force has taken place.

The Council must henceforth sit up and be very, very good, or some one will write a column or more, telling the dear boys of the Council Chamber how to behave—Oh, fudge!

In another column will be found a notice calling a meeting of the Real Property Owners' Association. We are quite in accord with this movement and trust there may be a large number of the property owners attend the meeting.

The Springfield Republican will never look the same again without those prose poems in the way of grocery and hardware ads. on its front page. The Republican was one of the last daily papers in the country to consent to prefer revenue to news in this respect. It may be a modern improvement, but it alters the face of a dear old friend.

Two men nominated against their wills for Justice of the Peace in an Indiana county declared that they could not afford to hold office—and each one went stumping for the other. The one who was elected says graciously of the other; "He must have made better speeches for me than I did for him." Campaigning may yet become a routeof compliments, instead of damaging argument.

A lengthy discussion took place as to sending the President and Vice-President of the Board on a deputation which will go to Ottawa on Dec. 15th relative to getting better trade relations with the United States on dairy products. A motion to send the deputation was lost.

LETTER FROM RURAL DEAN

TRANSUBSTANTIATION—AN ATTEMPT TO DEFINE THE INDEFINABLE.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—A gentleman in Madoc, subscribing himself "Catholic," has deigned to notice a partial report of my sermon printed in a local paper. Why did he not sign himself honestly "Roman Catholic"? Is he afraid, or ashamed to avow the loyal and official title of his church—"THE HOLY ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH"? Recently in Montreal the great and good Catholic Bishop of London asked and answered the question—"Why am I not a Roman Catholic? Because, thank God, I am an English Catholic."

Why will Romanists arrogate to themselves such unwarrantable claims? He asks what kind of Presence? Can he define it?

For the benefit of those who are unfamiliar with such terms it is worth while to state exactly what Rome's definition of Transubstantiation is. It is based on a mediaeval quasi-metaphysical theory that every object we perceive consists of two elements, called respectively the Substance and the Accidents. The "Accidents" are those qualities we perceive in any object, the "Substance" is the underlying reality in which these perceived qualities subsist. But, according to this theory, if all those qualities were removed, there would be still left this mysterious thing called the "Substance," which "held together" the different qualities and made it what it was. The word "Substance" is, of course, used here in a totally different sense from its modern meaning, but in strict accordance with its Latin derivation, "sub" under, and "stans" standing. As applied to what takes place at the consecration of the Elements in the Sacrament there was based upon this theory the doctrine of Transubstantiation, which teaches that while the "Accidents" of the bread and wine (i.e., color, taste, etc.) remain the same, the "Substance" or underlying reality in which these "Accidents" cohere, become the actual Flesh and Blood of Christ. It may be stated at once that the theory upon which this doctrine was based has long ago been discarded, and holds no place in philosophical or scientific thought. The doctrine remains as a monument of a colossal failure in attempting to define the indefinable.

Where'er I seek the Holy Altar's rail,
And kneel to take the grace there offered me.
It is no time to ask my reason frail,
To try Christ's words, and search how they may be;
Enough, I eat His Flesh and drink His Blood.

More is not told—to ask it is not good.
I will not say with these (Romanists) that bread and wine
Have ceased at the Consecration Prayer:
Far less with those (Zwinglians) deny that aught divine
And of immortal seed is hidden there.
Hence disputants of the dim which ye admire
Keeps—but ill measure with the Church's Creed.

PARKER TO DIE DEC. 3RD

One woman and three men are under sentence of death in the county jails of Ontario. The first to die, if the extreme penalty is exacted, will be Robert Parker, the aged Hastings County murderer, now in jail here. The day of his execution has been placed for Dec. 3. Thomas McNulty and his paramour, Mary Dolan, the convicted Uptergrove murderers, will if the vigorous efforts of their attorneys fail, be hanged together in Barrie jail on Dec. 13. The execution of Rufus Weedmark, the Smith's Falls wife murderer, has also been set for the same day in Perth jail, and if clemency is not obtained he will die the same date, Dec. 14. No word has as yet been received from Ottawa in response to the petition praying for the commutation of Parker's sentence to life imprisonment.

TAYLOR—BELLINGHAM WEDDING

The marriage took place Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 15, at half-past two o'clock, Westminster Church, Toronto, of Miss Ethel Love Bellingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bellingham, 24 Howard Park avenue, to Mr. Miss Ethel Love Bellingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bellingham, 24 Howard Park avenue, to Mr. Harold Harrington Taylor, of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Scott Gilbert, of Sherbrooke, Que. The marriage will take place on January 2nd.

The church was decorated with palms and the seats for the guests were marked by bows of white and ribbons and bunches of small yellow chrysanthemums. Mr. Bellingham gave his daughter as a most charming bride, in her wedding gown of ivory satin with full court train, the yoke and sleeves of which were of rare old lace, and a lover's knot of pearls embroidered on the front. Miss Jeanne Bellingham, the bride's sister, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss May Walton, Miss Beatrice Rough and Miss Florence Taylor. All wore gowns of white satin, veiled in yellow chiffon, and large black velvet picture hats with rosettes and long ties of yellow tulle. The favors from the groom were har pins set with diamonds. The best man was Mr. Howard Taylor, of Gananoque, and the ushers Mr. S. H. Heakes, Mr. William Wilton, Mr. Hector Belling-ham and Mr. A. S. Bellingham who all received pearl fleur de lis tieping mementos of the day. Rev. John Neil performed the ceremony. A reception was held afterwards at the home of Dr. Murray-Harvey, 384 Jarvis Carlton Street. Among the out-of-town guests were the Misses Gillies, of Belleville, aunts of the bride. The bearers were, from the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will reside in Cobalt. The bride is well known in this city, having often visited here.

Their Last Session

The last session of the House of Commons, which opens to-day, bids fair to be the most interesting in the history of the Laurier regime. For the first time in his career Sir Wilfrid will be confronted by a bunch of doubtful supporters. The men who, in days gone by, gave Laurier "A solid Quebec," may well be viewed now with suspicion by that gentleman. Just how many among them will desert their old idol and ally themselves with Bourassa and the cause which he espouses will not be known until after the session gets under way. But that some of them will go over to the Nationalist leader no one doubts. The solid Quebec has been broken. Sir Wilfrid can no longer regard the French-Canadians as his obedient slaves. He has lost the power to control them.

As his strength to the Liberal party consisted chiefly in his hold over the French, his days of usefulness seem well nigh spent. In fact, one might say that he is down and out.

If all signs read correctly, the present session will be the last one presided over by the Liberal party for some time to come. An election will probably be brought on shortly after the close of the session, and the Liberals will be defeated.

The Bill Was Clean

A New York woman gave Washington a sensation the other day. She received in change an extremely dirty silver certificate. She washed and ironed the bill and it came out bright and clean, and she took it to the bank. It looked so strange that the bank teller pronounced the note counterfeit and sent it to Washington for inspection. "The only thing the matter with that," smiled Chief Wilkie, "is that it's clean."

The moral of this is that it is easy to clean a dirty bill if you want to do it. Another conceivable lesson of the incident is that women of a reformatory bent might find here almost as useful an occupation as voting. If they will wash all the dirty bills the banks may be saved the cost of shipment of clean bills, which seems an heavy to some of them that they prefer to handle filthy paper. If the women do not care to go into laundering bills they might refuse to accept dirty ones in change and so raise the question whether dirt is legal tender.

There is little likelihood that washed bills would be taken for counterfeit after a little experience with them. Dirt is so familiar now that anything else seems a freak to the complacent dealers in microbe-laden bills.

Crawled Through Snow to Camp.

Brockville, Nov. 17.—William Neilson of Lyn lies in the Brockville General Hospital in a critical condition as the result of an injury received while hunting in the Maitawaka district. Neilson, who is over 80 years of age, had a most unusual adventure. Being left alone in the camp on Monday, he thought he would take a little side trip on the lake, a quarter of a mile away, in search of the big game. Getting into the boat, he fell and broke his right leg above the knee. He crawled through ice and snow on hands and knees back to the camp, which he reached in an exhausted condition.

HARRY THAW HASN'T BAD TIME AT MATTEAWAN

Dr. Baker Says He Plays Cards With Select Friends —He Buys His Own Cigars--His Daily Routine At Asylum.

ALBANY, Nov. 16.—Attorney-General O'Malley filed in the Court of Appeals to-day affidavits in opposition to the appeal of Mrs. Mary C. Thaw in her application for the transfer of Harry Kendall Thaw, who killed Stanford White, from Matteawan State Hospital to some other asylum within the State.

Among the affidavits prepared by the Deputy Attorney-General, Franklin Kennedy, who is in charge of the case, is one by Dr. Amos T. Baker, the first assistant physician at Matteawan.

According to Dr. Baker, Thaw's daily routine is as follows:

He is compelled to arise at 5.45 o'clock in the morning or earlier if he desires and is served with breakfast in a dining-room adjacent to the ward at 6.15. He has the privilege of walking in connection with a gang which there is a shower and spray. There are two barbers attached to the ward who are not patients and Thaw can enjoy a shave daily at any time except during meal hours. Thaw's breakfast consists of a cereal, bread, butter and coffee.

After breakfast Thaw usually spends from 7 until 11 a.m. in the patients' library discharging his duties as custodian of the books. For three years, letters of an hour he is at liberty to read such newspapers and books as he chooses and attend to his correspondence. From 11 a.m. until 12, he exercises in the courtyard when the weather permits. At 12.15 he goes to dinner, which usually consists of soup and fish on Fridays and of meat and vegetables in season, dessert and coffee.

After dinner Thaw spends an hour in the library, where he reads or writes and attends to his duty as librarian. From 2 until 5 he is occupied in receiving visitors in a private room, including his mother, his counsel, and other visitors who wish to see him. From 5 until 5.45 he can either pass his time in the library or exercising alone in a large airy corridor.

Thaw's supper at 5.45 p.m. usually consists of soup, occasionally meat, fruit and vegetables in season, and tea. From 6 until 9 o'clock in the evening Thaw spends his time in the ward. He is permitted to smoke cigars, which he furnishes himself. During these hours he usually engages in a game of cards (known as 500.) The game played by four persons. His constant partner is an accountant. In reference to this game, Dr. Baker says:

"This accountant is a man of education and of good appearance, and department in the hospital. The prisoner has an insurance man of fourth man is a member of a highly respectable family, who enjoyed unusual opportunities for study in this country and abroad."

After the card game Thaw retires at 9 o'clock. Near his room there is an experienced attendant constantly on duty during the night and available whenever Thaw wants him.

"HOBBLES" IMPEDE DANCERS

Smaller Steps and Slower Pace Now The Vogue In England—"The Merry Widow" Still Popular

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Dancing authorities here have predicted a great change in the dancing of this season. Not only have the morning times ceased to do with the change, but the fashion has gone still, to a great extent, to certain dances, including those so popular with the late, King Edward, who delighted to watch the "rushing" along in deux-temps.

The Georgian dances of the eighties are now being substituted for the Edwardian figures. The general effect of the waltz will be calm and slow, to admit of the smaller steps of the ladies, necessitated by the narrower skirts in fashion. Still, although square dances are becoming more and more popular, there is still to be seen the lancers at some of the select private dances.

One of the still popular dances is the waltz introduced by "The Merry Widow." She dancers break off in the middle and take turns. This is to go yet apart again, and do pretty little steps of their own in a corner, and many not in a corner. Certain gliding dances are also coming into favor, but very slowly. It is expected, however, that the modern ways of dancing the dances of the eighties will be in full swing by the time the Coronation season will have arrived. Among the revivals will be the old English country dances and singing dances, together with the musica quadrilles.

Itching Scalp Ceases After One Application

J. V. DOYLE IS WILLING TO GUARANTEE PARISIAN SAGE BECAUSE HE KNOWS IT GIVES SATISFACTION TO WHO USE IT.

Most druggists know that there is no hair preparation that gives so much satisfaction as Parisian Sage which is now on sale all over Canada. The reasons are many.

A large, generous bottle for 50 cents.

The only hair tonic that is sure to kill the dandruff germs.

A rigid guarantee to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

Keeps the scalp cool in summer and free from unpleasant odors.

Will make any women's hair luxuriously charming in one week.

Grows hair and makes it soft, brilliant and luxuriant.

And here's more proof:

Some fourteen years ago I had typhoid fever. It caused me to nearly all fall out. I have since used and tried several hair tonics and renewers, but nothing ever made my hair grow in until I tried a bottle of Parisian Sage. The use of Parisian Sage cooled and cleansed the scalp, removed all the dandruff and left my hair silky and sheer in appearance, besides making the new hair grow fast. To-day I have an abundance of hair, hardly any gray hairs, and no dandruff.

Is it any wonder that I praise Parisian Sage?—Mrs. Lizzie M. Moody, 1936 Bainbridge St., Manchester, Va., April 2, '09.

Leading druggists everywhere sell Parisian Sage. J. V. Doyle sells it in Belleville. He owns, on the money-back plan. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package. Mail orders filled by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., sole Canadian makers.

Kingston Board Against Reciprocity.

Kingston, Nov. 17.—The Board of Trade, by a unanimous vote, passed a resolution against reciprocity in trade between Canada and the United States. The members are convinced that lowering of the Canadian customs would be injurious to all Canadian interests. They believe that the tariff should be framed as to encourage investment of Canadian capital in Canadian enterprises, and to transfer to workshops here the manufacture of goods which we now import from other countries, principally from the States.

THE LIMITATION SCHEME.

Lord Robert Cecil's Reform For the Anglican Church.

Lord Robert Cecil, who has startled Church of England people by proposing that in future incumbents should hold office only for a short term of years, as a kind of probationary period, owns a press representative a full explanation of his scheme for Church reform.

Lord Robert, who was at his country home at Chelwood Gate, asked me to make it plain that he had no intention to attack the clergy, say the writer.

"I regard them, collectively, as a most admirable body of men," he said, "and they have done and are doing splendid work.

"It is surprising that an incumbent should be appointed for a term of, say, five years; do not intend that the presentation of the patron should be interfered with, or that the institution by the bishop should be abandoned.

"If, however, the clergymen is not satisfactory, for any reason to the parish to which he is presented the bishop should, I think, be empowered to refuse to institute him.

"In arriving at a decision on this point, I would have the bishop take into consideration any representations made to him by the parishioners, who ought to have a church council to represent them.

"At present there is nothing which the laity can do in any effect, and that is why there is not so much interest in the church councils as there ought to be.

"Power to appeal to the Archbishop should also be allowed to the council in certain cases. The bishop might hold strong views on some ecclesiastical matters, and refuse an institution which the council thought ought to be made. I would, therefore, like to have an appeal to a higher court against any literature of the power.

"On the other hand, the clergyman should not be too much at the mercy of the people. A man might be objectionable to a parish at first through no fault of his own, but simply because he tried to do his duty better than his predecessors. In such a case, a five years' tenure would be sufficient either to win the good-will of the people or to prove that the clergyman was not suited to the parish.

"The object of my scheme is principally to provide some remedy against the law-breakers, the negligent, incompetent quarrelsome, or immoral among the clergy.

"There are 12,000 or more incumbents in the Church, and that is too large a number to hold complete freehold of office.

"We do not give such tenure to any other class of people except the judges of the High Courts, and they are, theoretically, capable of removal on petition.

"As to the situation of a man whose institution was refused at the end of the five years, it is possible that he might find another field for his labors.

"There ought to be a system of clergy pensions, and a man who otherwise was not instituted through no fault of his own but because of age or infirmity, he should be placed beyond the danger of want.

"The diocese should be broken up into districts. There ought to be a bishop for every county and for each of the great towns. That is not an extravagant proposal at all, and the Church should be able to pay them suitable salaries. I would have cheaper bishops."

Precipices In the Himalayas.

There is one remarkable peculiarity of the series of Himalayan ranges between the Indus Valley and the Central Asian watershed—they are one after another not right across the ridges. The reason for this is that the streams were there before the ranges were formed, and as by the trinkling of the earth's crust, the ranges rose they cut their way in the gorges through them and maintained their flow.

Nanga Parbat is part of the true and principal Himalayan range, and its summit rises to fife stupendous altitude above sea level of 26,630 feet. Close to its foot, not more than ten miles in horizontal distance from the peak, the Indus flows through a desert gorge, and here the height above sea level of the river bed is not much above 3,000 feet.

It is easy to conceive from these figures on how vast a scale nature's architecture is here set up. I have never been down this part of the Indus gorge, but a friend of mine, who was there, told me that the path along the side of the gorge is in places perilously narrow and carried across precipices of such appalling character that at one point a servant of his, who lost his footing, fell a mile in vertical height, and was, of course, smashed to atoms.

One side of Nanga Parbat sinks to this gorge by a series of ridges and ravines—that is the Chilas side. The other side—the north side of the mountain, for it is on a triangular base, are like-wise defined by long valleys, one of which is filled by the great Tarshing glacier.

COLOSSAL LONDON.

Some Facts and Figures About the World's Metropolis.

No man living has ever yet seen London as it really is. There are, in fact, twelve Londons, one of which—the county—is controlled by 4,085 popularly elected men and women who sit on 144 public bodies.

The biggest London of all—is the Police London, covering 693 square miles; the smallest is the City of London, extending to one square mile.

When one speaks of London one must put an adjective in to describe which London is referred to. There are the Londons with their areas as known to the law:

City of London, one square mile.
County of London, 116 square miles.
Water London, 537 square miles.
Postal London, 230 square miles.
Telephone London, 693 square miles.
Parliamentary London, 117 square miles.
Ecclesiastical London, 130 square miles.
Greater London, 693 square miles.
Police London, 693 square miles.
Police Court London, 114 square miles.
Central Criminal Court, London, 620 square miles.
County Court London, 395 square miles.

The smallest population of one London is 36,000—in the City—and the largest population 6,500,000—in Greater London.

In the County of London 16,000 companies own property of the yearly value of $70,000,000, the rentals of which are about $100,000,000 a year, and yet they have no vote for the election of a single person to represent them in the House of Commons every year of $25,000,000 in rates. They pay one-third of the total rates raised. Less than half the people who have a vote for the rates they pay ever use them. So far as taxation and representation is concerned a third of the wage-earning property has no share in controlling the expenditure. In Bermondsey and Poplar half the rates paid have no voters behind them.

Every year at least 7,000 Londoners die violent or sudden deaths, 300 are sent to prison for long terms, and 120,000 are brought before the police magistrates on various charges.

Within the 25 square miles of the County of London there are 135,000 people who have come from foreign countries. Russians number 30,000, Germans 27,000, Poles 15,000, Irish 11,000, Italians 40,000, and Americans 5,000.

On the average there are ten fires a day in London. To keep the metropolis well provided from fire nearly $1,500,000 a year is spent by the County Council.

The water, which is abundant and pure, is poured through millions of pipes daily, by one responsible body, into the homes of seven million people, a population nearly equal to that of Norway and Sweden, about the same as that of the Dominion of Canada, more than two million above that of Australia and New Zealand combined, and larger than the whole population of Scotland and Wales. This population of seven millions uses up 224,000,000 gallons of water a day, drawn from the reservoirs, in which there are always over 11,000,000,000 gallons ready for use.

The wealth of London is astounding and can only be gauged by taking the twenty-eight boroughs of which it is composed and comparing the yearly value of their property with that of provincial towns. Thus Westminster is richer than Glasgow, the one square mile of the city than the whole of Liverpool or Manchester; Kensington is richer than Leeds, and Lambeth richer than Bristol, Sheffield or Newcastle.

The smallest boroughs of London—Stoke Newington—has more valuable property than some twenty-eight of the largest provincial towns, such as Exeter, Yarmouth, Londonderry, and Cork.

There are more people in Islington than in Edinburgh, more than in Lambeth and Stepney than in Brad-ford, more in Camberwell than in Hull or Nottingham. Twenty-four of the London boroughs have populations equal to some of the thirty greatest towns of the kingdom, while the remaining four have populations equal to some fifty other towns, the smallest of which is Burton-on-Trent.

A Lucky Escape.

The following incident is not an invention of imaginative journalism, but an actual fact. A gentleman, who resides near Bolton, in England, was proceeding leisurely to church when the ringing of the church bells intimated to him that he was not quite as early as he had thought. Taking out his watch, to look at the time, he heard a noise as of a pistol report, and at the same time felt a jar in his hand and on looking at his watch saw that it had apparently exploded. Recovering his composure, he found on examination that the cause was as follows: Some boys had been throwing stones high in the air, and just at the critical moment of taking out his watch, and holding it face upwards, it had received the impact of a falling stone. Certainly a lucky escape from personal injury, the watch being minus glass, hands and the dial broken, denoting the force of the fall.

Roses For Colds.

The rose as a preventive of colds is a new idea demonstrated at the London Medical Exhibition, which opened at the Horticultural Hall recently. A Brighton firm manufacturing rose essentials has taken the essence of the lovely dark-red rose called "Duke of Edinburgh," and combined it, in tablet form, with the antiseptic formalin, claiming that one of these tablets taken in the morning will ensure against catching cold for the rest of the day.

Getting Back at Papa.

Rev. Dr. Fourthly, mildly reproving his youngest daughter:

"Florence, do you think it is appropriate for you to whistle that hymn in church? It looks as if you went there merely to be seen."

Miss Florence Fourthly, aged 12, demurely responding:

"Well, papa, all you go to church for is to be heard, isn't it?"

To the Scrapheap!

When His Majesty's battleship Dreadnought was launched in February, 1906, one had the feeling that finality had surely been reached in the matter of naval construction; but the navies of the world have been making giant strides ever since.

First came greater Dreadnoughts, and then Dreadnought-cruisers, Bristol sea scouts, and Tribal destroyers, entirely new fashions, followed by great steps in the use of oil-fuel.

And in the past few weeks several startling announcements have been put forward. Within a few days we had talk of monster new battleships, and a report of a coming small de stroyer, of a height only 26 inches above the water, and with only two guns, but of such power and rapidity of fire that the money spent on Dreadnoughts and super-Dreadnoughts might as well have been thrown into the sea. The guns are to be of 11 inch bore, but will fire a weight of 5,922 pounds.

Now we forget the battleship cruiser Lion, launched only the other day. She is to be more powerful than the most powerful Dreadnought, and faster than the fastest destroyer. The St. Vincent, the largest Dreadnought now in commission, has only 19,250 tons displacement, as against the Lion's 26,560 tons.

The Mahdi's Lamp.

A most interesting relic of the battle of Omdurman and of the destruction of the tomb of the Mahdi has just been deposited in the Museum of the Royal United Service Institution in Whitehall. It is the actual glass lantern, composed of red and white glass, which was found hanging over the tomb on that eventful day in the early part of September, 1898. It has since been in the possession of Sir John Lancers, who, it may be remembered took part in the famous charge, and it has now been removed from the mess room and placed in the Whitehall collection. Here also may be seen the metal key of the tomb, showing the disastrous effect of the repeated shelling by the 7th Howitzer Field Artillery.

Loaded In 1882—Fired In 1910.

A singular accident has occurred at Fort Keid Bey. Messrs. Parelli & Co., of Alexandria, purchased from the Government some old cannons, with the object of melting them down. As they were being dismounted, it was found that they apparently been left in one of the cannons since the event of 1882, went off with a terrific report. A French workman sustained some terrible injuries that his life is despaired of, while the son of Mr. Parelli, a youth of 19, was killed outright. Three native Egyptian workmen in addition received injuries more or less severe.

A Fish Festival.

There were harvest festivals in many churches, but it was left to an ancient London city church to do something unique. Large quantities of fish were among the harvest offerings at St. Magnus the Martyr, near London Bridge. The church is in immediate proximity to Billingsgate Fish Market, and this accounted for the unusual nature of the gifts.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

Happenings of Interest to Intelligencer Readers In all Parts of the World.

Lords Beginning To Repent.

Now Declaring For Reform of Upper House--Result Regarded as a Victory For the Liberals, Says London Cable.

London, Nov. 17.--Pending Premier Asquith's official statement before Parliament on Friday, small hope is entertained of clearing up the involved situation, which has now resulted from the sudden change introduced by Lord Lansdowne's call for the veto bill. The feature which stands out in the present position of the parties is that the House of Lords finally has awakened to the absolute necessity of underhand self-reform. The Radical leaders view this late repentance with the utmost suspicion, and it remains to be seen whether it will eventuate in an agreement, which the abortive veto conference failed to achieve.

The Parliamentary lobbies yesterday were full of rumors of all kinds--that the King has refused to give the Prime Minister guarantee to create the number of peers sufficient for the Government's purpose of reforming the House of Lords; that the Ministry would resign; that another party conference would be held.

Nothing definite, however, is known, beyond the fact that all preparations are going on for a general election, and local informed opinion last night believed that, as the Government declines to accept any amendments to the veto bill, Lord Lansdowne, who consulted with Mr. Balfour and other leaders, will either decline to proceed with the bill, or the House of Lords will reject it on the second reading on Monday, and that the dissolution of Parliament will be announced next week.

Lord Rosebery, in the House of Lords yesterday, after declaring that the House stood in a very grave position, announced his intention to ask for facilities for the discussion of his plan for the reform of the House. It is believed that the Lords will proceed immediately with debates on this question.

After meetings of the Privy Council and the Cabinet yesterday afternoon, the Earl of Crewe intimated the veto bill in the House of Lords, where it passed its first reading.

The morning news, in a serious review of the situation, says:

"In a survey of the theoretical possibilities of the political situation, one is compelled to take into consideration the practically inconceivable proposition that the crown may play itself with the House of Lords to prevent the legalizing of the people's judgment. Such a move would mean a monarchical revolution, added to the peers' revolution, and in such an event the gravest happenings that the country has noted in centuries are to be expected."

A Checkmate.

London, Nov. 17.--(C.A.P. Cable.)--Tuesday Lord Lansdowne called a check to the Government; yesterday the Government got out of the difficulty, and replied with a checkmate. In the House of Lords Lord Crewe, responding to Lansdowne's politic demand for the Parliament bill promised all that "Ask" or leave in" terms. The Government was "willing and anxious to put the bill down for discussion, but were not prepared to accept any amendment on it."

Lansdowne said this was reducing the thing to a farce, and claimed that, because the conference failed, it was no reason that Parliament should be deprived of the opportunity of dealing with these tremendous problems.

Lansdowne declared emphatically for reform of the Upper House. He said it should be reduced in numbers, and no peer should sit purely by hereditary right. The House should be reinformed from outside by nomination or election. The Commons would be strongly supreme in finance.

Lord Crewe wished for an early date for the second reading of the Parliament bill, and Lansdowne replied that if there were no opportunity

Intimately associated with the light perception apparatus are those nerves, structures which control the internal and external muscular structures, by which the form of the lens, the aperture of the pupil, and the position of the eyeball are regulated. The intricate adjustment of the nervo-muscular structures of the organs of vision required to produce the ordinary binocular vision is passingly wonderful. A bit of reflection will make us how dependent are man and all other forms of animal life on the function of vision. One very existence, civilization and type of the future now built up in this most delicate little apparatus.

The functioning of such a delicate organ must of necessity require the expenditure of a great amount of nervous energy and it is not to be marvelled at that a disturbance of this finely adjusted nervous apparatus would make itself felt in a disturbance of the nervous equilibrium of the rest of the organism.

A Generous Offer

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

There are hundreds of people in this vicinity at this season of the year who need a blood-making body-building and strength-creating tonic.

It is to all such, which comprise old people, delicate children, the weak run-down and convalescents, and all those who suffer from chronic coughs and colds, that we ask to come to our store and get a bottle of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil.

If it fails to build you up, create strength and restore normal health we will cheerfully return the money paid us for it. We take all the chance—you take none. As a matter of fact, we don't take much chance either, because Vinol rarely disappoints us. Come in and get a bottle on these terms. J. C. McKeown, druggist.

AT GRIFFIN'S.

The bill at Griffin's for the last 3 days of this week is headed by Hilliard and Phillips, presenting their own comedy and dramatic playlettes. These people are finished dramatic artists and were featured with their own repertoire company to a number of seasons. From the flattering press notices this act should be a big drawing attraction.

Walton Bros., aerial artists, and Billie Kleiner, comedian and cornet soloist, formerly with West's Minstrels, round out the balance of this excellent bill.

In Nuremburg, Germany, there still is in use more than 1200 houses that were built in the sixteenth century and more than 3500 prints in the town.

Good Form

When a child's birthday happens to fall on a special holiday the colors appropriate to that occasion can be used in the candles, as half and blue for the 22d of February; red, white and blue for the Independence day child and holly-painted candles for the Christmas birthday cake.

Wonderful color combinations can be made with colored icings—put on with a pastry tube in designs—and candies to harmonize or form a contrast.

Every child should be given the privilege of cutting his own birthday cake.

Cunning birthday cakes of tiny proportions can be bought for babies' first birthday. The one candle is larger than those used later and sometimes can be bought with the child's first name decorating it in gilt letters.

When for any reason a child has been unable to come to the birthday party at the last minute his slice of cake, with candle attached, is wrapped in parafin paper and sent to him.

Sponge cake or a simple corn cake batter is the best birthday cake for young children, as many mothers are fussy about their children eating rich food.

Davied Kidneys.
Procure some lamb or beef kidneys, remove the skin and vein or cord and thoroughly wash with a sharp knife, rub the kidneys with a pepper and salt seasoning, then brush with bacon fat and broil, or they may be fried with bacon over a very hot fire of a broiling fire is not to be had. Now prepare a sauce from two-thirds of a cupful of scalded milk thickened with butter and flour rubbed to a paste, using a tablespoonful of each, when lightly cooked and smooth, remove to the back of the range and stir in an egg yolk, a little salt and pepper, one-half teaspoonful of finely minced parsley and one teaspoonful of lemon juice. The kidneys are fried with bacon fat, the gravy left in the pan may be added to the sauce if desired. Place each kidney on a round of buttered toast, dot with butter and pour the sauce around each slice of toast, placing one spoonful on top of each, and serve at once.

A Puzzle Tea.

"Everybody to make her own tea" was the puzzling addition to a verbal afternoon tea invitation issued last week from a mountain camp. Was it to be individual tea pots, or individual messy cheesecloth bags of tea with which they were to conjure? was the question of the guests as they assembled on the wide verands. But when a tray came around with a small portion of green cardboard for each it fell out that this was a puzzle T which was to be put together before tea was served. The person who got her T together first was given a package of choice tea.

Oyster Recipes.

A girl who cooks oysters a dozen ways in her chafing dish often prepares them quickly by heating a pint of them with a couple of tablespoonfuls of butter until the edges curl and then seasoning them with salt, paprika and a teaspoonful of lemon juice and stirring in the well beaten yolks of two eggs.

To pan oysters deliciously plump a pint of them first in a couple of tablespoonfuls of butter and then turn in half a cupful of rich cream and a tablespoonful of sherry with salt and paprika.

Pompadour Pudding.

Mix two tablespoonfuls cornstarch in a little cold milk and add yolks of three eggs, three-quarters cup of sugar and a little salt. Pour this into one quart of scalding boiling milk and cook in a double boiler until it thickens. Flavor with vanilla and beat well, then pour into a pudding dish. While warm cover with the following frosting: Beat whites of the three eggs stiff, add a half cup of sugar, three tablespoons of cocoa or grated chocolate melted over hot water. Put into oven to stiffen. Serve very cold.

ENTERTAINING IN JAPAN.

How One Household Helps the Other.

"Entertaining in Japan is a fine art, but it has phases that occidental hostesses would not care to imitate," says a traveler lately returned from the Flowery Kingdom. "The resources of the Japanese menage appear to be unlimited, and the butler manages everything. The hostess never has to plan beyond selecting the color of the flowers that are to be used in the decoration. The host may bring home twenty unexpected guests, and with scarcely a day delay the meal is served as perfectly as if the staff had been notified. This abundance at short notice does not mean that supplies are laid in by the cargo. It reveals instead a wonderful system of borrowing, which, while it may be convenient at times, has unpleasant possibilities. One story is told of a man who, having sent to Australia for some mutton, arranged a dinner in its honor. At the appointed time a delicious dinner appeared, but no mutton. Investigation brought to light the fact that it had been loaned to a previous night to the cook of the dean of the host for a dinner which he was entertaining the very man with whom the original owner of the mutton had hoped by its aid to make a business deal. There was consolation, however, in the fact, which came out at the same time, that a wonderful dinner given by the mutton man a week before had been entirely borrowed from the foe."

Beautifying the Home.

In many homes there is a space between the windows which is always difficult to usefully and effectually fill. In such a space one way in which this space may be inexpensively utilized to the shape of a handy bookcase made to fit and arranged with a small shelf side brackets.

The bookcase in the illustration is shown in a very plain state, but this is done in order to illustrate more clearly the way in which it can be made.

Two shallow packing cases about ten inches in depth and of a width to fit between the two windows should be obtained, and this should prove no difficults matter, as cases of every conceivable size and shape may be procured at most shops for very little. These two cases should be placed one upon the top of the other in the manner indicated in the small sketch in the left hand top corner and fastened together with screws. Under the lower box at each corner screw legs and screwed on. The two sides of the boxes that rest on each other in the center will form one strong shelf, and the other shelves may be easily made by cutting wood to fit across the boxes and fastening square pieces of wood beveled at the edges with triangular pieces of wood to them.

This is the state of the bookcase as illustrated. The decoration is a matter of personal preference. It may be painted or stained, or if fitted into an informal apartment the wood may be covered with chintz to match the hangings of the room.

Fashionable Birdcages.

There is a change of fashion in birdcages from the circle in common with everything else, and if the fashion boll in a household has his smart bleaker or fifth wire above the canary or bullfinch in the same home is probably no longer confined to the familiar cage of gilded wire.

For if so he is not a fashionable bird.

Curious little cages of enameled or oxidized metal, resembling a Japanese lantern filled with birds, in oriental pictures in shape and rather heavy and unsuitable looking for so airy a guest, are among the latest styles in bird houses. They are called pagoda cages. Chalets of wood or silver are also carved in a style which suggests the Swiss chalets as represented by the Swiss woodcarvers and seen on hill slopes in the land of William Tell. These, according to knowing bird lovers, have many little sliding improvements which make for cleanliness and comfort, and a larger splendidly airy and attractive model is built along colonial lines.

ENTERTAINING IN SPAIN.

Curious Custom Which Is Followed at Every Dinner.

Spain is the only country in which the following curious custom is followed at every dinner. Each guest is provided with a small bowl of water, in which he dips his fingers after the meal is finished. Then he takes a napkin and dries them. Finally he takes the bowl and drinks the water. This is done to show that the hands have been washed clean of the food.

BREAKFAST CAKES.

You'll Like Them Some Cold Morning This Winter.

All breakfast cakes should be served piping hot on heated plates. They are best if made after the family is at table, for the least standing produces the leathery quality which makes them so indigestible. A hot cake, lightly made and daintily cooked, is as digestible as any breakfast food to the average stomach.

When cooked a thick iron griddle must be used, and a good way to grease the tin is to smear it with a rag lightly dipped in fresh lard. If grease of any sort is lavishly used the cakes will be fried, of tough consistency and without the delicate taste required. Maple syrup, strained honey and brown sugar are proper sweeteners for any cake, but these must be put on only after the delicacy has been buttered. Never turn the cake over until one side has browned. One turn is enough.

Sour Milk Griddlecake.—Take two and one-half cups flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, two cups of sour milk and one egg and one-quarter teaspoonful soda. Mix and sift flour, soda and salt together, add one egg well beaten and the sour milk. Drop by tablespoonfuls on the smoking griddle and, when puffed up and covered with the edges, turn. Maple sirup goes especially well with these cakes.

Stale Bread Cakes.—Take one and one-half cups of fine stale breadcrumbs, one and one-half cups of scalded sweet milk, two tablespoons of butter, two eggs, one-half cup of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, one tablespoon of baking powder. Pour the milk and butter with the crumbs and let stand one hour, then add the eggs well beaten, then flour, salt and baking powder. Use these all mixed together and sifted. Cook as directed above. Eat with brown sugar or molasses.

Buckwheat Cakes.—Take one-half cup of fine breadcrumbs, two cups of scalded milk, one-half cup of flour, one-quarter yeast cake, one-half cup of lukewarm water, one and three-quarter cups of buckwheat flour, one tablespoon of molasses. Pour milk over the crumbs and let stand one hour. Add salt, yeast cake dissolved in lukewarm water and then buckwheat sufficient to make a thick batter. Let this rise overnight. In the morning stir well and put in molasses and one-quarter teaspoon of soda dissolved in the quantity of lukewarm water given and cook as directed above. Eat with maple sirup.

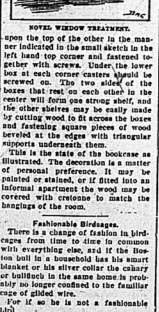
Southern Waffles.—Take one and three-quarter cups of flour, three teaspoons of baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt, one cup of milk, the yolk of two eggs, the whites of two eggs and one tablespoon of melted butter. Mix and sift the dry ingredients, gradually add the milk, yolk of eggs well beaten, butter and whites of eggs whipped stiff; then cook in a round or square waffle iron. Strained honey is delicious with these.

Made Over Rugs.
As a guide to housekeepers who have old carpets to be woven into rugs it will take four pounds of unwashed carpet, or three running yards to make a doormat size rug measuring 1.6 by 2.6 feet and cost $1.50 for weaving.
A hearth rug 2.6 by 5 feet will take twelve pounds of brussels or ten pounds of ingrain carpet.
A smaller rug for placing before the bureau takes eight pounds of carpet or six running yards.
A rug measuring 6 by 6 feet will require four yards of carpet, or about forty-two of ingrain, averaging about thirty-six yards.

Novel Place Cards.

Instead of place cards, lettuce beds made of cress, lettuce or parsley, on mirrors at the bottom were used for a girls' luncheon the other day. The guests were told upon getting to the dining room that each must find the clever white cold her her seat, and there was great fun and excitement until each one looked inside of a lettuce bed and saw her own name written and dropped into the chair in front of it.

How to Can Beets.



Wash clean, put in boiling water, boil till tender; meanwhile keep hot vinegar (and sugar to sweeten) on the stove; take each beet and rinse quickly in cold water, slip the skin off, slice as hot as possible in the hot (not boiling) vinegar; seal as usual.

Gingerbread Without Eggs.

Two cupfuls of molasses, one cupful of sour cream, one teaspoonful each of soda and ginger, four and one-half cupfuls of flour; bake slowly. It may fall slightly, but will be light.

To Avoid Blisters.

No blister will form if white of egg and olive oil are mixed quickly in equal portions and applied to a burn. The place should be covered with a piece of soft linen. Discolorations of soda is more quickly obtained and is quite as good. It should be used dry; rub gently over the burn and cover with cold water. A bad blister was covered with a piece of linen wet in a per cent solution of bicarbonate of soda, kept wet for a day or two, and no scar remained, and there was little pain.

SCENES ABOUT IN STAINED GLASS ATTIC.

English history knows, rode (through the town of Coventry clad principally in her hair. Ever since she died she has a stained glass effect that is quite realistic.

A Fashion Tip.

"Are spearheads coming out?" is a question frequently asked and is always unsurprisingly answered, "They are not."

Happily for the peace of mind of all womankind the silver waist never has gone out and never will.

As long as our skies rain dust and dirt so long does every woman feel that after one or two wearings her shirt waist is unfit for use and must go to be laundered. Therefore she makes her waists detachable and replaces in the fresh crisp one that she does. To be sure, nothing looks cooler and crisper than the fresh, strictly tailored shirt waist, but to be strictly true its looks belie it, as it is usually rumpled.

The hint is given that waists of contrasting colors are to be worn this fall, but even these will be worn more unpressed with taste and still. They are hard to handle successfully.

Too Kind.

"Can you tell me," said the cool looking young lady to the policeman confidentially approaching the young man at the soda fountain, "the most agreeable way to take castor oil?"

"Oh, yes, indeed," replied the man, with great politeness. "And while you are waiting—ah—allow me to ask, you have a glass of soda?"

"Oh, thank you," said the young lady as he set it down before her. The day being hot, in a few moments she had drained the glass.

"Is the prescription ready?" she asked sweetly, wiping her mouth.

The young man's eyes gleamed with benevolence. "The prescription," he said, tapping the glass, "seems to be."

"Do you mean to say I've drunk it?" she screamed. "But it wasn't for me; it was for my little brother!" And she swept from the drug store.

"It's too bad," sighed the young man who was also "on duty" as "counter customers."

But she isn't any more. Daily the soda fountain young man watches her enter the drug store across the way, where they look before they leap.—Washington Post.

A Rare Check.

At Guy's Hospital, London, is a patient for whom a new check is being provided. After an operation he was left with a large hollow, devoid of skin, in the cheek. Ten days ago a flap of skin was partially removed from the biceps, and the Daily Mail says, and stitched to the side of the nose and mouth. The arm was strapped in a position against the head, and there it remains until the transfer is complete.

Candy Who Murdered Constable Hanged This Morning

KEPT COMPOSURE

Hangman's Identity a Mystery —Large Number of Spectators.

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—Candy is dead. At 7.38 this morning the last chapter was closed, and the law was avenged for the murder in May of Constables O'Connel and Mortimer, when Timothy Candy was hanged in the jail yard. Throughout he maintained wonderful composure, meeting death without a tremor and never flinching. The man's identity is a secret except that he came from Toronto recommended by Radcliff. He is probably Kilk. Five hundred people, with a good percentage of women and children, witnessed the hanging, fining every place of view overlooking the jail.

SUFFRAGISTS ARE ON THE WAR PATH IN ENGLAND AGAIN

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 18.—Suffragists under Emmeline Pankhurst made an attack on the Parliament Buildings soon after the session opened today. Chambers of women and one many were arrested. Nine were seriously hurt, but scores received injuries from the clubs of the police.

COUNTS MARRIAGE TO MISS MCKENZIE MAY STOP FLYING

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Comte Jacques de Lesseps may never fly again. Such was the opinion expressed today at the Hotel St. Regis by his brother, the Comte Bertrand de Lesseps, and his sister, the Montesse de la Begassiere.

They say they think their brother, now that his engagement to Miss Grace Mackenzie, of Toronto, has been announced, will probably rest on his laurels gained in one year of brilliant aviation work and will give up flying. Should he again fly, it will be probably simply for his own pleasure and amusement.

SHELDON CREDITORS TO GET THREE LITTLE CENTS ON THE DOLLAR

MONTREAL, Nov. 17. — Three cents on the dollar is all the Sheldon creditors will get for their money. A meeting of the inspectors who were appointed by the court to run a fine tough comb through the visible assets in the missing wizard of finance left behind him in his flight will meet this afternoon to draw up a report. It will be rather unsatisfactory for the ha'eyon days. In fact, it will be enough to make a sour dough miner believe once and for all that no mountain stream ever panned gold.

INDIA SCENE OF CROWNING

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Daily Mail, commenting on the proposal to crown the King and Queen in India in 1912, says: "We may look for visits to Canada, Australia and New Zealand in due course, and courts held at Ottawa, Melbourne and Wellington, bearing fresh witness to the grandeur and power of the British throne."

Announcement has been made that the King and Queen may visit India and hold a coronation Jan. 1, 1912.

GENERAL ELECTION IN GREAT BRITAIN BEFORE CHRISTMAS

Asquith States That It Is Useless To Continue The Farce Any Longer--Diss outon To Take Place Nov 28.

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 18.—According to the announcement of Premier Asquith today, the British Parliament will be dissolved November 28th, ensuring a general election before Christmas.

"It is useless to continue the farce longer," were the Premier's opening words as he rose to address the House of Commons. His manner was defiant and he made it plain that the Liberals were determined that the people should be given a right to say whether the Lords were to be retained as a part of the British legislative system or not. He maintained that to reform the House and at the same time allow them to retain the right of veto of necessary legislation is simply to make a farce of the Government.

Suggestions of a compromise that have been made are not done for the interests of all the people. The Government has a distinct programme planned, and it will be carried out. The Cabinet has discussed all suggestions of compromise and has decided that none of them are feasible. It has, therefore, recommended to King George that Parliament be dissolved.

The announcement was received with loud cheers by the benches of the Liberal members. After the session adjourned they hurried to congratulate the members of the Cabinet and then started the machinery of election working.

News that a break had come and that compromise proposals had been rejected was given to the House of Lords by Earl Crewe, leader of the Liberals. It is possible that all hereditary members believed that the announcement meant the end of their careers in the public life of the Empire.

The last general elections were held only ten months ago, the issue being the Lloyd-George budget. The result was not conclusive, as it did not give the Liberals a working majority without the aid of the Nationalists and Laborites. Members elected were as follows: Unionists, 273; Liberals, 275; Laborites, 40; Nationalists, 82.

It is the intention of the Government to pass the essential features of the budget, namely, income tax and land duty, sinking fund provision and remove pauper disqualification for old age pensions. Asquith said he hoped up to the last moment the veto conference would reach a settlement. It would be useless to try for an agreement with party exhaustion. "The result," he said, "is that we revert to a state of war. The Lords will be given an opportunity of expressing an opinion on the Government's Veto Bill next week. There is no question of amendment or transformation. It is a question of acceptance or rejection.

Bold Plot To Lynch A Bad Negro Made at Fort Erie Last Night

Made Attempt To Rob White Woman--Lynching Averted By Promptness of Ontario Officers

BUFFALO, Nov. 17.—A lynching was averted in Fort Erie late last night before last only by Officer Peters of the Ontario police, who is assigned to the Fort Erie detail, forestalling the lynchers and removing Robert Bright, a negro prisoner they were after, to Bridgeburg, a short while before some 10 men and a rope arrived at the village lockup to inflict summary punishment on the object of their search.

Bright is accused of attempting to hold up Mrs. Coakley, of Idlewild St., on Monday evening. Yesterday afternoon he was arraigned before Magistrate Rathbun. He pleaded not guilty, but after the preliminary hearing the magistrate held him for the action of the grand jury and he was taken to the Welland jail.

Mrs. Coakley was walking home from a neighbor's Wednesday night and while on the hill was attacked by a negro. She screamed and hit him in the face and somebody shouted to inquire what was the matter. The negro ran. Robbery is believed to have been his purpose.

A couple of men whom Mrs. Coakley notified of the holdup pursued negro and Low Dungas, a few moments later, captured Bright as he was about to board the ferry boat. He was identified as the man who attacked Mrs. Coakley, but he denied the charge. His captors turned him over to Peters, the provincial policeman, who confined him in the Fort Erie lock-up. Bright is 25 years old and lives in Fort Erie. He had always had a good reputation.

When the story of the hold-up gained circulation Tuesday, intensely excitement ran high and late that evening there was talk of lynching. Officer Peters got wind of this and quietly transferred his prisoner to the Bridgeburg lock-up. About 10 o'clock in the evening a crowd of 40 men collected on Niagara street, as if by previous arrangement and threats of lynching the prisoner were openly made. Somebody procured a rope and the crowd marched to the lockup.

This was found to be empty.

"Let's go to Bridgeburg and get him," somebody shouted.

The little crowd started quickly enough but as it passed through the village, headed, towards the bridge cooler judgment had its effect. Some dropped out to go home, and before the corporation limits were reached the lynching party had dwindled to less than a dozen and these gave up the undertaking.

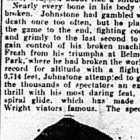
HE PAYS PRICE OF HIS DARING

Ralph Johnston, The Aviator Instantly Killed At Denver.



MOUNTS 500 FEET

Weak Tip of Wing Gives Way And Birdman Plunges To His Death.

Denver, Col., Nov. 18.—With one wing tip of his machine crumpled like a piece of paper Ralph Johnstone, the brilliant young aviator, holder of the world's altitude record, yesterday dropped like a plummet from a height of five hundred feet into the inclosure at Overland Park aviation field, and was instantly killed.

The spectators reached him, his body lay beneath the engine of the biplane, with the white planes, that had failed him in his time of need, wrapped about like a shroud.

Nearly every bone in his body was broken. Johnstone had gambled with death once too often, but he played the game to the end, fighting coolly and grimly to the last second to regain control of his broken machine. Fresh from his triumphs at Belmont Park, where he had broken the world's record for altitude with a flight of 9,714 feet, Johnstone attempted to give the thousands of spectators an extra thrill with his most daring feat, the spiral glide, which has made the Wright viators famous. The spectators got their thrill, but it cost Johnstone his life.

RALPH JOHNSTONE.

In the fatal flight Johnstone, after a few circuits of the course to gain height, headed toward the foothills. Still ascending, he swept back in a big circle, and, as he reached the north end of the enclosure, started the spiral glide. He was then at an altitude of about 800 feet. With his planes tilted at an angle of almost 90 degrees, he swooped down in a narrow circle, the aeroplane seeming to turn almost in its own length. As he started the second circle, the middle spar, which bears the left side of the lower plane, gave way, and the wing tip of the upper and lower planes folded up, as though they had been hinged. For a second Johnstone attempted to right the plane by warping the other wing tip. Then the horrified spectators saw the plane swerve like a wounded bird, and plunge straight toward the earth.

SETTLEMENT REACHED

C. N. R. And Yeoman Come To Terms And Work Is Proceeded With--Men To Be Put To Work Here

A representative of The Intelligencer last evening, in conversation with Mr. McGinnis, a contractor of the C. N. R. for this section, was informed that the work of grading is progressing favorably. At present four gangs are at work grading and preparing the roadbed in the Township of Sidney near Trenton, and two brought down here to work on the gangs are at work about half way roadbed in the city and vicinity.

between this city and Trenton. Yesterday a satisfactory settlement was effected between the company and a foreman, which was causing some delay, and to-day the men were at work upon the place. Weather permitting, in a few days the majority of men who are at work near Trenton will be put to work here.

Mrs MacColl's Pupils Please Large Audience

Most Enjoyable Affair Held Last Evening--Pupils Throughly Proficient.

An invitation recital given by pupils of Mrs. Dr. MacColl was given last evening at St. Agnes School hall. The affair was largely attended and proved to be most enjoyable. Those taking part in the programme showed they were apt pupils of Mrs. MacColl and proficient in their various parts. The affair was a decided success in every way.

Two of those who were contributors to the pleasing programme, namely, Miss Keitha Woodley and Miss Daisy Tenny, are pupils of Miss Penny, and they, too, demonstrated their efficiency at the piano. The programme opened with a duet rendered splendidly by Misses Cooper and Adams, entitled "Gipsy Dance." Later in the evening they gave another selection entitled "Sunflower Dance."

Mrs Urquhart gave a reading which was well rendered. Piano selections were given by Misses Mabel Adams, Grace McMullen, Lorine Robinson, Keitha Woodley, Marion Adams, Lucella Harrison, Wanda Cronk, Daisy Tenny, Dorothy Grant, Stretbel Walton and Nora Scott, all of whom did exceptionally well. Violin numbers were beautifully and artistically executed by Miss Sydney McFarlane and Miss Kathleen Boote. The entertainment was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

C. N. R. GRAIN LINE

The Cobourg Post says:—Col. Sam. Hughes has been busy lately making plans and surveys for the new line of Midland to Trenton, which were laid before Mr. William Mackenzie, President; General Manager Hanna and Chief Engineer H. K. Wicksteed, and the matter was thoroughly gone over and discussed. It is stated that the Chief Engineer was instructed to go over the maps and plans and investigate the matter. The proposed line will pass through the counties of Victoria, Durham and Hastings through South Monaghan crossing Rice Lake into Northumberland. In this county the route passes through Plainville, Centreton, Carmel, Castleton, Hilton and Terra to Junction, taping the main line at Trenton.

FOUND DEAD IN HIS CHAIR

Death came suddenly last evening to Mr. John Farnsworth, who resided with his sister, Mrs. John Dalton, on Church street. The deceased was shortly after six o'clock found dead in a chair in the house. The cause of death was a stroke of apoplexy. For some time Mr. Farnsworth had been unwell, but was able to be about. He received was 44 years of age and unmarried. Recently he came here from Ottawa, Illinois. He was born in Hungerford Township, where he left some time ago for Uncle Sam's domains. He was a member of the Methodist church and a man respected by all who knew him.

HE PAYS FOR COAT TAKEN

Before Judge Deroche this morning the young man Roy Gerow was arraigned on a charge of stealing a furcoat, the property of Mr. Thomas Haslip, of this city. Gerow, 18 years, on the evening of Oct. 15th last, Mr. Haslip's coat was taken and he hung the coat up again in the place where he took it from. This morning, through his counsel, Mr. Carnew, the accused admitted the wrongful taking of the coat, which the Judge said technically amounted to theft. Restitution to the amount of $25.00 was paid into court by Mr. Haslip's loss and costs, and the accused was allowed to go on a suspended sentence of one year in the Central Prison. Mr. Anderson represented the Daily Intelligencer,

Chickens Coming Home to Roost.

Liberal newspapers are demanding sympathy because of the attacks made on the Laurier Government in the bye-election in Drummond and Arthabasca. But who taught the Nationalists to, see in every expenditure of public money for purposes of defense a deep-laid scheme to entrap Canada into Imperial wars? None other than Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself. His victory in 1896 so far as it was won in Quebec, was based upon a campaign of abuse of the Conservative Government for spending about a million dollars to arm the Canadian militia with modern rifles instead of the old Snider gas-pipes in the face of the American threats of invasion over the Venesuela affair.

Mr. Armand Lavergne, one of the leaders of the Nationalists, made an interesting remark in this connection. His father, Judge Joseph Lavergne, represented Drummond and Arthabasca in 1896 and was an intimate friend of Mr. Laurier, as the Liberal leader then was. Mr. Armand Lavergne has stated that his father ran his election of 1896 on a denunciation of Sir Charles Tupper for buying those rifles. If Sir Wilfrid Laurier taught the father to see in the spending of one million dollars for rifles a plot against the liberties of Canada, who taught the son to see a similar plot in the spending of fifty or sixty millions on a navy?

In 1896 L'Electeur, which proclaimed itself to be the organ in the city of Quebec of the Liberal paper, had this to say:—"Old Tupper has an arrangement with Chamberlain, under which we are to take part in the wars of the Empire. Some day the British office will call you, and take the son from his mother, the husband from his wife, the young man from his betrothed, and all will be sent to Africa or to India to whiten the plains with their bones."

What is worrying Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1910 is, therefore, just what his friends, on the press and on the stump, in 1896 made use of to worry his Conservative opponents, and made use of with effect. There is no occasion of extending to the members of the present Government any sympathy because of the course the Nationalists are now pursuing. The weapons of Mr. Bourassa and his associates were forged by the friend of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, which friends also showed how such weapons could be used.

GOVERNMENT WILL GO OUT OF POWER

Next Election Will End Administration of Liberals --Prestige In Quebec Is Gone--Premier Once Owned The Province.

OTTAWA, Nov. 18.—After Drummond and Arthabasca—what?

There are many phases of the political situation which it has created. Most of them are interesting. Some of them are serious, others are complicated. Some of them, such as the frantic appeals to Conservatives to vote for their political antagonists because they are reaping where they have sown—are decidedly funny. But there is one governing, and highly practical fact which emerges from the whole situation.

It is that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's hold on Quebec has gone. The Liberal explanation which perhaps is most favored, is that Drummond and Arthabasca is a peculiarly unintelligent and backward constituency, and consequently liable to sudden gusts of feeling. This is a double-edged explanation, for if this is so, how do the Liberals explain the further fact that the strongest Liberal constituency in the Province was also the least intelligent? This business of counting electors assidiously, and then after they have voted adversely explaining that they are a stupid and ignorant lot, is becoming a bit tiresome. The plain fact is that Drummond and Arthabasca was chosen as the Liberal party's best campaigning ground in Quebec; the pressure of such administrative influences as the Intercolonial and the long-standing fidelity of the people to the Liberal party united to make it the constituency in which a favorable verdict was not to be expected.

As far back as 1887 it was so overwhelmingly Liberal that the Conservatives, in a year in which they took a majority out of Quebec, dared not put a man in the field. In 1900 it again was pulled to the Liberals with acclamation; in 1908 the Conservatives put no man in the field; in 1904 when they put a man up, he obtained only some 1,200 votes out of 5,000, the Conservative last bi-election deposit, and Mr. Lavergne's majority of nearly 2,500 was the largest scored in that election in the Province. With the pressure from the Intercolonial excluded, with plenty of money, and with the usual national majority, influences at the disposal of a Government in full working order, the Government was unable to do more than hold down its opponents to 100. The lesson simply is that Quebec revolted against Laurier.

"What was that?" said Olaf, standing
"On the quarterdeck;
"Something heard I like the sounding
"Of a shattered wreck."
"Einar then, the arrow taking
"From the loosened string.
"Answered, 'That was Norway breaking
"'From thy hand, O King!'"

But that means that the governing fact in Canadian politics has been wiped out. For 15 years the governing fact in Canadian politics has been Sir Wilfrid Laurier's ownership of Quebec. Therefore, the fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier now does not own Quebec means that our politics are in a state of chaos. Moreover, it means that the next election will see the Laurier Government go out of power. Whatever Government is in power after the next general election it will not be a Laurier Government. That is the new leading fact in the whole situation.

The more closely the facts are examined the more does this stand out. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has held power by owning Quebec. The election of 1908 resulted as follows:

Liberals from Quebec	54
Liberals from constituencies in New Brunswick, Ontario and the West who are strongly French-Canadian	7
Liberals from the rest of Canada	74
Conservatives from Quebec	11
Conservatives from the rest of Canada	75

Thus out of his 135 votes in the House of Commons Sir Wilfrid Laurier draws 61 from Quebec and its outposts, leaving him only 74 members while in English-speaking Canada Mr. Borden commands 75 votes, or, an actual majority.

TWO IN A GALE

The Results Were Propitious

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

The mountains lifted blue green summits to the soft blue skies, and their shadowy slopes were reflected in the cool depths of the lake at their feet. In the two deserted pavilions that overhung the sheet of water three young men watched the hotel boys rolling up the tennis nets in many windowed hosiery perched on the eastern mountain.

Dick Pancher lifted a pair of field-glasses to his eyes and scanned the tiny objects emerging from the inn. "Girls, girls, everywhere, and not a man in sight," he misquoted complainingly.

Lester Pennington leaned back in his chair and yawned widely then, as if suddenly reminded of something important, he jumped up and found a seat on the railing.

"Did you see the masculine young woman that came with the Bowker party?" he asked, with animation.

They nodded assent.

"Say," he went on, "tell me why a good looking girl will get herself up to look like a half baked dude? Did you note the dinky derby hat, the stiff collar and four-in-hand tie, the white shirt waist and black serge vest coat? Who could make love to a girl of that sort?"

"I couldn't," said Dick bluntly. "I'm fond of fluffy ruffly, lacy sorts of girls."

"So I've observed," chuckled Billy Satterly, knocking his pipe against the railing.

"You haven't expressed your opinion of the mannish young woman, Billy," suggested Pennington.

"Mair's in. Are you chaps going up after our shave?" asked Satterly, irrelevantly.

"Going after our own letters; then we shall sit on the piazza with the Bowker girls. Come up and get your own mail, you lazy-beggar," Pennington poked Billy suggestively as he mentioned past. "Come on, Dick. Perhaps we can ring in a game of tennis. So long, Billy boy."

"Great Scott, it's hot here. I believe I'll climb up to the peak where the wind must be blowing some miles a minute." Billy pulled his hat down over his eyes and set forth on the narrow trail that wriggled up the mountain.

The wind was increasing, and the pines and cedars rustled and whispered encouragingly. All the spicy scents of pine and hemlock and trailing arbutus and other more elusive odors assailed his nostrils as he climbed upward, stopping now and then to rest and gaze over the view that widened below as he went on. The long afternoon was now before him, and he outlined a vaguely delightful period of repose on the peak, with nothing above him but the tender blue sky and the fleecy white clouds sailing along toward the south.

"If none of those giggly girls from the hotel break in on me I ought to have a bully old time," panted Satterly as he toiled up the last steep ascent.

He crammed his hat down farther over his eyes in defense against the gale that was blowing up here. Bracing himself against the wind, he turned to look down into the valley below when he became aware that he was not alone on the peak.

Near him, and apparently oblivious to his presence, was a slender, boyish figure, whose black cloth skirts whipping back in the wind accentuated the masculine appearance of what proved to be a girl, "and a mighty pretty girl at that," thought Satterly as he looked at her.

This was the girl who had arrived with the Bowkers—the one Pennington had been making all sorts of sarcastic remarks about. Billy maneuvered himself into her range of vision and bared his head.

"Selfish gale," he remarked pleasantly.

The girl swept him with contemptuous eyes from which all the softness had fled and bowed her head so very slightly that Billy admitted it would have been better if she had made no sign of recognition whatever.

His brow darkened under the brim of his hat; then he pulled the hat off again and stood bareheaded in the wind. He would make her speak, he vowed.

"Selfish gale," he said again.

No reply this time. The girl had dropped her hat and framed her eyes with her hands, looking intently at the figures like manikins dotted about the hotel grounds below.

"Selfish gale," repeated Billy obstinately, still looking at her.

She made no reply to this original remark, but the young man thought he detected a quiver of the sensitive mouth.

"Selfish gale!" he yelled angrily, just as the gale took her right hat and swept it with stinging force against his face. "I told you it was a selfish gale," he added contemptuously as he held he hat toward her.

The hands came down, and the soft eyes gleamed mirthfully upon him as she took the hat.

"Thank you," she said demurely.

"Then you're alive, after all," wrested Billy relievedly. "You were so silent I thought you were petrified with amusement or admiration or something, you know."

"I was petrified—with surprise that you should address me at all," said the girl, with friendly emphasis in her low voice. Satterly had to draw closer to hear what she said; between the wind and the rushing sound of the swaying trees below there was a tumult of harmonious noises.

"Why?" demanded Billy Satterly bluntly, fixing his honest eyes on hers.

"I was in the upper balcony of the pavilion a little while ago," she said curtly.

"Oh!" gasped Billy.

"I heard what you said," she went on resolutely. "Listeners never hear any good of themselves, but—I thought it was unkind in you to say what you thought—"

Billy reddened to his forehead. "Oh, I say," he apologized, "the fellows didn't mean any harm; it's just the idle gossip that one drifts into when there isn't anything else to do. Every one of us would risk our neck for you. Don't—"

"What is your name?" asked the girl hurriedly.

"Satterly—Billy Satterly," he said.

"Oh, you're the one that didn't say anything, then?" She seemed to breathe a little sigh of relief. "Why didn't you answer when they asked you if you thought of my managing attire?"

"There was nothing to say. I happened to see you when you arrived on the stage last night, and—", He paused, as if embarrassed by a too eager tongue.

"And?" she suggested.

"I thought you didn't need any frills, you know," he finished lamely.

The girl laughed simply, stepping down to a seat on the railing and pressing back the flying waves of black hair from her eyes. "That is one of the reason why I wear plain clothes. You see, I'm a western girl, and I was born and raised in a ranch. Father and I lived alone. There were just two after I came, and I had to be both son and daughter to dad. He died a year ago, and so I had to come east and make my home with Mrs. Bowker, my aunt. I had private tutors at the ranch, but of the outside world I have been quite ignorant. I am learning rapidly that girls are girls and boys are boys, so a little later I'm going to put on frills and fribbles. I'm wearing these plain things—oh, well, because of dad, you know. It seems as if the old days were not so far away." She looked over the last words and her eyes were drowned with sudden tears.

She searched vainly for a handkerchief and Billy, full of tender solicitude, drew a snowy square from his own pocket, shook it out and tossed it into her lap; then he turned away and looked at distant ridges that seemed strangely blurred in outline.

"Thank you so much. I'm very sorry I made such a goose of myself," said the girl after a little while, "only—"

"You needn't say a word," interrupted Billy energetically, "after my mother went—why—well I know all about it. It's a selfish gale," he added hastily.

"It is!" she laughed through her tears. "How horrid you must have thought me, Mr. Satterly, but I heard what you were all saying, and I did feel so lonely and unappreciated, you know. Wasn't it silly? So I just tiptoed downstairs and fled up to the rock out of sheer desire to be alone."

"And I've been intruding on your privacy all this time," cried Billy remorsefully. "I'll run along down now —be careful when you descend; you might slip on the pine needles and sprain your ankle. One of the girls did that the other day." He turned to the path.

"Please stay, Mr. Satterly," she urged. "You mustn't let me drive you away. Thank you." She pressed the handkerchief into his hand and he returned it to his pocket silently.

"You are sure I won't be in the way?" he asked, as he sat down on the ground and taking out his neglected newspaper.

"Not at all. And you may smoke your pipe too. I don't mind it," she added as he stuffed a fragrant pouch back in his pocket.

"Thank you," he said gratefully.

"You do not know my name," said the girl suddenly. "It's not fair when I am acquainted with yours. I am Rose Benworth."

"Thank you," said Satterly gravely. After awhile the gravedy of torn the paper from his hands, and they watched it sail down the mountain side until it reached the lake, where it became a white winged craft and disappeared from view.

Then Billy showed Rose how to find pictures in the sailing clouds, and she soothingly taught him more about cloud painting than he had ever dreamed of, for she was a child of prairie and hill in the western country.

So they talked until the sun dipped below the west peak, and the two were regretfully down the narrow trail. "Back to the earth—not to the clouds," remarked Billy as he helped Rose Benworth over the slippery pine needles.

At the hop that night Dick Pancher and Lester Pennington rallied Billy on his long absence that afternoon. Pennington, with one accord, fallen captive to the charms of Rose Benworth in her simple white evening frock. She danced to perfection.

"What's the matter with you, old man?" they demanded of Billy. "You look as if you'd been dreaming!"

"Maybe," he said urbanely.

"What's the matter and all that sort of thing, you know."

"Rabbish!" jeered Dick curiously. "You're in love, that's what's the matter with you."

"And so it proved.

And a tonic in the air.
There's a touch of autumn gladness
In the teeming thoroughfare.
For we've seen the last of dust.
Let us hope and pray and trust,
And the rheums and nasal fevers are a thing of past disgust.
So we breathe the blessed breezes
As they sweep across the plain,
And we banish mild diseases
That to dust time appertain:
Be ye riot
In the quiet
With a far from summer 'ist,
And we love the gentle rotster
When the glad recurring oyster Opens up.
And we sup—
Not the thin and cooling juices
That we drank in summer skies
For our drinks,
But the rich and fragrant joys
Which the epicure enjoys
And celestery decorz
To the brink.
And hail to the lure of autumns,
The season of plenty and jest,
When the rheumatoidals
Are lost in the jolly
Domain of the marvelous west!

"BILL SIKES, SCIENTIST."

The Old Jimmy Is Not Enough Now for the Housebreaker.

The burglar of forty years ago carried a "jimmy," a screwdriver, and one of "twirls," or skeleton keys. With these he was ready to tackle any safe of the old-fashioned sort.

Safe-making became a science, and the "jimmy" useless, so Bill Sikes of the next generation provided himself with dynamite cartridges, or small charges of "soup," or liquid nitroglycerine, which he forced into the crack under the safe door and fired by means of a small pocket-battery, says Knowledge.

"The safe-makers took a step in advance, and, behold! the cracks were stopped, and no cranny or crevice left into which any form of explosive could possibly be injected.

It seems as though Bill would have to reform.

But chemistry and electricity have both come to his aid. Whenever a burglar can manage to strip electric light wires, he has at hand a simple method of producing a degree of heat sufficient to pierce the hardest steel. He uses a carbon pole, safely insulated, and produces an arc powerful enough to melt anything.

On August 31st last an attempt was made on a safe belonging to a firm of Birmingham jewellers which contained £40,000 worth of diamonds and other valuables. A great hole had been melted through two inches of solid steel, and if the thieves had not been disturbed at their work they would probably have secured the "swag." These men used the oxy-hydrogen blowpipe flame, which produces the most intense heat known to man, next to the electric furnace.

All that is necessary is a cylinder of compressed oxygen, such as doctors use for patients suffering from pneumonia, a length of indiarubber tubing, and a blowpipe. The india-rubber tube is connected with the reservoir gas; the oxygen is turned on, and mixed with the gas, and the result is a flame with a temperature of over 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit, which will melt the Harveyized steel of a battleship.

Another dodge of the up-to-date safe-breaker is the use of a chemical compound known as thermit. This consists of a finely powdered mixture of aluminium and oxide or rust of iron.

At a certain temperature, well known to Bill, the aluminium begins to combine with oxygen, and the latter is taken up from the iron, and the result is oxide of aluminium and metallic iron.

The heat involved by this chemical action is so terrific that under its impact steel runs like melted sealing-wax.

Fortunately for the public at large, thermit has from the burgler's point of view, two formidable drawbacks. Magnesium must be employed to light the cartridge, and burning magnesium produces a brilliant glare of light. Again, thermit, itself, in process of combustion, sends off huge columns of stifling smoke, which is apt to betray the operations of the safe-breaker.

Some little time ago, a policeman arrested a suspicious-looking character leaving a house in Bermondsey, and, at an early hour of the morning.

"It's just as well to tell you I'm a burglar," said the fellow.

This man had in his possession a bottle of methylated spirits, another of some-what chemical, and a blowpipe apparatus with a blow-pipe attachment. The use of the latter puzzled the police, but the burglar frankly explained the use.

"Now, see," he said, "I just smear the glass of the window above the catch with the stuff in this bottle, then I turn the flame of a soldering lamp on by means of the blow-pipe. As soon as the glass melted, I put this hooked blade through, pull back the catch and there you are."

When Wagner Fled.

Richard Wagner, the composer, was an ardent republican in 1849. In the archives of Dresden there is a document setting forth a case of high treason against the musician. He was accused of having written-as a friend a letter proposing to turn Saxony into a republic. "But whom shall we make president?" he asked. "I see nobody competent for the office except our present sovereign, Frederick Augustus II." "Frederick Augustus indeed!" seem to have appreciated the humor of the suggestion that he should put the crown and content himself with the dignity of a republican president. For this flash of unconscious fun Wagner had to bolt to Switzerland.

A Hearty Eater.

In London, gastronomy appears this side-dote of the gastronomic prowess of a Swiss guard in the employment of Marechal de Villars: "One day the guard was sent for by the marechal, who had heard of his enormous appetite. 'How many sirloins of beef can you eat?' he tentatively asked. 'Ah, monseigneur, for me I don't require many—five or six at the most.' 'And how many legs of mutton?' 'Legs of mutton! Not many—seven or eight.' 'And puddings?' 'Oh, as to puddies, only a few—a dozen.' 'And of pigeons?' 'Ah, of pigeons, monseigneur, not many—forty, perhaps fifty. Ant hares?' 'Larks, monseigneur! Ah ways.'

A Small Detective.

The man was nearly through taking down the awnings when the bell rang for breakfast. Little Mary Day looked at all her trinkets and lingered almost noon on one pretense and another until her small boy, looking with that uncanny insight so disconcerting to his elders, observed in his piping treble: "You go right along, Grandma; I'll watch him."

Musical Note.

"Your daughter practices on the piano faithfully, I notice. Now, mine flats it."

"Mine does too. But she'd rather practise all day than help with the housework."

Though Disappointing, It Has a Happy Result

By ALLAN P. AMES

The old Kimball house stood alone on the side of the hill. Around it the trees that one generation had cleared and two others had profitably mined during the golden age of New England textiles were growing up to briers and white pine. But the lilttop pasture still furnished grazing for Betsy, the aged Holstein, and Jael, the puffsufficient mare, sole survivors of the stock that once crowded the white-washed barn, while in the garden grew potatoes, corn, turnips, beets and the other hardy truck that wintered in with the hand cultivator and enabled the Kimball "girls" to sit by their one tight stove and watch with unconcern the storms that blocked the roads and sometimes shut them off from the store at the Center for days at a time.

Breakfast over and the dishes washed, the sisters went into the garden. Every pleasant day since the sun rose high and hot they worked there. Blue cotton gowns faded by constant washing covered their calico dresses, and as they stooped over the onion bed or with the hand cultivator scratched the earth between the hills of the young corn. Blue gingham sunbonnets protected their delicately wrinkled faces.

Miss Binley, seeing them for the first time, paused to study and admire. Against the background of yellow green cornstalks their bent figures stood out in harmonious relief. In the foreground the whitewashed fence, the prim flower beds and the old house with its rotting shingles and weather-beaten green blinds contributed a setting that appealed irresistibly to her artistic soul.

For Miss Binley was an amateur photographer. She seldom wetted abroad without her camera, but unfortunately this was one of the rare mornings when she had left her camera at home.

"Oh, Mr. Holbrook," cried the girl regretfully, "see those perfectly dear old women in that onion patch. What a genre study! I've often said it never was safe to go anywhere without a camera."

"I might run back and fetch it," suggested the carrier meekly.

"N-no," she replied reluctantly. "It's too far. Probably we can get them some other time. I'm going to speak to them."

Young Holbrook watched with adoring admiration the process by which the city girl penetrated the reserve of New England reserve. Before the two women had exhausted the fifty minutes something of Miss Binley's unabashed youth and enthusiasm began to appear in the faded eyes of the sisters.

"Oh, Martby, don't you wish we could have ours taken again? We haven't had our likenesses made since the days of the girls. Remember, when you were thirty and I was thirty-five. You were a mighty pretty girl in those days, Martby."

"Oh, g'long," commanded her young sister.

"It used to be a terrible lot of trouble," continued Phoebe. "We had to sit perfectly still for five minutes—I couldn't stir, and it seemed like five days."

"You wouldn't have to sit still at all now," said Miss Binley eagerly. "The exposures is instantaneous."

Eager assent was on the lips of Miss Phoebe, but her sterner sister forestalled her.

"That's very kind of you, miss, but we couldn't think of putting you to so much trouble."

Familiar with the fundamental characteristics of the older New England generation, Miss Binley advanced cautiously. Already in her artist mind she saw the picture. It would be the marvelous study of two gaunt figures wresting an existence still from the barren mountain soil. It was the subject she had been looking for all summer to enter in the fall exhibit of her camera club at home. "Oh, it won't be trouble in the least," she replied guardedly. "If you don't mind I'll come to take pictures you would understand. Would you like to be in the garden at this time tomorrow?"

"Yes," answered Martha, yielding. "But wouldn't you rather take us in the house. Do folks ever have their pictures taken outdoors?"

"The light is much better outside," explained Miss Binley. "And, besides, I've always wanted a picture of you from your work. I'll come and take some snapshots of you just as you are—weeding the onions."

"You can come with me tomorrow," she said to Holbrook. "I had intended to drive with Johnny Larcom, but my engagements are off in the face of an epoch making chance like this."

The next morning brought weather perfect alike for pedestrianism and photography. The day was cool, and a thin haze tempered the rays of the mountain sun. Miss Binley ran down the steps to meet him, radiant with anticipation, and as he received the big camera from her hands Holbrook was thrilled with the thought of another morning at her side.

"There's some one in the garden," said the young man as the last turn in the road brought them in sight of their destination. "But they don't accord with my recollection of the old ladies. Holy smoke!" gasped the youth. "It's they, all right, but no wonder we didn't recognize them."

Miss Binley gazed, speechless in horrified amazement, as her two subjects approached the gate. Gone were the picturesque gowns and the sunbonnets of faded blue. In their place the Kimballs had donned a veritable riot of modistry. Their costumes ran riotously to the varying fashions of a full half century.

But the faded countenances of the Kimballs showed naught but pride and satisfaction, slightly tinged with embarrassment. "We set up most all night sortin' things over and decidin' what to wear," announced Miss Phoebe when they came within speaking distance. "Of course we wanted to do you credit, seein' you was kind. These silk mitts cost a sight of money when Brother Hiram brought them from Concord. They're pretty well darned now, but all the needle's on the hands where it don't show. Don't Martby look scrumptious? She found that silk skirt she had made up for the 'Fourth-wedlin' most as good as new."

Holbrook welcomed the old lady's joyfulness, for it was plain that for once his companion was at a loss for words. When Miss Binley finally found her voice it was so queer and strained that he scarcely recognized it: "I'm sorry you went to all this trouble. Really, it wasn't at all necessary. In fact"—

"In fact," broke in Holbrook bluntly—"nevertheless it was awfully good of you to fix up so. That certainly is a fine piece of goods, Miss Martha. It will show up splendidly in the photograph."

He rambled on thus, hardly realizing what he said, anxious only to spare the bitter disappointment that was written on Miss Binley's face as clearly that he felt it must be evident to all.

"I warn't the least bit of trouble," insisted Martha. "We really enjoyed fixin' things over, didn't we, Phoebe?"

Holbrook was wondering how long his powers of invention would stand the strain when, after a brief aside to him—uncomfortable pause, Miss Martha suggested timidly, "We're all ready, miss, any time you say."

To Holbrook's intense relief this appeal brought Miss Binley to a sense of the situation. "Oh, yes," she said, rather wildly, "your clothes are beautiful. I'm going to send you some dozen prints so that you can have plenty to give your friends."

Declining a hospitable invitation to stop for a "snack and a cup of tea," the girl and Holbrook ran somehow got through their farewells and waved away over the hill, leaving the sisters, but thoroughly delighted ladies gazing after them from their station by the front gate. In silence Holbrook lugged the camera, and without a word Miss Binley trudged by his side until the old house and its grotesquely clad occupants were hidden by the bend in the road. Then the girl said:

"Would you mind sitting here in the shade a minute? I really believe I'm a bit tired."

Immediately the youth was all anxious inquiry and suggestion:

"It must have been the sun. You have to be careful in these mountains. If you don't mind waiting here alone for a couple of minutes I'll hurry back and get it. The old ladies won't need me some kind of a rig to drive you back to the hotel, or maybe you'll let me carry you back to their house."

"Don't be ridiculous," ordered Miss Binley, with a slightly hysterical laugh. "There isn't a thing the matter with me." Then, noting his amazement, she burst out desperately: "I'm just fearfully disappointed, that's all. I don't believe I ever was so disappointed before in my life. But that's only part. I'm horribly ashamed of myself, too—even more ashamed than disappointed. Oh, I believe I'm the meanest girl in the whole state of New Hampshire."

"Why—er—er—" he started to protest.

"Don't pretend you don't comprehend," she interrupted. "You're ashamed of me, too. You know you are. No; let me finish," she insisted, when he made a gesture to deny. "The worst of all is that even now, when I could be glad how mean and selfish it is to feel so, I'm just overwhelmed with disappointment still. You can't understand nobody could but an artist. My heart was set on a picture of those dear old things in their delicious work-clothes. And now I don't care how they had gone and spoiled everything. I felt so badly I didn't even want to conceal it."

Holbrook gazed with awe and quick-ly-checked impulse upon a new and holier divinity—with quivering lips and dewy lashes, irresistible in her sweet seriousness. In another moment he was on his knees on the grass beside her. Without hesitation, naturally as he had done it as often as he had dreamed of doing it, his arm slipped about her. Just as naturally her head somehow found a comfortable place on his shoulder. Her hat fell off, and he kissed her shining hair.

"I do understand," he whispered, although there was none but the mountains to listen. "I understand, dearest. I may be an ignoramus about photography and art, but I'm mighty well acquainted with Tommy Holbrook, and I know he knows that you're the dearest, sweetest, tenderest, most—What I want to say is that I want to make everything your camera my life job," he concluded desperately.

Miss Binley sat suddenly erect. An answer hovered on her lips, but faded into a smile as she picked up a black, oblong covered object from the grass beside her and placed it in Holbrook's hands.

Ephraim's Luck

A Cat and a Girl Both Win Him

By EVELYN WINTHROP

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Amy Wallace slammed the gate of the chicken yard and came down the path with tragedy written on her pretty, dimpled countenance and in the very pose of her outstretched hand upon which dangled the lifeless remains of a promising young broiler.

"Another one!" queried her sister unconsolately. "That makes—let me see—seventy-two chickens killed in the last six weeks. At a dollar a pair those broilers would have fetched eighty!"

"It is an outrage," sputtered Amy, flinging the defunct chicken far from her sight. "That cat must be killed at once."

"Did you send Mrs. Beemer a bill for the chickens?" asked Louise, intent on her needlework.

"Yes, indeed," "Sent it Monday." "Heard from her today?"

"Not a word."

"Did she say she was a soldier's widow and that the gray cat was her only solace?" Louise smiled mischievously.

"Word for word. Laugh, if you think proper, Louise, sitting and rolling gloomily, "but remember, please, that I am not a talented female artist who can earn the price of a gown with a few daubs of paint. I am a mere housekeeper, and, goodness knows, I have a talent in the world save for poultry raising, and now I begin to doubt my ability in accounts at that."

"I'll see Mrs. Beemer myself," announced Louise, arising and folding her work with an air of decision. "She must either pay you $36 and promise immunity from the cat—and keep on from the cat or she must kill the beast."

"She won't do either," mourned Amy from the piazza as Louise passed out at the gate and started down the street to the abode of the Widow Beemer.

Louise Wallace found the Widow Beemer seated in the parlor, and the widow amiably. "It's some warmer today, isn't it?"

"It is," agreed Louise coldly. "Mrs. Beemer, I've had my chickens killed by your cat for the last time. Either you must either pay you $36 and promise immunity from the cat—and keep on from the cat or she must kill the beast."

Then, noting his amazement, she burst out desperately: "I'm just fearfully disappointed, that's all. I don't believe I ever was so disappointed before in my life. But that's only part. I'm horribly ashamed of myself, too—even more ashamed than disappointed. Oh, I believe I'm the meanest girl in the whole state of New Hampshire."

"Why—er—er—" he started to protest.

"Don't pretend you don't comprehend," she interrupted. "You're ashamed of me, too. You know you are. No; let me finish," she insisted, when he made a gesture to deny. "The worst of all is that even now, when I could be glad how mean and selfish it is to feel so, I'm just overwhelmed with disappointment still. You can't understand nobody could but an artist. My heart was set on a picture of those dear old things in their delicious work-clothes. And now I don't care how they had gone and spoiled everything. I felt so badly I didn't even want to conceal it."

Holbrook gazed with awe and quick-ly-checked impulse upon a new and holier divinity—with quivering lips and dewy lashes, irresistible in her sweet seriousness. In another moment he was on his knees on the grass beside her. Without hesitation, naturally as he had done it as often as he had dreamed of doing it, his arm slipped about her. Just as naturally her head somehow found a comfortable place on his shoulder. Her hat fell off, and he kissed her shining hair.

"I do understand," he whispered, although there was none but the mountains to listen. "I understand, dearest. I may be an ignoramus about photography and art, but I'm mighty well acquainted with Tommy Holbrook, and I know he knows that you're the dearest, sweetest, tenderest, most— What I want to say is that I want to make everything your camera my life job," he concluded desperately.

Miss Binley sat suddenly erect. An answer hovered on her lips, but faded into a smile as she picked up a black, oblong covered object from the grass beside her and placed it in Holbrook's hands.

Pretzels are such unhandy things to pass around a table that a New Jersey man has invented a fork for a stan dard in the centre to hold them.

Covered by the curious Billy and trifled by the wearing Lattimer, they sought Peter Swanson, the blacksmith.

"I couldn't kill no cat, miss," said Peter apologetically, when Louise had told her story. "They tell me it brings bad luck. Far more'n I could do," and, rises. Maybe the Kvetalians in the Stolen Heights—"

Louise sought the Italian settlement in the Hollow. Pietro Roccaglia listened that Louise's request with the evil eye and crossed his brown fingers shudderingly. Even the rattling crapshooters at the door failed to break his resolution.

Old Abraham Johnson's black face expressed mingled scorn and alarm when approached by Louise and her disavowal train. He gazed longingly at the money and then clutched the silver charm that hung about his throat.

"I'm goin' to dispose of dese Lowey, honey, but it am pow'ful bad luck to kill a cat. Dey bery debbil's in dat Ephraim. Folks is scared to death natural ob ole Eph Beemer, hisself! I tell you, honey, right bad, too, miss-t'ank you, honey."

These were examples of the various interviews that Louise held that morning. Noon time found her at her own gate hugging the fuzzy basket containing the still active Ephraim. Her sister drew forward a rocking chair in the porch and Louise fell into its comfortable embrace.

"What is in the basket?" asked Amy. "Ephraim."

"Tell me about it—do," crowed Amy. Louise laid the basket down. "I can't find a person who will make way with the cat, and for love or money, and I believe Mrs. Beemer, the cat's owner, knows it. So Ephraim into my hands almost too jestingly," she ended plaintively. "I didn't suppose I was intelligent enough could be so silly and superstitious."

"We are superstitious, all of us, ourselves, then," said Amy firmly. "We're not superstitious."

"No, we're not, but it's horrible to kill anything like that, you know. I'll go out this afternoon and see if I can't find some boy who will do it. I simply can't all be fools."

Amy had picked up the basket containing the doomed cat swayed violently on the grass where Louise had dropped her burden; then over the door the wind, with a spiteful hiss Ephraim dashed out and scampered up the tall walnut tree over their astonished heads.

"I shall punish Tommy Latimer must have untied the cords," said Louise bitterly. "I saw him quarreling with Billy over the basket—and I gave him 50 cents too."

Amy had picked up a large stone and weighted it in her hand. "I believe I could hit that cat," she said viciously. "I'd like to see him—punish him—punish him." She shuddered slightly, aimed the missile directly at the crouching Ephraim, threw the stone and turned her back. Louise had closed her eyes tightly.

They heard the stone crash through the branches and then there followed a heavy thud. "I've killed him," moaned Louise.

"I killed him," moaned Amy.

"You certainly came very near it," said an exasperated masculine voice, and they turned to behold Ephraim in indignant countenance of Mr. Rupert Hall and young gentleman clutched one shoulder of his coat.

Over his head Ephraim crouched, spitting savagely and sharpening his claws on the rough branch to which he clung.

"Did I strike you, Rupert?" demanded Amy pentinently. "I was trying to hit that cat, you see."

"You must be very fond of him," observd Mr. Ames, drawing near to them.

"I'm sorry, I hope you are not badly hurt. Fetch the cat back, Louise, please, Louise." Amy let her hand fall and turned away, but longer than he had dared hope. "We hardly expected to see you," she added pointedly.

"I felt that you needed me," lied Mr. Ames cheerfully. "My inner conscience—here I am now you will observe—and some sort and required masculine assistance, and so I came. Do you?"

When Louis returned with the lotion they told the story of Ephraim and the cat. "What can I do for you?" Mr. Ames asked simply.

"I'm sorry, I hope you are not badly hurt. Fetch the cat back, Louise, please, Louise." Amy let her hand fall and turned away, but longer than he had dared hope. "We hardly expected to see you," she added pointedly.

When Louis returned with the lotion they told the story of Ephraim and the cat. "What can I do for you?" Mr. Ames asked simply.

"I must be running along, now. My mother's down the road a piece—had a breakdown. I promised to help her, you thought I'd drop in and see you. Hope you get the cat, Miss Wallace."

Louise disappeared into the house, and Amy's face lost its color. "Then you won't kill Ephraim?" she inquired.

"I cannot. Amy, but I'll tell you how you can get rid of him. Just marry me and I'll take him off your hands and raising. Louise is going to get back to town, and I'll take the cat, I need you. Let Ephraim shift for himself."

"You merely happened in here. You had a breakdown?" she asked severely.

"My resolution not to see you broke down," confessed Rupert, drawing her into his arms. "For part, I'm not a good luck not to kill a cat, eh, Ephraim?"

But the cat, taking advantage of lovers' meeting, was merely a pale gray streak headed for the welcoming arms of the Widow Beemer.

Tariff Reduction A Certainty.

Reciprocity With The United States Is The Biggest Item in Governments Programme, For Session just Opened

London, Nov. 18.—Politically, this was an uneventful day, with the exception of Arthur J. Balfour's speech at Nottingham, which was awaited with keen anticipation, as an exposition of the Unionists' election program. Declaring tariff reform to be the great constructive policy of the party, he pledged himself it would not increase the cost of living to the working classes. If there were such increase, he pledged the party to reduce indirect taxation on tea, sugar, etc., proportionately.

The Nationalists and Socialists, continued Mr. Balofur, were driving the Government into an attempt to destroy the constitution by the abolition of the Lords' power of veto. This he characterized as a revolution financed by American gold. If it was to such degradation that party government had brought the country, then party government had broken down.

"If we alter the constitution and the bidding of leg rollers, who care nothing for our Empire," said Mr. Balfour, "we are not longer capable of self-government."

He appealed to every man to see that Britain should manage its own affairs. The Unionist leader spoke for an hour and a half, and had a magnificent reception.

It is evident, however, that, except on the question of reform of the House of Lords, on which the Unionist party is now firmly committed to Mr. Chamberlain's scheme, the Unionist platform contains the same as at the last general election in all its principal planks.

Mr. Balfour, while he referred only incidentally to the home rule question, sufficiently indicated that he was in as complete opposition to it as ever. Thus the Unionist election policy in the main will be to pit reform of the House of Lords against the Liberals' demand for the abolition of the veto power of the Lords.

The situation between the opposing forces last night appears less aggravated. The disposition on the part of the Liberal side is to give the party a longer time to debate the veto bill, possibly even to the extent of admitting a reasonable amendment, provided this did not interfere with the principle of the bill.

The Standard in an editorial declares that there would be no unconstitutional crisis but for this American subsidizing of the Nationalists. "It is Redmond's, not Asquith's crisis," says the paper. "Redmond's patrons are not the poor, like Parnell's, but the affluent. It is the American business men, the American capitalist and millionaire who are financing the home rule party for purposes of their own. They do not love England, and they hope to prevent the adoption of tariff reform."

In the House of Lords, sitting as a committee of the whole yesterday, the Earl of Rosebery moved the first resolutions of last March, which have been accepted already by the Lords. His motion contains, which were yesterday adopted without division, were:

(1) That the House of Lords shall consist of lords of parliament (a) chosen by the whole body of hereditary peers from among themselves, and by nomination by the crown; (b) those entitle to sit by virtue of offices and qualifications held by them; and (c) those chosen from outside.

(2) That the term of tenure of all lords of parliament shall be the same, except in the case of those sitting ex officio, who will sit only so long as they hold the offices by reason of which they sit.

Speaking in support of his resolution, Lord Rosebery said that he believed that, on these principles, it would be possible to reform the Upper Chamber to a large extent, solve a great constitutional problem, and maintain the ancient constitution of the country without convulsions incident to a reform by general elections. In case of a disagreement between the two Houses the dispute should be settled, Rosebery said, by a joint conference, by a referendum. There could be no question as to the choice of the country between a reformed House of Lords and the intolerable tyranny of a single chamber.

Lord Curzon strongly urged the adoption of the resolutions, as a practical and generous plan for a reformed Upper House, in which the hereditary element would not exercise a preponderance influence.

Baron Courtney thought the resolutions vague and illusory, and disagreed completely with the view of the Government that the constitutional question having failed, it was impossible for Parliament to reach an agreement. He deplored that a threat had been made to take the matter out of the hands of Parliament, and to appeal to the man on the street.

Lord Landowne, having supported the resolutions on the ground that it was necessary to bring the Upper House into closer relations with the democracy and the Earl of Crewe declaring that he would not vote against them, as he thought that a great deal could be said in favor of Lord Rosebery's propositions, the resolutions were carried without a division of the House.

Trade Back to the Walls.

London, Nov. 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At Nottingham yesterday great enthusiasm was aroused by the 1st meeting of the meeting of the National Union of Conservative Associations. The Duke of Portland said the situation was most serious and momentous, the safety of the Empire hung in the balance, and they must fight with their backs to the wall; more than that, they must enter the enemy's territory. (Cheers.)

Henry Chaplin, M.P., said at present the country was being ruled by John Redmond, the vassal king of England, who with his pockets stuffed with the gold of foreign millionaires, aspired to dictate our destinies. Timothy Healy, M.P., said the only opposition to the colonial preference he had found in Canada was a few recently arrived hotbread Radicals and a few more Canadian cranks.

Sent Back for Cholera.

Quebec, Nov. 18.—After a good deal of discussion between the health officials of the Dominion, the Royal George of the Canadian Northern line, which reached port early in the day, was sent back yesterday evening to Grosse Isle. There was a sick Finn on board, and the port physician claimed that it was a case of Asiatic cholera.

Outlook Brighter In England.

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—The formal opening of the third session of the eighth Parliament of Canada took place yesterday amid suspicions surroundings. The closure, frosty air of the November day made dame fashion don her best attire. The scene within the newly-decorated chamber, after the Commoners had been called to the bar, was both brilliant and inspiring. The new scheme of decoration in the red chamber includes the coats of arms of the different provinces in an elaborately scroll design at the head of the pillars that support the arches of the galleries.

After the Commons had retired to their own chamber, the House did business for a few minutes, and then adjourned until Monday, when the speech from the throne will be discussed.

There was an interesting reference to the chance among Conservative whips, carrying out the reciprocity scheme, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier announced the personnel of the committee to effect the minor committees of the House, the name of George Taylor, former chief Conservative whip, was included. Mr. Taylor immediately arose and shook hands with George H. Perley he submitted. While agreeing that this should be done, Sir Wilfrid regretted that Mr. Taylor should be retiring from the pers not had occupied with such credit to himself and the Conservative party for twenty-five years. Mr. Taylor had been a good fighter, and as chief whip, had performed his duties to the satisfaction of both sides of the House.

R. L. Borden remarked that Mr. Taylor had rendered very eminent service to his party. While he was both a good fighter and a fair fighter, he was yet as strong a Tory as was to be found in the Dominion of Canada. The Premier should not have used the past tense, for, said he, "The member for Leeds not only has been, but still continues to be a good fighter."

Arthur Gilbert, the M.P. for Drummond and Arthabaska, will not take his seat on Monday, and it may even be later, as his election has not yet been gazetted.

The speech from the throne, as read by His Excellency, Earl Grey, was, in part, as follows:

Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate,

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

When I proposed Parliament in the month of May last, I was about completing the term usually allotted to the office of Governor-General, but it has pleased His Majesty King George V. to continue me as his representative in Canada, and therefore it is my great pleasure again to greet you at the opening of this new session.

I meet you under the shadow of the calamity which has befallen this country and the whole British Empire, in the demise of our beloved sovereign, King Edward VII. His death is mourned, not only by his subjects the world over, but also by all civilized nations who had learned to appreciate the many gifts and qualities which had endeared him the name of peacemaker, by which he will be known in history.

It is with great pleasure that I congratulate you on the ever growing prosperity of this favored land.

Trade and commerce are advancing in all directions with rapid strides. The total volume of imports and exports far exceed all previous records, and the growth of our industries and internal trade keeps pace with the development of our external commerce.

The conditions now existing over the whole country conclusively demonstrate that even with lesser production at some points, the vastness and variety of our resources ensure at all times a high degree of progress for the whole country.

Marked progress is being made in the construction of the National Transcontinental Railway, and a large part of the line in this season finds being an outlet from the west to the great harbor over this new highway.

The construction of a line of railway to Hudson Bay, which has occupied the attention of the people for many years, has assumed practical shape. Already a contract has been awarded for the construction of bridge forming part of this railway across the Saskatchewan River at Pas Mission, and the work is now in progress. During the present session a measure will be laid before you providing for the prosecution and completion of this work with all possible speed.

While recognizing the importance of the Canadian home trade and the great value for our staples in the United Kingdom, my Government feel that they should avail themselves of every opportunity to promote friendly commercial relations with the British colonies and foreign countries, so that our surplus products may be admitted in the markets of those countries on the most favorable terms.

In pursuance of this policy commercial agreements involving mutual concessions have been negotiated with France and Belgium, and a reduced schedule of duties will be granted to the Netherlands.

The desirability of the reciprocity tariff arrangements between the United States and Canada, have not been left on the side of the border. The recommendations of the president have not hitherto favored imports from Canada. We have hoped that they would bought much less from us in return for anything for that. The general liberal policy is favored by the motion having conferred with the President. My Washington express a desire to establish further trade relations with the Dominion.

Following the negotiations which took place with the President of the United States and my Government, the results of which were at the time communicated to Parliament, a further conference between representatives of the two countries has been held at Ottawa. While no conclusions have been reached and no formal proposals made, the free discussion of the subject which has taken place encourages my Government to hope that it may be found possible, without any sacrifice of Canada's interests, an arrangement may be made which will admit many of the products of the Dominion into the United States on satisfactory terms.

A very careful enquiry into the conditions of trade and transportation between the British West Indies and Canada has been made by a special commission appointed by his late Majesty, including among its members two of my Ministers. The report of the commission will be laid before you.

Bills will also be submitted respecting copyright, banks and banking, insolvency, the Yukon Territory, Lake Superior, and with regard to the investigation and betterment of industrial disputes, and relations with other subjects.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

The accounts of the last year will be laid before you. The estimates for the coming fiscal year will be submitted for your approval at an early date.

Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

Those important matters of domestic affecting the public interest I commend to your careful consideration, and pray that divine providence may guide your deliberations.

The London Lancet, after a careful examination of reported that "the preparation fulfills ALL the requirements and presents ALL the conditions of a very satisfactory emulsion. In appearance and consistency it is not unlike cream and under the microscope the fat globules are seen to be of perfectly regular size and uniformly distributed. So well has the oil been emulsified that even the most delicate stomachs will not reject it separate. The taste is decidedly unobjectionable and the Emulsion should prove a valuable food as well as a medicine."

We believe no other preparation of Cod Liver Oil has received such weighty commendation and if the same high authorities were to examine it now they would find it even finer, more distributed, more palatable, more satisfactory in every way; in fact, SCOTT'S EMULSION has so long been the one satisfactory and perfect Emulsion that it is accepted as the standard by medical practitioners all over the world, by the public and by hundreds of imitators, for it is the one and only Emulsion imitated.

The above facts are in name only for no other preparation of Cod Liver Oil is so pure, so perfect and so beneficial.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

has become the world's Standard Body-Builder because of the perfect purity of its ingredients, its absolute freedom from ALCOHOL or any other harmful substance and because the results from it are uniform and far greater than from any other preparation.

Audience Delighted With Miss Tennant

Distinguished English Elocutionist Gives Private Recital In The Armouries T oA Select Number Will Appear Here December 9th.

Miss Barbara Tennant, who will give a recital in Belleville on Dec. 9, is one of the most versatile artistes on the English stage. Trained in that best of English schools—Shakespearian repertoire—under probably one of the hardest past-masters in dramatic art, she soon acquired a reputation among the managers who were eager to secure her services. Her love for Shakespeare influenced her decision in associating herself with the Kerwin Shakespeare Company, where she played the leading parts of Miranda, Puck, Ophelia, Marguerite, Titania, etc. After many triumphs in Shakespearian and old comedy plays, she gave a series of recitals in London, Bristol and Dublin, where the critics went in ecstacies over her work. No one listening to Barbara Tennant, as she goes through the whole range of human feeling, from passion to pathos, from laughter to tears, can help but be impressed by her wonderful power. The sweetness of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's "My Ships," etc., the humor of the "Hindoo's Parable," and humorousness of Kipling's "Gunga Din," the magnificence of Service's "The Call Of the Yuked," the airiness of Shakespeare in "Midsummer Night's Dream," the pathos of that Canadian story, "The First Lobster," the grim humor of "Burglar Bill," and the depth of passion in the speech from Romeo and Juliet, are all brought out with a viridness worthy of only herself. She has been truly termed the new Ellen Terry. Miss Tennant herself is the most charming of ladies, as many in Belleville already know. She is a sweet example of the English lady, and now that she is coming amongst us, it behooves the people of Belleville to give her a welcome worthy of Canadians.

Last evening, in the officers' quarters of the Armories, Miss Tennant gave a few selections to a select private audience. Seldom has a performance, revealing such a wealth of passion and emotional strength, been given in Belleville. It was a rare treat, indeed, and those present appreciated it as evidenced by a vote of thanks moved by Colonel Ponton and Capt. Pinkett, and passed unanimously.

Mabel first pleaded with her father not to have her mother arrested and he promised. He came to this city and placed the letter in the hands of the police. They surrounded a dwelling in Mount Vernon street and arrested the couple, who were preparing to depart.

It transpired afterward that Mabel, fearing that her father would suffer the ignominy of arrest, sent a telegram to Mrs. McDonald, telling her that the police had been asked to arrest her. The telegram was late in reaching Mrs. McDonald, the police entering the house shortly after it was delivered.

Elliott was arraigned in court this afternoon charged with having robbed the jewelry store at Rochester and held in $1,000 bail at Rochester. There is no charge against Mrs. McDonald, but she is being held in the hope that she may get consent to return with her husband.

EYE STRAIN AND HEALTH.

Serious ocular disease, such as glaucoma or iritis, produces a profound depression of the whole body. In like manner, slighter disturbances long continued will produce profound reflex results. Enthusiasts have claimed the ocular origin of nearly everything, from headache to diabetes mellitus.

Careful observers have demonstrated, beyond a doubt, cases of migraine, neuralgia, epilepsy, chorea, neurasthenia, gastric and gastro-intestinal disease, and spinal curvature, in which the principal source of trouble was refractive error, and which yielded to the correction of that error. If this be true, then it certainly behooves the general practitioner of medicine to take errors of refraction seriously into consideration in his daily work.

It may be safely stated that a perfectly normal eye does not exist. In a flexible structure like the cornea absolutely perfect sphericity, such as

MEETING OF CHEESE BOARD.

At the Cheese Board yesterday afternoon a lengthy discussion took place regarding a motion to send the President and Vice-President of the Board to Ottawa on Dec. 15th to urge upon the Dominion Government the advisability of having better trade relations with the United States in regard to dairy products. Another matter was also brought up and disposed of.

Mr. John Elliott, manager of the Standard Bank, addressed the Board in reference to the dairymen doing all in their power to further the dairy interests, especially in Ontario. What he desired was that the Cheese Board appoint a small committee to assist the City Council and the Board of Trade in advertising in London, Eng., the cheese industry of this district. Cuts of cheese factories and of farm buildings might be sent, to be used in a magazine, and the cost would be but trifling. The past season was good and the patrons would no doubt receive good cheques from the sale of cheese.

On motion, Messrs. C. B. Myers, Kerr and Simpson were appointed as the committee.

In the discussion to send the President and Vice-President to Ottawa many members took part. Messrs. A. Mosure, J. A. Holgate, T. Watkins and M. Sprague spoke in support of the motion.

Mr. W. C. Farley moved in amendment that no action be taken in the matter.

Upon a vote being taken, Mr. Farley's amendment prevailed.

It was decided that the Board meet on Saturday, the 26th inst., instead of on Thursday, which will be the last meeting for this season.

SAD INFATUATION OF A FOOLISH WOMAN

Forsakes Fine House And Four of Her Children And Elopes With An Alleged Burglar—Worried By Deserted Daughter.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—After being absent for two months from her fine home at Tolchester, Conn., where she lived in luxury and ease with her husband and six children, Mrs. John McDonald was arrested here to-day in company with Herbert Elliott, who is wanted in Rochester for the alleged burglary of a jewelry store. Living here in comfort much simpler style than had been accustomed to at her home, the runaway wife turned a deaf ear to her daughter, Emma, whom Mrs. Donald, pleaded tearfully with her to return home to the four children she deserted on eloping with Elliott. She had taken two with her.

The police here say that Mrs. McDonald, who is about thirty-five and unusually good looking, disappeared from her home in Tolchester in company with Elliott on August 25th. The runaway wife and her companion the police further say, went to Rochester, where Mrs. McDonald rented apartments over a jewelry store, which was looted a short time ago and a large quantity of silverware and jewelry stolen.

Mrs. McDonald and Elliott were found to have fled from Rochester when the police began to investigate the robbery.

When Mrs. McDonald left home she took with her two children, Elizabeth green, and Sidney two, a remarkable childish attachment existed between Elizabeth and her old sister, Mabel, who since the mother departed has been caring for the three children who, with her, were deserted by the mother.

Elizabeth sent letters at regular intervals to Mabel, but not until a few days ago did one of these letters contain the address at which Elliott and Mrs. McDonald were living in Philadelphia. Mabel had previously shown none of these letters to her father, but when she realized that the latest letter might be the mans of finding her mother, she turned it over to her father.

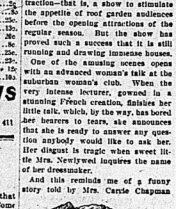
In The Wide World Of Woman.

BEAUTY VERSUS ADORNMENT

A Plea For the Plain but Smartly Dressed Woman.



MRS. CATT'S LATEST BONMOT.

The Need For a Special Maid on the Sleeping Car to Shun the Little Girls Who Have No Mammas Along to Look After Them.

Miss Elsa—I went last evening to a most amusing play, "The Commuters," that was put on at one of the big Broadway theaters for a tide over attraction—that is, a show to stimulate the appetite of roof garden audiences before the opening attractions of the regular season. But the show has proved such a success that it is now running and drawing immense houses.

One of the amusing scenes opens with an advanced woman's tale at the suburban woman's club. When the very intense lecturer, gowned in a stunning French creation, finishes her little talk, which, by the way, has bored her hearers to tears, she announces that she is ready to answer any question anybody would like to ask her. Her disgust is tragic when sweet little Mrs. Newlywed inquires the name of her dressmaker.

And this reminds me of a funny story told by Mrs. Carrie Chapman

Catt recently. It seems a man was addressing a woman's club on the subject, "Woman's Sphere Is the Home." After a lot of the usual talkee-talkee he drew himself pompously and said, "All that I am I owe to my wife." Yes," replied a wag at the back of the audience, "that's right, exactly as all the men blame everything on a woman."

Now I'm going to discuss the beauty question. No; I'm not going to tell you the right way to treat your eyebrows or instruct you as to the ways of the latest hairdresser—the bobbie effect, it's beauty versus clothes—that's my screed today.

To begin, I don't see why people should war concelted on the strength of an aquiline nose or a well shaped mouth or dreamy eyes surrounded with lashes half an inch long and black as night, do you? Because the beautiful person is apt to get so full of think of it merely sees herself in a glass darkly, never face to face, as we see her. She catches a glimpse of herself in a shop window, and a shop window is far more complimentary than lying one fits over the back of one's skirt than any tried and tested assurance as to the beauty of one's face.

Then take a looking glass.

If I were as ugly as a looking glass makes me out I'd give up the ghost at once; but, as you know, I'm optimistic, and men have said—well, they have said things that are rather nice about it. But, then, some one said, "All men are liars."

That's just it—one never knows.

Now, a woman has, to my mind, no earthly reason to be "cocky" over her beauty either of face or form.

The only subject on which she has a right to be so pleased with herself is that she enjoys people in her clothes, more especially if she pays for them out of the money she earns herself. To do this she must have good taste and must understand herself perfectly, so she can express herself in her clothes. She must be firm and unshaken in her belief in herself, so that she can override the absurdities dressmaker's opinions, as those same persons usually their patrons into wearing clothes that don't suit them.

She must have the courage of her opinions for a week before the fashions, which some people think is even worse than being a week behind; but, you know, my dear, these are the people who are generally not in the "know."

She must learn a new way of sitting and walking every year—this season of grace we do the chaniclear hop—she must never be ungraceful and always, the most difficult of all, absolutely unconscious of the good looking clothes she wears.

Those are all things I think one might be proud of, for they show character, persistence and self forgetfulness. And after these qualities are added up to the good of the plain woman the proud beauty, who's never done a hand's turn for herself, would better take a back seat.

Pretty women often, too, trade on their faces. They think it "Providence has given us so much, why should we try to improve on it?"

If they cultivate no intellect they have nothing to say for themselves, and after a man, captivated by their pretty faces, has escorted one of them to the altar he spends the rest of his life scouring the country for really plain women and basking in the warmth of their wit and quality and the good taste (which has served them so well in the choice of their clothes) that one forgets that they are plain and makes them almost beautiful.

Am I not the apostle of the plain woman properly dressed?

Coming back from a long railroad journey recently, I was struck with the necessity of a special maid on the sleeping cars to dress the little girls who have no mammas to look after them.

On the sleeper with me were a man and his small daughter. When night came the little miss got to bed all right, but the trouble began in the morning when father undertook to assist with the mysteries of her toilet. The hair combing process was almost his Waterloo. It took a long time for the operation, and every woman in the car was interested in the "nice man."

Now, when papa takes his boy with him things are not so bad. The masculine garments are not so much of a riddle to him, and then there is no arranging of the clothes to wrestle with, so all goes well. But the poor little girl whom papa dresses is not happy in her appearance. She knows she's not exactly buttoned, and she is painfully conscious that her hair ribbons are not tied as they should be; hence the need of a special maid for small girls on the train.

Make yourself a party hood like the illustration I'm sending you. Any material, silk, satin, bits of lace, tiny flowers and children, can go into its makeup and you'll have a lovely hood.

MABEL.

EVENING HOOD.

An Aeroplane Luncheon.

To be strictly up to date one should give an aeroplane luncheon. Send out the invitations on white cards with a flying machine or simply birds with outspread wings painted in one corner.

For the luncheon table arrange a centerpiece of yellow chrysanthemums and over it suspend an airship made of white crape paper filled with cotton batting and shaped like a cigar. Fasten fine strings along the under side, allowing them to hang down about eighteen inches, then draw them together at the ends and tie them to a small basket in which arrange the colored favors or papier mache flying machines, birds and little toy balloons each person has the "Conan's Home Companion, should be small crash bags filled with candy and marked "Ballast."

The following menu would be appropriate:

Halves of Grapefruit.
Flying Fish
Giblets and Finger Rolls
Broiled Wings a la Curtiss
Serve Stuffed Potatoes With the Fried Chicken and Hot Biscuits Instead of Toothpicks and Tissue Paper in the Shape of the Potatoes.)
Salad a la Santos-Dumont.
Sweet Paper Shells Filled With Chattanooga Salad.
Aerated Bread and Butter Sandwiches.
Hamilton Ice Cream, With Lady Fingers and Kisses.

When Housecleaning.

In washing the paint on the wainscot of the room it is difficult, no matter how carefully it may be done, to prevent the cloth or brush from injuring the wall paper directly above the top of the wainscot, and the device which is the subject of the illustration effectually prevents this, and at the same time the upper portion of the wainscot may be thoroughly cleaned without fear of soiling the paper in any way.

It merely consists of an oblong piece of thin board, in the center of which a rough wood handle is small square block of wood will answer the purpose) is fastened, by which it may be held in the left hand flat against the wall just at the top of the wainscot, while with the right hand the wainscot may be washed.

WINTER WINDOW GARDENS.

What Plants to Depend Upon Through Cold Weather.

This is the time to stock the winter house garden. Some plants are to be saved from the garden and some ordered from the florist.

Benjamin Goodrich tells the readers of Country Life that no window garden plant is more dependable than the common geranium, especially in the single varieties, which are handsomest for the purpose. He names the geranium first for pansy, the heliotrope next for fragrance and says a good work for that old fashioned flower, sweet alyssum, which gives the note of white and if not allowed to go to seed blooms continuously.

Primula obconica is recommended for its free blooming habit, its pale pinkish blossoms being produced in abundance. He has a good word also for that beautiful pink begonia, Gloire de Lorraine, but he says it is less dependable than the tall coral begonia (B. coccinea), whose large red blossoms hang from the stiff stems for three or four months. Another good begonia is the Christmas flowering begonia rosea. These will provide bloom.

Forced Dutch and cape bulbs, brought in in succession, add much to the interest of the winter garden. The so called Chinese lily, double Roman, Von Sion, Grand Soleil d'Or narcissi, crocus and Princess Hortense tulips will make a string of blooms from Christmas to early April." Hyacinths, single and double Roman, Isis, Garrick's drop and scilla are also favorably mentioned.

In a Velvet Season.

Long slender lines dominate the street costume, as evidenced by the smart little suit of dark wine velvet illustrated, which is cut with a narrow skirt. The coat follows the lines of the figure, reaching long, sloped waisted effect. Three rows of simple loop frogs fronts bottom trimmed both on the skirt and on the jacket. The collar facing is of Australian blue opossum. The satin swatched turban is a natty French creation.

SUIT OF DARK WINE VELVETEEN.

Sewing Room Suggestions.

An applique of small velvet flowers on a net scarf is pretty. A scarf and flowers—the latter in a border, narrow at the sides, wide at the ends—were both of deep term cotts.

When the piercer for embroidery is missing or broken, try sharpening down an orange wood manicure stick and using that instead. It makes a nice, clean hole and does not tear the material laggedly. Many needleworkers prefer to use it to the fine inserter of the steel or ivory implement. It is cheap enough and readily replaced when broken or lost.

Often in padding a buttonhole edge or a design for solid embroidery the white padding cotton through the color that is afterward stitched under it. This is especially noticeable and disagreeable in a dark shade. I have seen an solved the problem by doing her padding in cotton a trifle darker than the silk as she could get. The result was eminently satisfactory. It may seem extravagant, but one needs only 3 cents a spool, and the extra expense was worth while.

A Word in Time.

To Clean the Kid Boot Linings—The best method of cleaning white kid and white sheepskin linings of boots is to sponge with benzine. Superficial dirt can be cleaned off with a piece of india rubber such as is used for removing lead pencil marks.

For Baked Custard.—When making baked custard, if the milk is warmed before adding the eggs no water will settle in the bottom of the baking dish.

When sweeping carpet, sawdust or any thick piled carpet, always brush the way of the pile, and it will look fresh and bright for years.

Pressing Centerpieces.

When laundering centerpieces the ugly puckering that prevents their lying flat on the table is prevented by ironing the center before the edges.

Handkerchiefs are also best ironed in this way, though usually the hems are ironed first.

It's With Us, the Hebbie Petticoat.

Have you a hobbie petticoat built expressly for wear beneath the skirt of your new tailored fall suit? If not your grudgery petticoat, with its three yard width and frou-frou fullness at the bottom, will do all sorts of awkward things to the straight, narrow hobble skirt above it. The hobble petticoat means not more than two yards around the bottom, some of them not more than a yard and a half. Several dainty hobble petticoats are pictured here. One is a taffeta model, made in the ordinary way, but only two yards around the bottom. Another is a lingerie hobble petticoat with a flounce of eyelet embroidery; this a satin petticoat lounded in at the ankle in fourie hobble style with a strip of Dresden ribbon. Of course all these petticoats are exquisitely fitted over the hips and are fastened somewhere with snap buttons at the back or at one side of the front.

What Marcel Provost Says.

Among those few men who possess the knowledge to read, let it be added, the fortitude necessary to write accurately on the subject of woman—the most elusive and seeming of all subjects—M. Marcel Prevost, the famous French author and member of the Academie, addresses the ranks first.

Feminine psychology is his domain. He has studied the woman of today, especially the woman of the upper classes, with such persistence and subtlety, and has set down so many and precious qualifications for doing so that more than one reader of his book after perusing a few pages has exclaimed, somewhat sensationally, "The man who wrote this was a woman."

In his latest volume, spitz entitled "Feminines," which has been just published by M. Lemerre, Paris, this keen connoisseur of woman chats on his favorite theme in his own leisurely and smiling way.

An Austrian Bulls.

An awkward subject, but our French "immortal" is not embarrassed, and dashes off a few pages of gossip with all problems of vital interest to the feminine world now have dared to hold the subject of corsets. Corsets, he quote, however, M. Prevost's conclusions:

"Corsets are not good for the health, but they will live.

"Woman wears them not because they are comfortable, but because she has an instinctive ability of appearing as nature made her. In China the torturers her feet into absurdly small and distorted stumps; in Africa and elsewhere she passes a ring through her nostrils. In parts of the east she blackens her teeth. It is a matter of taste for deformation she chiefly applies to her waist and not to her feet.

"On the other hand, it must be admitted—

"First—That no husband would allow his wife to go without corsets.

"Second.—That corsets create an average type of beauty in the feminine.

"Third.—That the woman who wears corsets does not do so to such a degree as twice man about the size and shape of her waist, but in order to please him."

Towel Borders.

Towels that have been embroidered with initials and monograms should have embroidered borders also. These may be straight or scalloped and should be embroidered in such designs as wild rose, aster, forgetmenot and orchil patterns and conventionalized wreaths, bowknots and flowers. Towels, sheets or pillowcases thus embroidered make a handsome and a priceless gift to the particular and beauty loving housewife.

Vahbergaras.

"Give him some vahbergrass, bills," was the advice of an old rag and bone man to a lady in a neighborhood child was sitting in a mid-Derbyshire village. The remark was puzzling until the children's nurse's key to translate it: "

Wholesale Arrest of Leaders Is Likely To Follow Now.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 19.—The secret police of the Mexican Government to-day seized 50,000 rifles and a large quantity of ammunition, which had been collected and concealed by leaders of a secret revolutionary movement.

Seizures were made in this city and at Puebla, Eloen, Tepic and Pachuca. It is expected many arrests will be made among the revolutionists, and that some prominent Mexicans will be included among the prisoners.

The uprising was set for Nov. 20. The movement seems widespread. There is intense, though suppressed, excitement throughout Mexico. The inaugural ball has been called off.

Trouble seems more imminent at Pachuca and Eloen than elsewhere, and people are getting their women and children out of the danger zone.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—"Belle Elmore is alive and I have seen her," is the positive statement made by Mrs. Lola Greer at her home in Roosevelt, L.I.

Mrs. Greer, who is the widow of Robert J. Greer, former head of the Greer Booking Agency, which had booked the actress seven years ago, declared Belle Elmore came to her house one night about the time that Crippen was taken back to England and asked for Mr. Greer, from whom she wanted to secure a vaudeville engagement.

The woman said she wanted to appear under the name of Daisy Norton to conceal her identity until her husband, who was in trouble in England, was dead.

Mrs. Greer thought this very strange and asked the woman jokingly if she was not afraid she would be taken for Belle Elmore. According to Mrs. Greer the woman threw up her hands and fainted.

When Mrs. Greer drew the woman up to revive her she was struck by the features of a woman her husband had booked seven years before as Belle Elmore.

On recovering from the swoon the woman begged Greer to keep her visit a secret. Upon being told that she would be detained if an officer was within hearing distance, she sprung the door open and fled into the darkness.

NO SMOKING ON TORONTO STREET CARS IN FUTURE

TORONTO, Nov. 19.—There was consternation among the back-spokers of Toronto to-day when Manager R. J. Fleming, of the Toronto Railway Company, announced that the company intended to enforce its by-law prohibiting smoking on the street cars in a penalty of $20 fine. Trouble is expected when they try to put it into effect Dec. 1st.

ONTARIO HOCKEY ASSO. IN SESSION

(Intelligencer Special)

TORONTO, Nov. 19.—At the twenty-first annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association this morning, with representatives from most of the Ontario cities and towns present, a resolution of John Ross Robertson that all junior players provide official documents, issued by the Registrar-General's Department or local registrar, or an extract from church baptismal records, to prove their ages, was carried unanimously. Mr. Robertson's cup was accepted with thanks.

Property Owners In Session Here Form A Live Association

Representative Taxpayers Hold Meeting Last Night—Front St. Pavement And C. N. R. Bridge Discussed.—Executive Committee Elected.

The meeting called for last evening in the Council Chamber of the property owners of the city was well attended by representative taxpayers. After some discussion it was decided to form a Property Owners' Association and an executive committee was appointed to arrange details, such as officers, rules and regulations. Among those present were the following:

Ald. Thompson, Fairfield, Parks, Robinson, Chown and McCrodan, and Messrs. S. S. Laier, W. N. Ponton, J. J. B. Flint, J. P. Wills, A. Gribble, D. R. Leavens, J. Caldwell, H. H. Leavens, P. R. Lingham, W. J. Hudson, W. C. Reid, S. R. Gorman, J. A. Roy, W. J. Brown, R. Fisher, O. S. Hicks, Sheriff Morrison, C. J. Bowell and J. Fenn.

On motion of Mr. J. F. Wills, seconded by Mr. P. R. Lingham, Col. S. S. Lazier was appointed chairman and Col. Ponton secretary of the meeting.

Col. Lazier, in opening his remarks, said that Belleville was on the upward grade which was pleasing. The property owners of the city should exercise an influence over the City Council in the matters appertaining to the city's interest. A live Property Owners' Association he considered would be advantageous to the city. A vexed question at present was the pavement of Front Street. The street was in a disreputable condition and should be repaired. The City Council has proposed to place down a permanent pavement, but the property owners of Front Street consider that the Council is asking them to pay too much of their proportion of the cost of same.

Mr. J. J. B. Flint said the future possibilities of the city were bright, and it was necessary to get the best men possible should be elected to govern the city. He considered the last municipal nominations in some wards, in which not enough candidates could be secured to fill the number of seats. This should not be the case. The time has come when we must take an active interest personally in civic affairs and select the best men possible to conduct the city's business. How to accomplish this matter will need to be discussed and could be done by the Property Association, which he thought would be a move in the right direction. Every

SCHENK CHAUFFEUR WAS IN TORONTO YESTERDAY

Will Stay In This Country In The "Meantime"—Is Believed To Be Most Important Witness For The State.

TORONTO, Nov. 19.—Lundy Wilson, chauffeur for Mrs. Schenck, who is now in Wheeling, W. Va., jail, charged with administering poison to her millionaire husband, was in Toronto yesterday morning. To-day he is in Montreal, and it is probable that he will remain in Canada until the Schenck case has blown over.

The chauffeur was first identified with the woman's name after the arrest, but it was shown that her move seven infantries was for a trick to Wheeling. The State now wants him as a witness to declare, it is stated, that Mrs. Schenck had given him $1,000 to drive the auto over a cliff with Schenck, or to administer to him when opportunity offered a poisoned pill.

The Toronto News will this afternoon place in the possession of the police of Toronto the following letter:

Editor of The News:

Sir,—Relative to your statement in to-night's News that the police are anxious to find the whereabouts of the missing chauffeur of John O. Schenck, of Wheeling, W. Va., the writer of this note can say Lundy Wilson of this city is employed by 9.02 train, and according to him he is going to stay with friends in that city meantime. You can use this information as you think suitable.

Faithfully yours,

T. H. W.

Decidedly Leninent Toward Suffragettes

Government Orders Release of 120 Rioters!-To Put up With Them Rather Than Send Them To Jail

LONDON, Sept., Nov. 19.—One hundred and twenty Suffragettes were arrested in connection with the riots yesterday. They were arraigned in the police court this morning, all with apparent resignation as martyrs to the cause. There was a murmur of disappointment, however, when the presiding Justices announced their immediate release, following instructions from the Home Secretary.

Apparently the Government has decided it had better put with riots than send the women to prison.

MRS PANKHURST

CHURCH IS AFTER RUSSIAN WRITER

Prelates Express Willingness To Take Count Tolstoi Back.

MESSAGE SENT

Philosopher Asked To Withdraw His Heresies And Receive Offices of Church

St. Petersburg, Nov. 19.—Emperor Nicholas yesterday had an audience with the procurator of the holy synod, M. Lukianoff, to whom he expressed the wish that Count Tolstoi be buried according to the orthodox rite, even if a reconciliation between the author and the church were not effected.

The holy synod has been discussing the question of rescinding the old decree of excommunication against Tolstoi. Premier Stolypin has left the synod to lose no time in deciding the question one way or another. He points out the consequence of raising Christian burial in some form, or reputation of his error to Tolstoi's part, however, is absolutely necessary before the synod can go against the canons law regarding excommunication. It is believed that the Bishop of Tamboff has gone to Astapovo to ascertain the views on this point of Tolstoi, either from himself or his immediate friends.

The last of the telegram from the Metropolitan Antonius is as follows:

"Even in the very final moments of your rupture with the church I incessantly prayed, and pray now that God may restore you to the church. Possibly He is soon to summon you to the judgment seat. I implore by your sickness now to reconcile yourself with the church and the orthodox Russian people. May God bless you."

Count Tolstoi and his daughter defendants decided, not to submit the telegram to Tolstoi in his present condition.

It was learned that Tolstoi's condition was practically unchanged yesterday afternoon. Four physicians are making constant efforts to aid the heart, the weakness of which is the source of the chief danger. Other symptoms are said to be encouraging. The fever has disappeared, and the inflammation of the lungs has made slight progress since Thursday.

The convict remains conscious, and although extremely weak, is cheerful and confident of ultimate recovery.

BIG DITCH WILL BE IN READINESS IN DECEMBER 1913

PANAMA, Nov. 18.—The Panama Canal will be completed Dec. 1, 1913. This information was given to President Taft yesterday while he was inspecting the Gatun dam, on which he spent several hours. The official date of the opening remains Jan. 1, 1915, Lieut.-Col. Goethals desiring one year in which to train the canal tenders and get the machinery working smoothly. Ships in the meantime will be granted the privilege of the canal, but at their own risks of delay, President to inexperienced operation.

In addition Lieut.-Col. Boethals declared that the report that President Taft's visit was the forerunner of a request for another $100,000,000 from Congress was unfounded. The canal will be completed in 1913, he said, within the $375,000,000 already authorised.

The President was tremendously pleased at the outlook for the early completion of the great work and congratulated Col. Goethals. He expressed amazement at the amount of work accomplished since his visit to the Isthmus in January, 1909. Although familiar with the details of the canal since he was Secretary of War, he was nevertheless surprised at the immensity of the dam, some idea of which can be gained from the fact that the special train was under way nearly three hours on the spur tracks overrunning the great fill. The President exclaimed:

"This is a mountain, not a dam."

OPEN X'MAS.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—Christmas comes on Sunday this year, but the holiday will be on Monday. Despite the amendment of the Liquor License Act at the last session of the Legislature closing the bars on Christmas Day, they will be wide open on the Christmas holiday as no provision has been made for closing when the anniversary falls on a Sunday and is celebrated on a week day.

Ends Saunders, K.C., chief of the liquor Licenses Department, states that the Christmas closing applies only to Dec. 25th.

"The law says that Christmas shall be a holiday," he said, "but it makes no provision for any other day than the 25th of December. So, therefore, as this holiday this year comes on Monday, the hotelkeepers will be able to keep open for business."

According to the Ontario license statute, liquor cannot be sold "During Christmas Day or any day on which a poll is being held throughout the municipality, or in the electoral district or ward in which such place is situate for or at any parliamentary election or election of a member to the Legislative Assembly, or any municipal or school election, or under

"I'm not sure whether the hotelmen will take advantage of the law at Christmas," said James Haveron, solicitor for the licensed victuallers. "Before the law was amended many hotelkeepers closed their bars on Christmas of their own volition, and I am not so sure but that they may do it now. It all lies with the hotelkeepers. When the amendment for closing on Christmas proposed it re-

BENEATH YOUR FAT A GRACEFUL FIGURE DWELLS

War on the sale of bad eggs has been begun in New York. But if the hens will not lay good eggs what is the answer?

Robin Cooper did not murder Senator Carmack. His father did not murder Carmack, according to the then Governor Patterson, who pardoned him. John Sharp did not murder him. it's all a mistake, according to the latest returns. All the same Senator Carmack is dead.

What about the five piers in the C. N.R. bridge? Is the Council going to let matters drift until the bridge is built or will the matter be PRESSED before the Railway Commission once? Delays are DANGEROUS, as we found to our cost already. There is no necessity for more than one pier in the centre.

A column article in the Le Roy, Ill., journal reverses the news that Nelson Goodrich Humphrey, the "sweet singer" of an earlier day, is still alive and has his home at Normal, Ill., The editor of the journal draws upon reviews by Mr. Humphrey's "Random Shots" for evidence that the divine afflatus affiated generously in 1855. it is still afflating at intervals.

This is an editorial. It's time for the Good Fellows Club to get together and think about somebody else's Christmas—not grown ups, understand—but some little toteheads who, otherwise might help 'em, never get any closer to the Christmas spirit than you get to the 'golden fleece.' Why, even the red cherries you get in your cocktail would be a happy surprise to some kid. Think it over, Good Fellows, and the Jingles water for a night and blow the proceeds on some dirty-faced shrimp who is all pinched up with neglect and carelessness of the world. A microscopic examination of your soul doesn't show enough goodness and charity to entitle you to even send your card in to St. Peter. Get busy and dig up.

Ethel Lenevc, Crippen's associate, report says, is coming to Canada, and the question has been asked in Ottawa "if, under the immigration laws," she could not be prevented from coming into the country. The reply of one of the officials was that there were clauses in the Immigration Act under which the Canadian Government could prevent landing of the woman in this country. He would not say that the Government would prevent her from coming here, but he was decidedly of the opinion that it could if it wanted to, and he believed the Government would stop her entry. The immigration officials were of opinion that the only way for Leneve to come to Canada would be with a theatrical company, who are regarded as tourists. Keep her out of the country. Canada wants none of her kind.

At a meeting of the Commercial Travellers' Association in Toronto the other day a member gave notice that at the annual meeting he would bring up a resolution calling upon the Government to provide hotel accommodation throughout the province or to enact that all municipalities passing local option by-laws shall assume the responsibility of inspection and control of all houses for the accommodation of the public. This is a burning question with the commercial travellers. The average standard of the hotels of the province of Ontario was never any higher than it should be, but even this comparatively low standard has deteriorated since a considerable proportion of the rural municipalities adopted local option. Boiled down, the facts are that the bar business has enabled the hotel man to provide better accommodation for the traveller than the amount charged him warranted; that the bar profits having disappeared, the hotel man has put the board and lodging end of his business on a business basis when he has not gone out of business, and that the principal sufferers are the commercial travellers.

Rev Mr. Smith Is Cordially Welcomed

New Pastor of Baptist Church Receives Well Mented Tributes and a Purse of Greenbacks

The schoolroom of the Baptist church was beautifully decorated last night, it being the occasion of a formal reception to Rev. Mr. Smith, and Mrs. Smith. At seven o'clock the large gathering sat down to an appetizing dinner prepared by the ladies. At eight o'clock Rev. Robt. Wallace, who acted as chairman, before calling on different ones to take part, read letters of regret of the inability of Bishop Bev. Messrs. Young and Beatrix. The chairman received his delight and intense satisfaction in having Mr. Smith as pastor, and hoped that he would emulate Pastor Laing of the Peterboro church, who was celebrating the 32nd anniversary as pastor there. Mr. Harry McKay then favored the audience with his sweet rendering of "Lovely Lonsdale." Having to be persistent encore, he sang "Sweet Afton." Rev. Mr. Keyes followed upon, who in behalf of the congregation of St. Andrew's, extended a hearty welcome to Mr. Smith, who, he was sure, would be a valuable acquisition in combating the forces of evil. Belleville had many things of which she was proud, but there were conditions here which should be changed.

Prof. Riggs' orchestra of fourteen pieces which played during the first part of the function, then added another number to the delight of all. Deacon Riggs then, on behalf of the deaconate, extended a greeting. He was followed by Mr. Hess, who extended greetings in behalf of the Young Men's Christian Association. Miss Wanda Riggs was then called upon, and sang that beautiful song by Ashley "In Thy Hands." Mr. Hubly was then introduced. Mr. Hubly was in a very humorous mood and added a number of amusing anecdotes to his words of welcome in behalf of the Reformed Episcopal Church. Mr. J. C. McLaurin followed by paying Mr. Smith some well merited tributes and handing him in behalf of the congregation a purse of greenbacks.

Mr. Smith responded very graciously and expressed his delight in being with the Belleville church. Mrs. Smith was urged to favor by the platform. Amidst applause she consented and took occasion of thanking the many friends for their good will and for their gifts on Hollowe'en.

The Misses Riggs then sang that beautiful duet "Thy Redeemer Liveth," by Mendelssohn. The happy gathering was then brought to a close by Rev. Mr. Keyr pronouncing the benediction.

Extracted Bills From Pocket of Uncle's Coat

Serious Charge Made Against Young Man in Police Court Here Today.

A young man named Adelbert Weese was arrested last evening, and this morning preferred a charge. It is alleged that on Thursday afternoon the accused was in company with his uncle, Mr. W. H. Brickman, an aged man, and took from the latter's coat pocket three ten dollar bills. A third party who was near by stated that he saw Weese place his hand in Brickman's pocket, where the bills were, but did not see the money extracted. Weese denies taking the money.

Weese was this morning brought up before Magistrate Masson and pleaded not guilty to the charge of theft. The case was then proceeded with, Mr. Anderson represented the Crown and Mr. Carnew for the accused.

Weese was acquitted at two o'clock.

Property Owners

The C. N. R.'s apparent determination to jeopardize the safety and security of property along the river-front by the construction of an unnecessary number of piers for their bridge without any energetic or well directed effort being made on the part of our city government to check such a move, and the Council's mad infatuation with a plan to force the owners of property on Front Street to pay forty per cent. of the cost of construction of a permanent pavement along that street are alone good and sufficient reasons for the formation of a Property Owners' Association.

If the interests of real estate owners are left more or less unprotected by the governing bodies, it is time for these people to organize and unite in an effort to protect their interests themselves. And in nine cases out of ten the interests of the real estate people are the interests of the city as a whole. What is of benefit to the owners of real estate is usually of benefit to the city.

The Association formed here last night can do a good work, both now and in the future. But if it is to do effective work its members, one and all, must be active and enthusiastic at all times.

It is to be hoped the question of taxation will be given some consideration in the future.

Mr. Pugsley Lay Down

Buy Mr. Pugsley's latest "vindication" is receiving the satirical comment of the press. Listen, for example, to the Hamilton Herald, an independent paper: "The Dominion Government," it says, "allowed Contractor Mayes to win his suit by default. No evidence was submitted. The Government could better afford to pay Mayes all he claimed than to have McAvity subjected to cross-examination.

That is exactly what occurred. Here was the Department of Public Works with three counsel ready to defend the suit, an array of witnesses ready to testify, a strenuous denial on the record that Mr. Mayes was entitled to a cent, all the forces of the department lined up to fight a litigious contractor, and what happened? The Crown's defence suddenly collapsed like a house of cards.

Less than twenty-four hours before the hearing, Mr. George McAvity had been subpœnaed to give evidence, as to his dealings with Mr. Pugsley and Mr. Mayes. Mr. Pugsley appears in court, ignores counsel, witnesses and the Crown's defence, takes the case into his own hands and settles it by paying Mr. Mayes nearly $10,000 and costs. And the item for $5,000—the only one in Mr. Mayes' claim, be it noted, in which Mr. McAvity's evidence was material, and which Mr. Pugsley himself had repeatedly said was not owing—he agrees to pay in full.

As was sarcastically remarked by the St. John Globe, a Liberal paper —"This case in Mr. Pugsley's department as handled by the minister himself, is a most excellent precedent, striking in its originality, notable in its simplicity and wonderful in its results."

Youth and Beauty

WOMEN AND MEN ARE ANXIOUS TO KEEP YOUNG.

Nothing so detracts from the attractiveness of woman as dull, faded, lifeless hair.

There is no excuse for this condition nowadays, because notice is hereby given to the readers of The Intelligencer that Parisian Sage, the quick acting hair restorer, is now on sale in Belleville at the drug store of J. Y. Doyle and sold with a rigid guarantee at 50 cents a large bottle.

Since its introduction into Canada, Parisian Sage has had an immense sale, and here are the reasons:

It is safe and harmless.

It removes dandruff in two weeks, by killing the dandruff germ.

It stops falling hair.

It promptly stops itching of the scalp.

It makes the hair soft, glossy, and luxuriant.

It gives life and beauty to the hair. It is not sticky or greasy.

It is the daintiest perfumed hair tonic made.

It is the best, the most pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made.

Fight off the druggist who offers you a substitute, he is unworthy of your confidence.

BIG FIGHT IN PROVINCE OVER LOCAL OPTION NOW

Between Eighty and Ninety In Throes Of Tremendous Struggle—Is Hot In Some Places,

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—One of the busiest places in the city of Toronto these days is the office of the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance. The workers of that organization are preparing for their annual onslaught upon the bar-room; for another great local option campaign is in progress in the Province of Ontario.

The secretary of the Alliance states that on Monday, January 2, 1911, between 80 and 90 municipalities will vote upon the question of local prohibition.

A striking feature of the campaign is the keenness of the attempts to repeal local option. Last year there were 111 municipalities in which repeal contests were possible, but in 12 only was the matter brought to a vote, and only two by-laws were repealed.

This year there are 137 municipalities in which repeal contests might be brought on. Of the 137 possible places, repealing by-laws will be submitted in only about six. These are East Nissouri township, Beverley township, Colborne village, Woodburn township, Howick township and McKellar township.

The city of Guelph is the centre of a hot fight. Just near Guelph, voting will take place in Guelph and Eramosa township, Erin village and Drayton village.

Halton county has only three licenses. These are all in the village of Grand Valley, which place is looked upon by both sides as a strategic point, and will be the scene of a hard-fought battle.

The hottest place in the province, however, is the county of Welland. Here a county convention was held last spring, at which it was decided to bring on a fight in every municipality in the county, as far as possible, with the result that ten municipalities will vote in January, including the towns of Welland, Thorold, Port Colborne and Bridgeburg, with the townships of Thorold, Crowland, Humberstone, Stamford, Willoughby, and Bertie.

The following is a list of the municipalities where voting upon local option by-laws will take place upon January 2nd next: In each case the number of licenses now granted is also given: Allsemarle, 1; Aldborough, 1; *Alexandria, 3; *Amherstburg, 6; *Barrie, 12; Bastard, 2; *Beaverton, 2; Bertie, 7; Bexley, 2; *Bracebridge, 5; *Braeambton, 8; *Bridgeburg, 4; *Bothwell, 3; *Burk's Falls, 3; Camden East, 7; Chapman, 1; *Chesley, 2; Crowland, 11; Cumberland, 4; *Drayton, 3; Elizabethtown, 1; *Erin 2; Flamboro East, 2; Flamboro West, 2; Flos, 4; Georgina, 1; *Gananoque, 3; Gloucester, 6; *Grand Valley, 3; *Guelph City, 19; Guilimbury North, 2; Hinchinbrook, 2; Humberstone, 9; *Huntsville, 4; Guelph 1; Kenyon, 4; Lancaster, 3; Lancaster, 2; Lochiel, 2; Loughborough, 2; Lavant, 1; Mara 2; *Maxville, 2; *Merrickville, 2; *Napanee, 8; *Newburgh, 1; *Newcastle, 1; Palmerston, 2; *Paisley, 3; *Perth, 9; Plympton, 1; *Port Colborne, 5; *Port Elgin, 4; Pushinch, 2; Rochester, 5; *Rodney, 2; Roxborough, 4; Russell, 6; Scarboro', 6; Sheffield, 5; Shelbourne, 2; *Smith's Falls, 8; Stamford, 3; *Sutton, 3; Tay, 2; *Tweedale, 3; *Thornbury, 3; Thorold township, 4; Toronto, 5; Toronto Gore, 1; Tyendinaga, 3; *Vankleek Hill, 3; *Walland, 8; *Watford, 3; *Wardsville, 1; *West Lorne, 3; Willoughby, 4; Wolford, 1.

ANNA GOULD GIVES A STRONG DENIAL

Countess Talleyrand Has Not Sought Vatican's Aid—She Was Married In London Hugueno-Church.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—Positive denial that she seeks aid of the Vatican to annul her previous marriage to the Count de Castellane was made that she might have a Catholic wedding ceremony performed to legalize in the eyes of the church her marriage to Prince de Sagan, was made to-day by the Countess Talleyrand, formerly Miss Anna Gould. She said that she and the Prince were married in the Huguenot church in London that she is, and that they always have been Protestants, and that, therefore, this ceremony is just as much a religious ceremony as one in a Catholic church would be.

According to the Countess, her sister, Helen Gould, discovered this fact, and had a legal record made in the event that the marriage should ever be questioned. Discussing the rumor that Count Boni de Castellane wished to have the Vatican dissolve his marriage so that he might marry Miss Anne Morgan, daughter of J. P. Morgan, the banker, his former wife said:

"If there is any truth in the rumor, I would suggest to Miss Morgan that she call on my sister, Miss Vera Gould, and learn some thing about M. de Castellane."

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Regarding the rumor from Paris that the Count de Castellane has petitioned the Vatican to set aside his marriage to Miss Gould, it was said that the Count was wed Miss Anne Morgan, Miss Elizabeth Marbury, Miss Morgan's closest friend, said to-day:

"Miss Morgan has no intention of becoming engaged to the count."

JOSIAH ZEITLIN DANCED ON HIS 100TH BIRTHDAY AND WAS AS LIVELY AS A CRICKET.

Old Mr. Josiah Zeitlin, of 130 Lexington Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y., hasn't much time to think about how he has lived to be 100 years old. He is too busy planning what he shall do for many more years. He laughs at temperance, thinking and smoking, and points with pride to the fact that he has always done just what he pleased, and has never had a sick day in his life.

"Although I was 100 years old on July 3rd last, I still feel that I am good for several years. I was born in Poland, and after a long and lengthy business life in the old land came to this country in 1882 to reside with my daughter, Emma Zeitlin Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for many years and find it very beneficial. It invigorates and gives me strength. I feel that it has helped me to live to the 100-years. Duffy's Pure Malt health and strength."

"Fruit-a-tives" Keeps Health Perfect

OTTERVILLE, Ont., July 5th 1910.

"I am a seventy-nine year old man, and a great believer in, and user of "Fruit-a-tives". It is the only medicine I take, and I can truly say that "Fruit-a-tives" and exercise have done me in my present good health.

Strictness of the Rules" was the complaint I suffered from, and I found "Fruit-a-tives" to do me more good than any other remedy. My doctor advised me to stick to "Fruit-a-tives" and I have done so with the best results.

I have been in business here for a good many years and have been a resident of Otterville for over fifty years, so that if you think this little reference from me will serve to indice some others to try "Fruit-a-tives", I hereby authorize its publication.

Obstinate Constipation, Paralysis of the Bowels and Stricture of the Bowels have positively no action on the liver. They do not increase the secretion of Bile, which action provides to move the bowels. They merely irritate the membranes lining the intestines. One may as well try to cure a headache with pounding on one's head against a stone wall, as to try to cure Constipation with common purgatives. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only true cure for Constipation. "Fruit-a-tives" is fruit juices and nerve tonics, and will always restore the liver to its proper condition and cure the most obstinate cases of Constipation.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTONS ON SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

Our Bible Question Local Club is looking up and we are much encouraged. It is very remarkable how these questions interest, even the general public. It is a mistake to suppose, as some do, that this contest is confined exclusively to adults. Bright boys and girls can take up these simple studies, and may comply with the conditions as well as their seniors, and are just as likely to win a solid gold medal or one of the other prize. The prime object of this Bible Question Club is to get old and young to reading the Sunday School Lessons, and to ponder the Suggestive Questions. It must not be forgotten that in answering questions it is legitimate to get all the help which is necessary. Anybody can cut out and sign the coupon each week, and can read the lesson and the questions. This does not take long, but it does take method, and it means the unspeakable benefit of reading these studies from week to week. You will find it to be a great benefit to join some Bible Class, and get the help and enthusiasm which comes from company.

You will need the Intelligencer in order to read the questions and get the necessary coupon; you had better subscribe at once. If you are a subscriber, then send the paper to some person whom you think this course of reading will help. Send in your subscription now.

BIBLE QUESTION CLUB

NOVEMBER 20TH, 1910.

Text in Gethsemane. Matt. xxvi: 36-56.

Golden Text—The Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. Matt. xxvi: 45.

Verse 36—Where was this garden called Gethsemane?

Why does the word Gethsemane now stand for agony?

What purpose did prayer serve in this sorrowful experience of Jesus?

Verses 37-38—What answer can you make to the criticism which has been made, that Jesus would have shown a stronger character, and more faith, if suffering?

What is the benefit of human sympathy when we are in great mental trouble?

Describe the cause which gave Jesus such deep suffering?

Why did Jesus select Peter and John, from the rest of the disciples, when he went on to place of agony?

Verse 39—What "cup" did Jesus pray to be delivered from, the great agony, or the cross, or something else?

Can any person retain the favor of God who is not always in the attitude of soul to say, "not as I will, but as thou wilt?"

Must every true prayer have the condition, "nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt," or are there some exceptions and, if so, what are they?

Verse 40—Why are we, like Jesus, so much hurt, when a confidential friend manifests so little concern in our trouble?

Verse 41—In what degree is Peter to blame for going to sleep, and in what degree blame who go to sleep in church?

Verse 41—Is it, or not, the fault of the spirit, when the flesh is too weak for a man to do his full duty? Why?

Verse 42—What did Jesus need to ask God three times for one thing?

What, if any, rule is there concerning the number of times we should pray for the same thing?

Did the disciples miss anything by not staying awake to watch with Jesus? If so, what?

Can a lost opportunity ever be recovered, or is it an eternal loss? Give your reasons. (This question must be answered in writing by members, of the club.)

Verse 47—What were the motives which prompted Judas to betray Jesus?

Did Judas expect Jesus to be actually put to death, or did he expect that he would escape His enemies as in the past? Why?

Why did the Jews waste money in paying Judas, when they apparently could have arrested Jesus without doing so?

Verses 48-56—What is more hurtful to be betrayed by a friend with a kiss or by an enemy with a blow?

Lesson for Sunday, Nov. 27, 1910. The Trial of Jesus. Matt. xxvi-57-68.

HOW OLD PEOPLE

MAY PROLONG THEIR LIVES.

At an advanced age waste is more rapid than repair. The organs act more slowly and less effectually than in youth. The circulation is poor, the blood thin and watery—the appetite poor and digestion weak.

We want to say to every aged person in this vicinity that Vinol, our delicious iron, wine and cod liver tonic (without oil) will prolong life. It creates an appetite, aids digestion and makes good blood.

In this natural manner Vinol retards waste and overcomes weakness with strength, giving new life to the worn system.

If people in this vicinity only realized how Vinol invigorates old people we would not be able to supply the demand.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

SUFFRAGETTES BUSY.

A Thousand of Them Storm Parliament Buildings in Vain.

London, Nov. 19.—The militant suffragettes resumed hostilities against the Government yesterday, and marching 1,000 strong on the Parliament buildings, gave the police a lively fight. The women, many of whom were placed under arrest, were led by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst.

The suffragettes had determined, if possible, to force the police cordon about the House of Commons and reaching Premier Asquith, to insist upon the introduction of a woman's suffrage bill. The police, however, were too strongly entrenched, and the women who tried every means in their power to force the line were thrown back.

Repeatedly they retired breathless and disheveled, only to have their places on the fighting line taken by reserves.

Before the House of Commons had adjourned for the day 198 suffragettes and supporters had been jailed. After the women had exhausted themselves the arrests occurred with monotonous regularity. The women presented a sorry spectacle when the battle was over. The dresses of many were torn, and their hair hung down. Hats, handbags and bits of feminine apparel and torn banners littered the ground.

Policeman's Slayer Hanged.

Montreal, Nov. 19.—Fully twenty thousand little children crowding available housetops and neighboring windows viewed the hanging of Tim Casey yesterday morning.

His step was firm as he mounted the scaffold and he went to his execution with courage.

Tim Casey, God-have mercy on my poor wife and family orphaned by my hanging," he said quietly when bidding farewell to the attending priest, Father Donovan.

Casey was the slayer of Policeman O'Connell and Forlin. The crime, for which he paid the death penalty, was committed when he was caught with a bag of stolen rubbers which he was trying to sell.

How To Cure Stomach Trouble

A GREAT SUFFERER FROM INDIGESTION TELLS HOW SHE WAS CURED.

Stomach trouble is a general name for all forms of indigestion, whether great pain after eating, belching of wind, heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, or the sharp pains that often make you think you have heart trouble. There are two things noticeable in indigestion. One is that doctors always find indigestion a prominent symptom in a bloodless run-down state. The other, that sufferers usually find relief when a tonic is taken that restores the general health. Without a doubt stomach trouble is simply stomach weakness, and the cure is to make the stomach strong enough to digest food without trouble. Any other treatment is patchwork and cannot cure. The processes of digestion are controlled by the blood and nerves, the stomach that is to say digest food needs a tonic to give it strength. And in all the world there is no better tonic than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They actually make new, rich blood, tone the nerves and so strengthen the stomach that all its bodily functions. We submit the following case: Mrs. Fred Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure even the most obstinate cases of stomach trouble. Mrs. Fred Graf, Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., says: "For years I suffered great torture from indigestion. Sometimes I could eat anything, but instead of benefiting me I was growing worse all the time, till my stomach got so bad that I could not keep a drink without pain. Even cold water would cause suffering. Nor did I get any relief when I ate simple food empty as I still suffered from a horrible burning. I went to Edmonton and consulted one of the best doctors there, but he told me that he could do nothing for me, that all I could do was to diet. For some time I took only hot water and a small piece of brown bread a day, but I got no relief that did not help me and I got so weak and run down that I despaired of ever getting better. Reading of a specialled electric belt and wore it for two months, but it was simply money wasted. Then one day a friend advised me what I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. At first I did not know were intended to cure indigestion, but being assured that they had decided to try them. Before I had found the Pills helping me, but my condition was so bad when I began using them that I could not expect the Pills for about five months before I felt that I was completely cured. Then I could eat any kind of food, and although more than two years have passed since my cure, I have not since had the least trace of trouble. I can most heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to anyone suffering from this terrible trouble."

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic trouble and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash —and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. E. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 35, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States testify willingly testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills and creates vitality, and buoyant female health. If you want A No your own sake or that of those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

one who joins the Association may have to sacrifice some time, but it would no doubt be time well spent.

Mr. J. F. Wills said it was desirable to form a "Property Owners' Association and he moved that such an association be formed and a committee be appointed to draft rules, regulations, etc. Continuing, he said there are some questions of importance just now agitating the citizens. The question of Front Street being paved he referred to, but they was some preparatory work, namely the placing down of a proper sewer and having connection with the same from the various buildings. This should be attended to first. The speaker then referred to the proposition to erect a bridge across the river using five piers, which he contended would block up the river and cause trouble. If we have a five pier bridge it will hold back the ice and throw the water back on Front Street and possibly other streets. It was time we did something to eliminate the danger in this matter. It was a matter needing immediate action. The C. N. R. had evidently secured from the Railway Commission the right to place five piers. The city should send a representative before the Railway Commission and lay before them the facts of the case in a proper manner.

Ald. Robinson said that Mr. Simmons, engineer of the Railway Commission, had recommended that five piers be placed under the bridge instead of seven. The piers would not block up the room in the river the old "nubermen piers did.

Mr. Flint contended that it would be a mistake to have five piers placed in the mouth of the river. This was the view expressed to the speaker by Mr. Geo. Wallbridge, who was for years a member of the Harbor Commission.

Ald. Adams stated that Mr. Simmons promised to send to the Council a plan showing the size of the piers before the Commission decided. A letter was received from Mr. Simmons still two months ago, but the Commission decided the matter.

Mr. Wm. J. Hillman suggested that the Council appoint a deputation to visit upon the Railway Commission in regard to the matter. He moved that the resolution presented by Mr. Wills that an Association be formed.

Col. Ponton said the Union was strength and it would be a good thing to have a Property Association in the city. He contended that the Council should have appeared before the Railway Commission in reference to the matter of erecting a bridge across the river. He hoped the Association when formed, would form a union with the Board of Trade and assist in matters which are for the benefit of the city. A matter he referred to was the auditors' report of the city, which he contended could not be explained by an accountant. It was a report of such a nature that it could not be ascertained what the assets and liabilities were. It was a move in the right direction to have a Property Owner's Association.

The motion proposed by Mr. Wills was unanimously adopted, and the following were named as members of the Executive Committee: Messrs. J. Caldwell, S. S. Lazier, J. J. B. Flint, W. F. R. Lingham, J. F. Wills, D. R. Leavens, G. Wallbridge, J. A. Bell, D. V. Sinclair, T. Ritchie, C. J. Bowell, P. Winn, T. S. Carman, L. B. Cooper and R. J. Graham.

It was decided that the Executive Lazier, and five consist of the Committee.

Mr. J. G. Lindsay, City Engineer, being called upon, said that the C. N. R. bridge across the river could be constructed on two piers. The idea to have five piers was to his mind to save expense. It was much cheaper for the railway to build more piers and have shorter spans.

Col. Lazier suggested that all present indorse the movement of the city to join the Association and make it a live organization.

Col. Ponton said that a matter most important to the city was the harbor and wharfage. Boats are threatening to go by Belleville unless better wharfage is provided. We must get the Government to place in the estimates a sum of money for needed improvements. The G. T. R. will allow the city the use of the old Grand Junction dock for improvement purposes. This is a crying need. We stand in a fair way to get a Government estimate and should do all in our power to secure it.

Ald. Adams thought the city had a good chance to secure Government aid for a new wharf, which was badly needed.

This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned to the call of the temporary chairman, which will be after the Executive has met and prepared its report.

These Tablets never fail to relieve the little ones from any of the many little ills that afflict them. Mrs. Thos. I always recommend them to my friends as they are a grand remedy." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If this be true, then it certainly behooves the general practitioner of medicine to take errors of refraction seriously into consideration in his daily work.

DEATH OF JOHN B. MARSHALL

Recently at Topeka, Kan., Mr. John B. Marshall, director of Marshall-Sallada Baird, a famous musical organization which bears his name, passed away after a brief illness, due to heart failure. Deceased, who was in his 63rd year, was born in Cornwall, Eng. At the age of 21 years he came to Canada and made his home in the city that now mourns his loss. He employed as a clerk by the late Richard Elvins. Mr. Marshall was at that time musically inclined and played a cornet in the Belleville band, which was led by the late Professor Armstrong. In the year 1872 he went to Topeka, where he made his home until his death. He was a builder and contractor by occupation. That city of deceased was popular and a worthy citizen of that place is evidenced by the fact that for one year he was the Mayor during the absence of Mayor Metcher. Prior to that he had served in the City Council. Deceased was a Shriner, a member of the Scottish rites, and Knight Templar of the Masonic Order. In religion he was an Episcopalian. He married Miss Hilda Folk, of Topeka, who, with two sons, John B. and A. H., druggists, of Topeka, survive him. In 1904 he organized the Marshall Band, which musical organization was well known throughout the State. He was present in the inauguration ceremonies of President Harrison at Washington, and was also at the World's Fair in Chicago. The funeral, held at Grace Cathedral, was attended by a concourse of citizens of Topeka and was of an impressive nature. The Masonic order had the cortege playing appropriate selections. The funeral was conducted under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity.

The deceased was a brother of Mr. Thomas Marshall, of this city.

EYE STRAIN AND HEALTH.
Continued.

Serious ocular disease, such as glaucoma or iritis, produces a profound depression of the whole body. In like manner, slighter disturbances long continued will produce profound reflex results. Enthusiasts have claimed the ocular origin of nearly everything, from headache to diabetes mellitus.

Careful observers have demonstrated beyond a doubt, cases of migraine, neuralgia, epilepsy, chorea, neurasthenia, gastric and gastro-intestinal disease, and spinal curvature, in which the principal source of trouble was refractive error, and which yielded to the correction of that error. If this be true then it certainly behooves the general practitioner of medicine to take errors of refraction seriously into consideration in his daily work.

It may be safely stated that a perfectly normal eye does not exist. In a few the structure like the cornea absolutely perfect, perfectly, such as To be continued.

one who joins the Association may have to sacrifice some time, but it would no doubt be time well spent.

Mr. F. F. Wills said it was desirable to form a Property Owners' Association and he moved that such an association be formed and a committee be appointed to draft rules, regulations, etc. Continuing, he said there were some questions of importance just now agitating the citizens. The question of Front Street being paved he referred to, but there was some preparatory work, namely the placing down of a proper sewer and having connection with the same from the various buildings. This should be attended to first. The speaker then referred to the proposition to erect a bridge across the river using five piers, which he contended would block up the river and cause trouble. Now we have a fine pier bridge it will hold back the ice and throw the water back on Front Street and possibly others. It was time we did something to minimize the danger in this matter. It was a matter needing immediate action. The C. N. R. had evidently secured from the Railway Commission the right to place five piers. The city should send a representative before the Railway Commission and lay before them the facts of the case in a proper manner.

Ald. Robinson said that Mr. Simmons, engineer of the Railway Commission, had recommended that five piers be placed under the bridge instead of seven. The piers would no doubt help to dam up the river the old lumbermen piers did.

Mr. Flint contended that it would be a mistake to fill in the flats at the mouth of the river. This was the view expressed to the speaker by Mr. Geo. Wallbridge who is an engineer.

Ald. Adams stated that Mr. Simmons promised to send to the Council a notice of the matter of the piers before the Commission decided.

Notice was received from Mr. Simmons and it was then that the Commission decided the matter.

Mr. Wm. J. Hillson suggested that the Council send a deputation to wait upon the Railway Commission in regard to the matter. He seconded the resolution presented by Mr. Wills that an Association be formed.

Chief Preston stated that action was strength and it would be a good thing to have a Property Association in the city. He contended that the Council should have appeared before the Railway Commission in reference to the matter of erecting a bridge across the river. He hoped the Association when formed would form a union with the Board of Trade and assist in matters which are for the benefit of the city. A matter to be referred to was the auditors' report of the city, which he contended could not be explained by an accountant. If he was a report of such a nature that it could not be ascertained what the assets and liabilities were. It was a move in the right direction to have a Property Owner's Association.

The motion proposed by Mr. Wills was unanimously adopted, and the following were named as members of the Executive Committee: Messrs. C. J. Caldwell, S. S. Lazier, J. J. B. Flint, F. R. Bingham, J. F. Wills, D. B. Stevens, G. Wallbridge, J. A. Rey, D. V. Sinclair, T. Ritchie, C. J. Rowell, P. Wills, T. R. Carman, L. B. Cooper and R. J. Graham.

It was decided that the Executive be at the call of the chairman, Col. Lazier, and five members a quorum.

Mr. J. G. Lindsay, City Engineer, being called upon, said that the C. N. R. bridge across the river could be constructed on two piers. He advises to have five piers was to his mind to save expense. It was much cheaper for the railway to build more piers and have shorter spans.

Col. Lazier suggested that all present indicate where the piers of the city to join the Association and make it a live organization.

Col. Ponton said that a matter most important to the city was the harbor and wharfage. Boats are threatening to go by Belleville unless better wharfage is provided. We must get the Government to place in the estimates a sum of money for needed improvements. The G. T. R. will allow the city the use of the old Grand Junction dock for improvement purposes. This is a crying need. We stand in a fair way to get a Government estimate and should do all in our power to secure it.

Ald. Adams thought the city had a good chance to secure Government aid for a new wharf, which was badly needed.

This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned to the call of the temporary chairman, which will be after the Executive has met and prepared its report.

DEATH OF JOHN B. MARSHALL

Recently at Topeka, Kan., Mr. John B. Marshall, director of Marshall's Band, a famous musical organization which bears his name, suddenly fell dead from an attack of heart failure. Deceased, who was his 64th year, was born in Cornwall, Eng., and in 1870 he came to Canada to Canada and made his home in Belleville. Here he was employed as a clerk by the late Richard Elvins. Mr. Marshall was at that time an accomplished and played a cornet in the Belleville band, which was led by the ate Professor Armstrong. In the 70's he removed to Topeka, where he made his home until his death. He was a builder and contractor in that city. That the deceased was popular and a worthy citizen of that place is evidenced by the fact that he was elected twice as Mayor during the absence of Mayor Bethell. He was also a member of the Masonic Order. In religion he was a Presbyterian. He married Miss Hilda Wills, of Topeka, who, with two sons, John B. and A. H., druggists, of Topeka, survive. In 1886 he organized the Marshall Band, which under his organization was well known throughout the state. The band participated in the inauguration ceremonies of President Harrison at Washington, and was also at the World's Fair in Chicago. The funeral, held at Grace Cathedral, was attended by a concourse of citizens of Topeka and was of an impressive nature. The Marshall Band led the procession playing appropriate selections. The funeral was conducted under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity.

The deceased was a brother of Mr. Thomas Marshall, of this city.

British Crisis Now At Hand.

Yesterday Marked a Momentous Stage in English History—First Shot in New Campaign to be Fired Today.

London, Nov. 19—Yesterday's brief sessions of the two Houses of Parliament are likely to prove to be the turning point in the history of the House of Lords as at present constituted.

The older Conservatives view the march of events with anxious confidence, and are loudly lamenting the disappearance of its hereditary principle as the basis of the Upper Chamber; but, whatever may result, a second appeal to the nation arising from the struggle between the two houses, appears certain, as it does that hereafter both elective and selective bases will enter into the constitution of the House of Lords.

Interest in the situation has now been transferred to the constituencies. The belief today is that the Lords will not attempt to pass the second reading of the veto bill on the conditions imposed by Premier Asquith.

Mr. Asquith will open the Liberal campaign with a speech at the National Liberal Club, to-day, and in it he will develop the Government's policy at length. All the other leaders are booked for speeches in quick succession.

It is the intention of the Government to pass the essential features of the bill, namely, the income tax, the land duty and sinking fund provisions, and the pauper disqualification for old age pensions, and to dissolve Parliament on Nov. 28 should the Lords in the meantime reject the veto bill.

Presenting his program in the House of Commons yesterday, Premier Asquith said that he had hoped, up to the last moment, that the veto conference would reach a settlement. There never had been a more honest or more sustained attempt of men of strong and confirmed convictions to find a basis of agreement upon which to build a structure promising stability and endurance.

"The House," he said the Premier, "will be prepared for my announcement that the Government has advised His Majesty when the work is accomplished to bring both this session and this Parliament to an end. It is useless to continue the farce longer. To reform the House of Lords and at the same time permit it to retain its right of veto of necessary legislation, is simply to make a farce of Government." The suggestions or compromise that have been made have not been for the interests of all of the people. The Government has a distinct program planned and that program is to be carried out.

"The Cabinet has discussed all of the suggestions of compromise and has decided that none of them is feasible. It has therefore recommended to King George that Parliament be dissolved on Nov. 28. It would be the idlest affectation to pretend any doubt as to what the real decision will be," he said, referring to the results of the general election.

Pressed for a statement on the subject of guarantees from the crown, Premier Asquith said that his declaration of last April still represented the deliberate intentions of the Government.

"I decline now," he declared, "and shall continue to decline to make a statement regarding the advice which I may have given or hereafter may give. The King stands aloof from all our political and electoral controversies, and it is the duty of his subjects, as well as of his Ministers, to maintain secure his absolute detachment from the arena of party struggles."

The Liberals of the Lower House generally interpret Mr. Asquith's statement yesterday as indicating that he has obtained a conditional guarantee from the King.

The debate dragged on throughout the afternoon to an almost empty house. Mr. Redmond took no part in the discussion, but it is understood that the Nationalists fully approve the Government's proposals. Mr. Balfour declared the Premier's course "unprecedented and unconstitutional," and Mr. Barnes, a labor party leader, said his party would not vote if a vote were taken.

Only Ask Autonomy Now.

Armand Lavergne Presents Nationalists Attitude On The Navy—Frenchman Addresses The Students of Toronto University

Toronto, Nov. 19—Armand Lavergne, the mild young hero of French Canada, who is assisted in making Premiers tremble and Governments totter, and constitutions shake to their parchment foundations, addressed the "Varsity "Lit" last night in Convocation Hall, which was two-thirds filled by the occasion.

President Wilkie's introduction was punctuated with applause for the loyal students uttered and the praise of free speech, British rights and equal opportunities which he voiced.

Mr. Lavergne in the opening of his address deprecated the ordinary conception of a Nationalist as a simple, primitive creature, with bomb-spun cap on his head, who speaks a language which in France would be called patois, with a sprinkling of English words; and that the only ruler he knows is his parish priest, who will give him a seat in heaven if he pays the dues, and consign his heretic neighbor to a warmer place.

"No purer or better immigrant came to any country. They were true explorers, Champlain, Marquette, La Salle and other travelers among the races, and the gentilhomme of the old regime was a good fighter who had learned to look on his conqueror as an equal.

"We think the best way to save the Empire, to uphold the Empire, is to work for our own country. We think the only way to maintain the integrity of the Empire is to maintain the autonomy of its component parts.

"We think that this policy of Imperial relations, of taking part in every war, be it just or unjust, that Britain sees fit to undertake means a considerable change, and the people should be given an opportunity to express their views about it.

"We French-Canadians have no other country but the land of our love and the land of our hope." said Mr. Lavergne, speaking of the French contingent.

but he thought that Britain acted as much for her own interests. She was saved by the Anglo-Japanese alliance to the salvation of British Columbia players, Champlain, Marquette, La Salle and other travelers among the races, and the gentilhomme of the old regime was a good fighter who had learned to look on his conqueror as an equal.

"We think the best way to save the Empire, to uphold the Empire, is to work for our own country. We think the only way to maintain the integrity of the Empire is to maintain the autonomy of its component parts.

NOVEMBER ROD AND GUN.

While big game hunting supplies the dominant note in the November number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., there is in the same issue, plenty of material for sportsmen who are not able, for various reasons, to go after moose, deer or bear. In the opening article, Mr. Bonnycastle Dale tells how Indian boys make clever hunters, trappers and fishermen with what skill they decimate the inhabitants of the forest. The completion of the issue is covering the whole wide field of Canadian sport gives it distinction and goes far to account for the standing the Magazine has won and continues to deserve.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE.

The proprietors of Zam-Buk have reason to believe that certain unscrupulous dealers are attempting to hand out to some customers who ask for Zam-Buk some preparations other than Zam-Buk, on which they profit is greater. At least one case has been brought to light where one of these harmful substitutes—with nothing in the least resembling Zam-Buk in its composition—when used by the purchaser, set up acute irritation, and blood poison was only averted by applying the genuine Zam-Buk.

This dangerous practice of substitution will be rendered impossible if purchasers will be sure to see the name Zam-Buk (protected by law) on each box before buying, and will refuse to be led astray by plausible "just as good and cheaper" or "practically the same thing," etc., etc.

AN UNFORTUNATE PEER

The Uncle of the Duke of Sutherland Lost His Fortune in Speculation

The Duke of Sutherland has just offered to make his uncle, Lord Ronald Sutherland Gower, a provisional allowance of £25,000 per annum, and Lord Ronald, who has lost his entire fortune, has been compelled to accept his nephew's generous offer.

Lord Ronald's ruin is said to have been brought about by Mr. Frank Shackleton, brother of Sir Ernest Shackleton, the popular and gallant Antarctic explorer. Mr. Frank Shackleton was at one time connected with the Dublin Herald. He resigned his position at the same time as Sir Arthur Vicars, the Ulster King-at-Arms, owing to the Dublin Jewel scandal. Between them they were responsible for the custody of the Jewels, the disappearance of which is still surrounded by a good deal of mystery. With Mr. Shackleton Lord Ronald embarked on a number of wildcat schemes, and Lord Ronald, who is not a business man, appears to have signed everything he was asked to put his name to. Mr. Shackleton became bankrupt last August for the sum of £25,000, one claim alone against him amounting to £10,000. His ruin involved Lord Ronald, who has now also been declared a bankrupt, a beautiful place in Kent, upon which he had spent much money.

Lord Ronald has long been a distinguished figure in Upper Bohemia. He is an author, artist and sculptor, and was at one time a member of Parliament. Many years ago he adopted a brilliant young journalist, Mr. Frank Gower, as his son, and had intended to leave him the place in Kent. Many years ago Lord Ronald started a crusade against top hats. He has never worn one in his life and it is certainly not the accepr for business and official purposes and great social functions, the silk hat is far less worn than it was.

BRITAIN'S AERIAL FLEET

Two Biplanes are Ordered in France for Military Use.

The British War Office is now taking steps to possess an aerial fleet. Orders have been given to M. Henri Farman and to M. Pauhan for two biplanes of military type.

These are expected to be delivered in England in about two months' time. They will be the first aeroplanes belonging to the British Army, for a further allowance of £6,000 a power has already been delivered.

That Herr Grempler has, it is said, proved a great success, and negotiations are taking place now which may result in the purchase by the War Britain of several more aeroplanes of the same type.

The Farman biplane which has just been ordered will be a splendid machine, M. Farman himself states that he has great hopes that it will prove almost perfect for its purpose.

It will carry two passengers, and will hold enough petrol for three flights.

It is so constructed that in front of one of the occupants will be placed that which will carry a large quantity of explosives. The cost is a little over £5,000.

STERILIZING OYSTERS

A Simple and Efficacious Method of Rendering the Bivalves Harmless

The danger of eating oysters taken from polluted sources has been frequently proved by outbreaks of typhoid fever and other intestinal complaints among those who have been unfortunate enough to consume them. It now appears, that there is a very easy and efficacious method of obviating this danger. At a meeting of the Academie des Sciences in Paris recently M. Henneguy submitted an account of experiments recently carried out by M. Fabre Domergue with the object of discovering some means of preventing the accidents which arise from eating contaminated oysters. As the result of these experiments M. Henneguy is able to state that oysters taken from beds risking with sewage and typhoid germs can be rendered entirely harmless by the simple process of keeping them for fifteen days in tanks of filtered water. This treatment, while freeing the bivalves from all germs of disease has no deteriorating effect upon the oysters themselves. They remain as fat and well flavored as when taken from the parent bed.

A FRIEND OF THE JEWS

The New Russian Minister of Education Befriends the Persecuted Hebrews

A fierce wave of anti-Semitism is again sweeping over the length and breadth of the Czar's dominions. The reactionaries who, for a short time, appeared to have ceased their persecutious agitation—either content to rest for a time on their laurels or preparing for fresh exertions—are again up and doing. Every town and every village in the country Jew-baiting is taking place, expulsions are continually on the increase, and the scanty measure of religious toleration that has been granted to the people by the Czar's famous "October Manifesto" is being gradually withdrawn.

The members of the Duma, which at first were extremely well disposed towards the Jews, have, by open threats of violence, been compelled to oppose any measure which tends to ameliorate the lot of the unhappy people. Instead of being the representatives of the nation the Duma has become the tool of the Russian Government, and if the present system of government is of any duration it is only the Czar's Ministers are better able to adhere to the spirit of autocratic rule than hitherto, under the so-call ed self-government.

The Jews, however, are not without hope, for they see in the appointment of M. Kasso to the Ministry of Public Instruction, the dawn of a new era of educational justice and equality. M. Schwartz, who has been compelled to leave office, was known as an extremely narrow-minded bigot, who persecuted the Jewish students into the colleges, seminaries, and universities, and did his very best to persecute the Jewish people in every manner possible. Indiscriminate alone he kept out of the schools over two thousand Jewish children who applied for admission this year.

M. Kasso, on the other hand, who comes of Mo'davo-Greek stock, and who has been private secretary to Odessa, is believed to be a liberal-minded man with no inclination to lean for support on the Real Russians and others of the reactionary party. He has hitherto not loomed largely in the public eye, but he is one of those men who prefer to work in a quiet and unobtrusive manner. In this connection it will be interesting to see whether M. Kasso will be able to hold the portfolio of Minister of Public Instruction very long.

A STUBBORN SOLDIER

This German "Adventist" Lived Up to His Religious Matter What Happened

The existence of the curious sect of the "Adventists" in Germany was made known the other day by the case of the soldier, Naumann. The sect looks for the reappearance of Christ on the earth in the immediate future and follows the precepts of the Bible as literally as possible. Saturday is regarded by them as the seventh day, which must be kept holy, and the soldier Naumann has frequently incurred disciplinary punishment for refusing to do a stroke of work between Friday night and Sunday morning.

At first he got a few days in the cells, then a few months' arrest, until at length, as the punishments increased, he has spent over five years in confinement for the sake of his creed. "The trial of his most recent refusal has ended by the military Court of Appeal calling for expert evidence as to his sanity. He faithfully performs all his military duties up to Friday night, but once midnight of that day has struck he obstinately refuses to lay a hand to anything for the next four-and-twenty hours.

In the course of the trial the judge asked him what would be the position in case of war. Naumann said, "No, for the state does not recognise as law Naumann's mother belongs to the same sect as myself, and as the authorities would not allow her to see him unless she promised to try to make him break his conscientious scruples she has not seen him for the last two years.

POLICEMEN WITH NERVES

The Rest Cure is Prescribed for Overworked German Officers

The Berlin police force is suffering from overwork. Thirteen police surgeons are provided for giving 1,000 members of the force a month's rest in each year. German medical experts, however, hold no hope that "the nervous policeman" will disappear from the streets of the capital.

These remarkable statements are contained in an appeal recently published by the police surgeons in connection with the establishment of a convalescent home.

The original appeal was issued several weeks ago and has already produced results. It would have shown the over-wrought nerves of the police force that they could obtain rest in a fewer than five offences of free building, and that the necessary funds have already been made. One philanthropist alone thinks that Berlin policemen can only have a thoroughly successful "cure" if they are removed far from the scene of their strenuous activities. He accordingly offers a plot of ground in the Silesian highlands, several hundred miles away.

The appeal states that the police physicians diagnose the malady with which the force is afflicted as "neurasthenia," brought on by the overstrain of the nerves on street duty. Symptoms of the same malady which also result from accidents suffered in the service, frequently manifest themselves in chronic rheumatism, especially in the winter. The percentage of neurasthenics among the police is declared to be exceedingly high, and the establishment of a spacious convalescent home is described as the only practical remedy. A recent example of the German policeman's "nerves" was the unprovoked attack by four foreign journalists in the cabit quarter.

PARADE GROUND DISPUTE

The German Government Sold Land at a Huge Profit, But May Nullify the Deal

The last has not been heard of the Tempelhof Field Purchase Incident. This celebrated German "grieve grievance" was sold recently by the War Department, nominally to the small Municipality of Tempelhof, but in reality to a group of speculators with the Deutsche Bank, and a big building society behind them. The War Department, by the way, made a marvellously profitable piece of transaction, for it bought the area many years ago for £2,000, and now, owing to the enormous increase in land values since, has been able to sell it for $9,000,000.

The sale to Tempelhof raised a storm of popular indignation, as it was thought that the area should have been sold, not to a group of speculators, but in the city of Berlin, which has so expanded as practically to include it. The theory on the side of the recent sale is now beginning to present itself, and in particular the question as to the educational justice and equality of the War Department, the Deutsche Bank, and the building society cash claim a dominant voice in carrying out the sale. The Berlin Municipality took the area of Tempelhof on condition that it should not be handed over to building speculators, but that it should be sold to a group of experienced builders who purchase money on condition that it would lead to the buildings for the benefit of the poor, and to devote no interest on its advance; and the building Municipality with a view to the narcoonising with the general aspect of the capital. Legal processes and other difficulties thus threaten all parties concerned, and in view of them and the popular dissatisfaction it is quite probable that the Reichstag, which has to ratify the sale by the Budget Committee, will refuse its consent and nullify the whole transaction.

COMIC OPERA REBELLION

The Autocrat of Monte Carlo Does Not Care to Hand Over His Revenues

Revolutions are becoming contagious. The principality of Monaco, which comprises eight square miles and has a population of nearly 20,000, is at a turning-point in its history. This little country, ruled over by Prince Albert, and closed in by French territory and the shining water of the Mediterranean, is undergoing the throes of an agitation for representative government.

Last winter the people of Monaco, to the number of about 1,500, resolved to emancipate themselves from the strict tutelage in which they have been held by the Prince, who governs and disposes, uncontrolled of the public funds, makes laws and regulations, and exercises his autocracy through the intermediary of foreign functionaries.

The agitators presented their grievances and demands to the Prince, who appears to acknowledge liberty and popular control as about the justice of their claims. They believed, in fact, that a new era of life to be inaugurated. They enthusiastically proceeded to elect representatives to the Communal Commission, which has hitherto looked upon as their "little Parliament."

The people of Monaco have, however, been disappointed. Their new Constitution has done no more than bring the Constitution of Portugal did for the subjects of King Manuel. Every Parliament decision not do much without financial reform, and the Prince of Monaco disposes of all the revenue. When a deputation waited upon the Prince to point out the necessity of improving and beautifying the State without taxation he is said to have told them to go and spend less and go to Lucerne.

A crowd assembled before the Government Palace, and shouted with violent gesticulations, "Reslgn, resign." Armed police, however, did not interfere. Even more violent manifestations are taking place elsewhere.

The Prince, it is reported, has telegraphed from Biarritz to the Governor of Monaco reproving the attitude of the people and instructing him to maintain order and legality by all means in his power. The means that are likely to be necessaries may be called upon to crush the people of Monaco. The people are grateful to the foreigners who have made the country's fortune, and their word of encouragement does not conceal any hostility towards the Princes, all of whose interests they respect. They wish to be left to participate in the direction of the affairs of their country and contribute to its improvement.

She—"Woman's work is never done."

He—"Why don't you do it then, and stop talking about it?"

Teacher—"Can you tell me what a secret is?"

Little Girl—"Yes, I can. It is something somebody tells everybody else is a whisper."

CROMWELL AND ALEXANDER

Heavy Cavalry Was the Favorite Style of Both Generals.

Alexander the Great won all his battles by the charge of heavy cavalry, and the phalanx formed merely the defensive wing of the line. He was even breaking up the phalanx into lighter bodies at the time of his death, and it came that the nobles and most essential of his companions were cavalry officers, and from this time onward no general thought of fighting, as Epaminondas did, on foot. Eastern warfare also brought in the use of elephants, but this was against the practice of Alexander, who did not use them in battle, but only in sieges.

A writer of our own day has called attention to the curious analogies between the tactics of Alexander and those of Cromwell. Each lived in an age when heavy cavalry were found to be superior to infantry, if it kept its condition and used with skill, hence each of them fought most of his battles by charging with his cavalry on his right wing, overthrowing the enemy's horse, and then avoiding the temptation to pursue, and attacking the enemy's infantry in flank, and so destroying it. Both Alexander and Cromwell felt strong enough to disregard a decisive blow on their left wing, provided their horse, which was not under proper control, could be kept out of sight of their battle in pursuit. So similar is the course of these battles, that one might almost think that Cromwell knew something of Alexander. It is true that Cromwell's success lay largely in his genius the best way of using the arm of his day, but Alexander's Companions were Cromwell's Ironsides.

In one point, however, he still held to old and chivalrous ways, and so fell short of every day's practice as commander. He always charged at the head of his cavalry, and himself took part in the thickest of the fight. Cromwell saw the folly of this in the art of ending the campaign with his own life, and he had that he had full confidence in his fortune, and that the king's valor gave tremendous force to the charge of his personal companions. But nothing can convince an Alexander or Hannibal's view of his duties as a commander. Alexander's example has elsewhere, gave the law, and so a long succession of kings successfully found their death on the battlefield. The spring of Alexander was apparently the main cause of this serious result.

Putting His Foot in It

Charles Dickens once wrote to a friend:

I have distinguished myself in two respects lately. I took a young gentleman down to dinner, and talked to her about the Bishop of Durham's opposition in the matter of Sunday. I found she was a Quakeress, and I expatiated to the member for Macclesfield, thinking him to be an Irish member, on the contemptible ignorance of the Macclesfield constituency and the Marylebone representative.

Two such mishaps in one evening were enough to reduce the most brilliant talker to silence, but I managed to three inside passengers of a London bound coach, who regaled the tedium of the journey from Southampton with discussing the demerits of William Cobbett until one of the party went so far as to desert that the object of his remarks was not a domestic tyrant, given to beating his wife.

Much to his dismay the solitary woman passenger proved a bitterite and a silent listener, remarked:

"Pardon me, sir, a kinder husband and father never breathed," and it ought to know, for I am William Cobbett's wife."

Incurable.

"I do think," said Mrs. McGoodie, "my husband is the most persistently ungrammatical man I ever met. If I controvert any proposition, no matter how plain, he will immediately say we were waiting off a platform of one of the city stations for a train, and as a train he saw the sign 'Out of order' on one of those chewing gum slot machines.

"I'm willing to bet a cent it isn't out of order," he said.

"And he dropped a coin in the slot. He got no gum, but he got a cent, so he didn't get his money back.

"I said, 'Why, you're an outfailed now.'

"He doesn't prove anything, always," he grunted. "The machine isn't out of order; it's built that way on purpose."

"But that's Lysander all over."

Smothered in Roses.

The Syrian Empress Theodora stuffed with rose leaves; the tyrant Dionysius had his couch filled with them; Verus would have his dinner table and the head and around his neck, and over his body, while the floor of the room was leaver intertwined; Antiochus luxuriated upon a bed of roses, and even winter days and nights, and when Cleopatra received Julius Caesar she reposed covering the floor to the depth of, it is said, of an ell.

Nero and that Heliogabalus supplied so many at an of his banquets as several of his guests were suffocated in the endeavor to extricate themselves from the rose-leaves—victims of a surfeit of sweet odors.

Her Birthmark.

"I hear," said the count, "that you are going to marry a girl who has a birthmark."

"Yes," replied the marquis, "the report is true."

"I hope she is not badly disfigured."

"Not a bit, my dear fellow. For your information I may say that a drawing of her birthmark. It is like this—[illegible]

RECENT ART ROMANCES

RUBBISH HEAP PICTURES THAT HAVE BROUGHT BIG PRICES.

Neubourg Goerz Gets a Raphael For Twenty-Four Shillings and Sells It For Four Thousand Pounds—A Rubens and a Gainsborough Turned Up in a Pawnshop and a Landseer in a Kitchen.

The Neubourg goerz who has been fortunate enough to pick up at a sale auction sale for twenty-four shillings the "Raphael," the subject of which is at least 4,000 times the price he paid for it, has had many recent predecessors in similar lucky experiences. Sir Joshua Reynolds's "Duchess of Devonshire" purchased a deplorably dirty canvas for a poor widow for a few shillings—a sum which brought tears of gratitude and joy to the woman's eyes. After carefully cleaning the picture the dealer was delighted, although not altogether surprised, to discover that he was the possessor of an undoubted Reynolds. Rembrandt, which he found an eager purchaser for £3,500.

A few years ago a carpenter prescribed himself at the shop of a picture dealer in the Rue St. Lazare, Paris, offering for sale a large and dirty canvas for the modest sum of 20 francs. "I don't know that the picture is worth anything," he said, "but I thought that I might as well get the money." The dealer, who was in want of a canvas of that size, paid the 20 francs, and, removing the canvas, cut it in two to serve in a corner of his shop.

Some weeks later an artist-customer chanced to notice the "discarded" canvas, and, after examining it, exclaimed: "Why, this is a Velasquez! I have been here. It is a variant of one of Rubens's works in the gallery 'Adam and Eve'." The news of the discovery of the picture, and whither gone, the dealer had sold his 20-franc picture for £600 (15,000 francs).

Another Raphael, "La Belle Jardiniere," was quite recently discovered by a second-hand shop in Ipswich, and purchased for 44 francs, probably less than the canvas-and-paint part of real value; a Rubens, valued at £7,000, was picked up for a five-pound note at an auction-sale at Carnarvonshire; a Gainsborough was the price paid at a shop in Leeds for a few shillings for a sea piece, painted in oils on an old sail. This picture, afterwards, proved to be a genuine Turner, worth at least £700.

More remarkable still was the good fortune of a picture-lover who strolled one day into a shop on the Paris boulevards, and noticing among a lot of lumber a study in red chalk purchased it for half a franc. On examining his purchase more carefully he found to his delight that he was the possessor of Raphael's original design for his famous picture, "La Disputa del Sacramento," now in the Vatican, the value of which is little short of £1,000.

A romantic story was told a short time ago of a widow who took an old chalk drawing to a dealer, and, offering him to buy it as she wanted a few shillings to pay the expenses of visiting some friends. The dealer examined the drawing, declared that it was covered with generations of dirt, and reluctantly offered 20 shillings for it. When the widow returned she proved to be a very fine example of Rembrandt's "The Holy Family."

A year or two ago an East Ham greengrocer purchased a number of old pictures to a newly e'cent, lending them to decorate his shop, without the the value of the frames, one of which contained quite £3 worth of gold. When the greengrocer expressed his redeemed canvases were consigned to the lumber-room, they were found by a gentlen, until one day an antique dealer, who was passing the shop, saw the advice they were submitted to experts, who pronounced them to be works old masters (they included a Rubens and a Gainsborough), worth several thousand pounds.

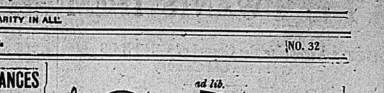
Among other recent romances of art discovery are those of Mr. Alfred Gordon Davis, of Downend, Bristol, England, a London dealer, who found a Turner in the kitchen of a relative; the purchase for five shillings by a curiosity shop in Wigan, of an unfinished picture of Godfrey Kneller; and the discovery by two Oxford undergrads in a Wardour-st. second-hand shop of a Rembrandt was found lying on a heap of battered odds and ends in the front of the house shop; and one of Albert Durer's masterpieces was recently sold for a few sovereigns.

Dumas' Schame.

Alexandre Dumas, pere, was once visiting the Duke of Orleans, who lived in a villa near Paris. They sat in a room which had a window behind the house under the one small tree it contained. "Ah," said the duke to Alexandre Dumas, who was very stout, and very fond of eating—

"I am suffering with the intense heat."

"What shall I do, father?"



"Suppose you open your chamber window and sit in the shade of the tree in the garden," replied old Alexandre, with gravity.

The Ward Alp.

In Switzerland the word alp does not mean a mountain, but is used to indicate the little valleys in the higher altitudes, where peasants take their cattle to pasture in the summer. In small huts and stables the attendants and animals live for several months in the year. The cows thrive on the mountain grass, and their milk is converted on the spot into cheese and butter.

Proving by Actual Experiment

This experiment will always interest the children, and will provoke a good deal of thinking. Take a tumbler full of water, and float the tinfoil piece of paper which is inserted into the inverted tumbler. Now, the question is, how many drops of the mouth of the glass by quickly put down into the water will cause the paper to sink? Of course, the air in the tumbler will be displaced by the water within the glass. Hence, the weight or pressure of the air will be increased on the surface of the water up into the glass to occupy the space which otherwise it was driven by the floating paper.

A practical demonstration of this kind is always more convincing than any mere statement. This is particularly true of medical remedies.

The effect of the anti-catarrh treatment for disinfects is noticeable within a few hours, so that everyone must believe in its virtue. In a similar way, the treatment known as ORANGE LILY gives a practical proof of its progress it is making in curing women's disorders, and that, too, within a few days after commencing its use.

Such maladies as pain in the back, inflammation, ulceration, chronic sisters and congested condition of the womanly organs. The circulation in these parts is sluggish or stagnant, and the blood is full of impurities instead of containing the elements which should be carried off if the blood was circulating freely, remains in these parts and poisons the whole system. The use of the treatment known as ORANGE LILY will soon show a change for the better. The impurities are absorbed into the circulation, and its antiseptic properties at once act on the waste matter, destroying it so that the system is relieved of the poisonous effects, thus causing the inflammation, ulcers, nervous troubles, etc., begins to be discharged, and in quicker to be discharged until all the waste matter has been removed from the circulation. At the same time the blood vessels and nerves are toned and strengthened. The nervous system is built up and the general health of the whole body follows.

Toronto, Ont., June 2, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Curran,—I wish to tell you that Orange Lily is doing me a great deal of good. These ulcers came away one or two every week, and I have less pain and feel considerably better. I feel that I will be cured in a few weeks.

MRS. D. S. T.

The explanation of the wonderful cures performed by ORANGE LILY is very simple. It is a scientific remedy, based on the discoveries of Pasteur and Lister. The conditions existing in the female troubles are alike in character, differing in degree and development only, so that a positive remedy, as ORANGE LILY is, acts with all the certainty of a mathematical problem. It will overcome every suffering woman that ORANGE LILY will cure her. I make the following

Free Trial Offer

ENGLAND WANTS THEM

Preaching the Gospel of GIN PILLS in the Old Country

Canada's wheat fields are not the only things that are making our country talked about. A well known man of North Toronto has set the people of England talking about GIN PILLS, the great Canadian Kidney Cure. The old country has nothing like GIN PILLS and the wonderful work done by Mr. and Mrs. Simpson is bearing fruit in the great demand which sufferers from Kidney Trouble are making for our own GIN PILLS.

DAVISVILLE, NORTH TORONTO.

"I have great pleasure in writing and recommending GIN PILLS. We have used them for the last, two years and they have never failed us. We took GIN PILLS to the old country some time ago and gave some to relatives and friends and they have asked us to find out where they can buy GIN PILLS over there. Everyone was pleased with the pills and said that only two pills were needed to give relief. Will you let me know if you have any agents in England? I had a few pills left, on my way back here and we gave them to a woman on board ship and she was much pleased with them. If I can be of any help to those suffering from Kidney Trouble in spreading this wonderful remedy—GIN PILLS—I am only too willing to offer my services.

JOWETT'S MAXIMS.

Professor's Eleven Rules Contain a Sound Code of Action.

Principal Jowett's aphorism maxims have been called the "Balliol Scheme of Life," and many an Oxford man has used them with advantage. Jowett, in this group of "Maxims for Statesmen and Others," summed up his practical philosophy of life—and by was one of the wisest philosophers of his day. Here are his eleven sayings of power:

1. Never quarrel.
2. Never explain.
3. Never hate.
4. Never fret.
5. Never disappoint.
6. Never fail.
7. Never fear.
8. Never drudge.
9. Never spare.
10. Never tell.
11. Never distract.

It is obvious that any statesman carrying out these rules must infallibly be great. It is just as obvious that any "others" who follow them will be living toward success. Lord Curzon, whose rise has been remarkable, and Mr. Asquith, are both credited in England as living by these eleven maxims, and the "Balliol spirit" is known in many quarters through lesser examples.

Two of them, perhaps—numbers 3 and 8—are suitable for statesmen only. In ordinary life many must and ought to explain seeming mistakes, and where public affairs are not involved ought to spare those who are in the wrong. The rule, "Never drudge," is one of the best. The young man who puts full spirit into every task and refuses to undertake anything as drudgery, is bound to rise. The man who neither quarrels nor detracts, who frets at nothing, who refuses to hate anybody—he is an embodied power, for he has conquered the worst possible obstacles in his own career. A sound philosophy of life lies in these twenty-two words—and any young person, anywhere, can use them to advantage.

A Memorial to Florence Nightingale.

The spontaneous desire on the part of the British nation in general, and the medical and nursing profession in particular, to commemorate the services rendered by the "Lady with the Lamp" in a suitable manner will probably find an outlet in more than one direction. A national memorial needs careful thought and full consideration before its details can be accepted.

"We have no doubt," says The Hospital, "that some such memorial will be raised in the near future, for Miss Nightingale's work, so self-effacingly carried out, without parade, advertisement, or agitation, runs a risk of being forgotten by the rising generation to whom she is but a name. to those that know her history and the story of her life, no such memorial is necessary, for it is found in the success of her endeavors to raise the standard of hospital and private nursing in this country. Nothing can detract from the obligations under which she has laid the nation at large, and no monument of brass or marble can add to the glory that surrounds her memory or increase the reverence with which her name is regarded by those who know her and her work. But it is notwithstanding, desirable that a general tribute of respect should be paid to the great lady. It is too much to hope that we may yet see the establishment of a Nightingale Association which will have as its object the furthering of the high ideal the 'Lady with the Lamp' had before her during her eventful life? The time is opportune for the founding of such an organization, and it is more than likely that it will have a wide scope of usefulness when established."

A Persevering Authoress.

Mrs. Hodgson Burnett, the well-known authoress, used to write stories at a very early age, but her efforts were not well received by the various members of her family. At last she determined to send one of her tales to an editor, unknown to any of her relations. Perhaps, however, was dear in those days, and the anxious girl did not know how to get her precious manuscript forwarded. At last she confided in a little negress of her acquaintance, who soon thought of a way out of the difficulty. She advised the budding authoress to gather wild fruit, which she promised to go and sell in the streets of Knoxville, Tennessee; and with the money raised in this fashion the story was eventually despatched to Philadelphia, where it was duly published.

Positively Awful

Concerning the discovery by Sir William Ramsay, the presidential of the British Association, of new gases in the atmosphere which led to his interesting revelations regarding the existence of argon, Lady Ramsay tells an amusing anecdote. She was explaining to a friend all about it, when the friend exclaimed: "I am horrified to learn that I have been breathing this thing all my life without knowing it. I consider it positively awful." It is probable that many people think Sir William has not confined all his abilities to science. An accomplished linguist, he has delighted French and Germ an societies by speaking to them in their own languages. He is also an accomplished musician and a writer of songs.

Telling a Great Bell.

The great bell of St. Paul's, London, is never tolled excepting at the death and funeral of a member of the royal family, the archbishop of Canterbury, the dean of Canterbury, the bishop of London, the dean of St. Paul's and the lord mayor, should he die during his mayoralty. Only the clapper and not the bell is moved when it is tolled.

Her Savings.

"I'm so glad you told me to keep accounts, Jerry," she said. "I have just been going over them, and I find that I have saved $200 in the last three months."

"Good!" he exclaimed. "Where's the money?"

"Oh, I haven't got the money," she answered, "but the accounts show that I have saved it just the same."

Drowning at Lake of Bays.

Lake of Bays, July 15.—Yesterday a young lad, Peterson by name, was drowned from a canoe near Grove avenue, on this lake. He came up from Buffalo Wednesday night.

The ...Veiled Lady...

Beaufort and Dumsford were alone in the parlors, and the young Lord blushed as he met Harold Burnsford's lovely sister. "I will hope to show you and your father my pretty boat, on my return. The fact is, I have some —er— arrangements to make!" The Britco dropped his eyes, as he met Harold's frank gaze—The "Veiled Lady" must disappear.

Harold Durnsford suspected this acknowledged. As Beaufort bowed himself out, he whispered to Durnsford: "I'll have Weston take a carriage and take her privately out to the Cliff! I can't bring her to the hotel, of course!—Scandal, and all that, you know!" Weston, (running mate, volunteer secretary, and fellus Achates,) was speedily on his way to release the Veiled Lady from her twenty-five days of luxurious prison-ment, without parade, never tirement, or agitation, was a risk of being forgotten by the rising generation to whom she is but a name. to those that know her history and the story of her life, no such memorial is necessary, for it is found in the success of her endeavors to raise the standard of hospital and, private nursing in this country. Nothing can detract from the obligations under which she has laid the nation at large, and no monument of brass or marble can add to the glory that surrounds her memory or increases the reverence with which her name is regarded by those who know her and her work. But it is notwithstanding, desirable that a general tribute of respect should be paid to the great lady. The time is opportune for the founding of such an organization, and it is more than likely that it will have a wide scope of usefulness when established."

"Bad form, by Jove!" he thought. "to have any possibility of Miss Durnsford being at this thing, eh? Thank heavens! I'll be all regular on my return!" For the boy already feared the superior wit, and the wiles of the beautiful anonyma.

Beaufort had left the gleaming ore the Pacific, placidly stretching in one lovely sheet to Japan, as the four young men sat at table loaded with the spoils of the west. The night breeze brought the salt roar of the breakers, and the sparkle of the hundred feet lower, and only a few cable lengths away, on the three bulwarked decks, the deep eyed portal windows, the dancing lights of ships, coming and going, twinkled on the rolling blue waves. Far away to the north, Bonita light flashed from its rocky headland; an dthe narrow strait of the Golden Gate was mantled with its gray robes of fog,—from whencethe boom of a mournful bell sounded at rising and falling miss.

Wine, wit and wassail, gave a forced smile to the merry quests of Lord Alfred. The old friends crowded to the group at this accidental rapprochement. Around them, the sound of champagne corks, popping corks, and bits of bachmanalian song, told of the surrounding revels at the Cliff House. As the extensive menu dragged along, Lord Alfred Beaufort, poises at his landfall, rails ordered "Luther, bottle!" From time to time, Weston dropped in, as he was the social representative of his friend and master, at the table where "Mers. Isabel" dined perforce in his unsolicited company. The factotum had freely enjoyed the wine, and his eyes gleamed with an unwonted fire.

In the midst of the royal repast, all four men started to their feet; for a crash was heard in the adjoining room, and a woman's voice, wild with passion, screamed, "Coward! Release me!"

Jack Gordon, with an ashen pallor on his fair face, sprang to the door, followed by Beverly Seaton, whose eyes flamed yellow in their ferocious gleam! From the half-opened door, Weston reeled out in mauillin fury! A voice rang out which the secret enemies both knew too well! "And then drunken Weston's battle—There's a time to be secret beauty. Beaufort look out for her yourself!" Jack Gordon seemed dazed. His hand was clasped by that of Lord Alfred, and Beverly Seaton tried to pass him. "To the Veiled Lady," he cried.

"No thoroughfare" said Lord Beaufort, calmly.

"Let me alone! I will go in!" the Virginian hissed.

"Not till I know why!" said the resolute young Englishman, as he grasped the door. "There's a lady in there who is entitled to my protection! Why do you wish to enter?"

Maxwell ended matters! The two excited men who had dashed into the room. As Durnsford sprang up to some Gordon, he was rooted to the spot.—for Jack Gordon, clasping his hand convulsively over his heart, sprang into a chair, cried: "My God! My wife!" and Beverly Seaton screamed: "Speak! speak! Is she dead?"

Maxwell smiled grimly.

STONES AT KITCHENER

HE DECLARES THAT MARRIAGE SPOILS GOOD SOLDIERS.

K. of K. Was Born In Ireland, But He Is Not Hibernian on Either Side of the Family—Received His Early Training at Home and Then Went on the Continent, Where He Served in France-Prussian War.

He had been written of "K. of K." Of his history, his awe-inspiring blue eyes—eyes that can flash fire on occasion, and his well-known dislike for women.

Not long ago he raised a storm of feminine protest by declaring that "a soldier ought not to be married." By this statement he failed to back up by the name of a single great soldier who was a bachelor. On the other hand, as Miss Dora D'Epsegne Champney pointed out, numbers of famous generals, from Alexander the Great upwards, to our day, are well known to have been married men.

Did not Napoleon, who adored the Creole wife, do his best work during his Italian campaign, when he was deeply in love with Josephine and was writing her passionate love-letters.

What most great soldiers who fought so ably in the Indian Mutiny and the Crimea were married.

Then, again, Kitchener himself is a soldier's son, and if his father before him had held the views expressed by K. of K. England would have been one state the less.

"If the officers of the army of today are not to marry, where are we to look for the officers of the army of to-morrow?" asked an admirer of this, to whom Lord Kitchener had held forth on the pet subject, thereby, it is said, reducing his great soldier to silence.

People have more than once spoken of Lord Kitchener as an Irishman.

But this isn't so.

He was born in the Emerald Isle, it is true, his mother being the daughter of Rev. Dr. Chevallier, of Aspall, in that father, wasn't a "Paddy" either.

When his father, Col. Kitchener, left the army he decided to settle in Ireland—and it was in Gunsborough Villa, County Kerry, that this future man of fire, and sword, 56th, 10th, 9th, 19th, 8th, was christened "Horatio Herbert."

Like a great many other celebrated men Lord Kitchener never went to a "public" school.

First of all he was taught at home, and got very much the same sort of education that the average little boy does. Then he went to Switzerland, France, and Germany.

After that, at eighteen, he entered Woolwich.

At this time his father was living in Brittany, and the Franco-Prussian War was in full swing. This thrilled young Kitchener, and he joined the French army, and became a member of the famous 43rd Regiment.

Two years later, at the age of twenty-one, he received his commission in the Royal Engineers.

Then came many years of obscurity, and real hard work for the young soldier, who did his duty quietly and seemed in no way more remarkable than the other young officers with whom he came in contact.

But Lieut. Kitchener was ambitious; he had "grit" and meant to get there, somehow.

So—throughout these long dull years, spent chiefly in the east in service would as secretary—Kitchener was hard at work studying, all he was worth, the Turkish and Arabic languages, meaning that these should be stepping stones to success later.

Now he chafed at the quiet life and longed for active service such as Kitchener himself knows, for he is not a man to mince matters between him and his affairs.

Then came the Egyptian troubles in 1882, and the young soldier got his chance.

It happened like this.

Lieut. Kitchener, as he then was, was stationed at Cyprus, when, in Egypt on leave when the British fleet arrived at Alexandria. He at once saw his chance, the chance he had waited for, applied for a short period of leave, feeling pretty sure all the time that the War Office would not grant it to him.

So what he couldn't get by fair means he got by foul—and a little suffering.

With the help of a newspaper correspondent he, somehow or other, contrived that his refusal should not reach him until after his steamer had started for Egypt.

So there he was, the right man in the right place, at the right moment, for he had intimate knowledge of the Arabs, and, thanks to those years of study, he could speak their language with something like fluency.

Then he applied to Lord Wolseley for something to do, and got it.

His was the foundation stone of his fortunes.

From that time onwards promotion came rapidly.

After that South Africa helped him still further, and the result was he became a hard -nosed sometimes-to travel, but Lord Kitchener had travelled it alone. He has never been a man to form many friendships. Always a lonely man, he has done his duty and fulfilled his early ambitions.

Someone once said that "Kitchener's" strength lies in his power to create.

Give him material, however rough, and he will mould and organize and organize it into the definish shapes that he desires at the first moment.

Perhaps this power has been the secret of his success.

Amongst other things, Lord Kitchener is a fatalist.

"What is to will be," is his motto.

Once during the Soudan campaign someone begged him not to expose himself to any needless danger.

"I shall never be killed," he answered, with conviction. "When my time comes I shall die peacefully in my bed."

A TELLTALE SHADOW

It Warns a Man That He Is In Danger.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

Sorrento, in southern Italy, is a colony of villas and hotels, many of which are surrounded by orange groves. The place is built on a crescent shaped shelf at the foot of which is the vast margin of the Mediterranean. A part of this margin laps a beach, and on this beach are numerous hotels, and there also the women do the family washing.

One morning Senhor Wilcox, a young American traveler, was looking down over a low stone wall built for the protection of those on the cliff above, when he saw a young girl washing clothes in the sea. Being some 200 feet above her, he could not see what she was like, but "distance lends enchantment to the view," and the world, even from that distance, detect a certain grace in her movements. He turned down on to the beach for a nearer view.

He found a girl of fifteen, though at that age girls are much younger in an Italian girl is a woman. She possessed the dark hair and eyes of her race and a good figure. Her cheek, from exposure, were brown, but they were pretty. Wilcox watched her for a time, then walked up to her and smiled at her. He not only smiled, but spoke to her, for he knew something of the Italian language. He learned that her name was Marie and her father the keeper of a wineshop. Street chat he returned to the town shore.

But in the morning he looked down again over the wall, and, though he knew he would be playing with fire, he decided to settle in Sorrento, for he yielded to a temptation to go down again and have a few words with Marie. She looked up at him and with a smile indicating that she was very much pleased that he had come again. Then she fell to work at her task.

Wilcox remained at these visits. He found a wineshop down among these fishermen's quarters and would go to it for lunch and sit at a street chair. Sometimes he would take Marie in to have a glass with him. There was nothing unusual in this in Italy. The Italian wines have very little alcohol in them and they drink by the women and children the same as the men. Besides, a wineshop in Italy is a very different affair from a saloon in America.

The landlord of the hotel where Wilcox was stopping became aware of his descents to the fishermen's quarters or to the wineshop and spoke against going there. The young man merely red the matter to no one. He knew he was in no danger from the fellows in case of a risk. Besides, he was a fearless rider and at an age where a man of courage is more apt to court than to avoid danger. Nevertheless he did not tell Marie that he was a nobleman to which he was placing himself in so armed.

One night Wilcox went down to the beach and, calling for Marie at her father's cottage, invited her to go for a row. She got in the water in her bare feet, the father to sail it. Marie trapped her feet under her dress, after which she agreed to the plan. Indeed, she had manifested a desire to interfere in Wilcox's attentions to her in this. Whether those nearest her were expecting to get money out of the American or not, Wilcox they were apparently determined to lure him into a position where they could rob him. Older counsel to him, best as he was on enjoying society.

After a couple of hours' sail the party returned to the shore, and Wilcox asked the father and daughter to go into the wineshop for refreshments. The father declined for both himself and his daughter, saying it was late, and he must be up early in the morning to begin his day's fishing. Wilcox bade them good night, and as it was early for him, went into the wineshop, alone for his tipple and his cigarette.

There was no one in the place except the landlord and his wife, who served for the Americn and left him. There also was a fireplace in the room, and, the nights being cool at this time, Wilcox called her and asked her to bring in a few fagots and build a fire. She was surprised at the request, for fire is enormously expensive in Italy; but, obeying him to be as American, which to Europeans means to have plenty of money, she acceded to his request. Wilcox sat before the open fire with the wine beside him and drank and smoked and, without intending it, fell asleep.

He awoke with a start. What caused him to feel that he was in danger he did not know, but he had a sense of alarm that was threatening him or his property. He had been in the habit of realization that he had been ever since he first saw Marie taking a frightful risk, in any event he was conscious that "death was in the room. The fire had burned out. There was a bright light near the entrance, a lamp shone on Wilcox's back and which threw a shadow of the wall directly over the fireplace. The shadow was that of a figure with the right arm raised above the head. The shadow cast by the end of this arm was difficult for Wilcox to make out. It seemed to be a pointed stick held by a fist. The mind works quickly in the presence of danger, real or fancied, and in a fraction of a second he had determined that a man was behind him with his right hand raised and holding a dagger.

"Senora!" cried the American sharply, falling to the woman who had served the wine.

The shadow flickered and disappeared.

There was no reply to the summons, and the young man called again:

"Senora!"

Presently the woman, yawning, came in from the room.

"I did myself, senora," said Wilcox, "with not even money enough about me to pay for the wine I have ordered. Have you any one here who can go to the only hotel with a check, get it cashed by the landlord and take me the money?"

"Yes, senor, but you can as well pay for the wine when you come for—"

"No, senora; I go away early in the morning to Naples. Besides, there are other purposes for which to make use here among you good people, I intended to bring money, but forgot it."

"Very well, senor. If you desire it I will send my son. He is in bed, but I can awaken him."

Wilcox took a blank check from his portmanteau and filled a check for 1000 lire (£40) and wrote on the back of it a request to the landlord of the hotel to send him the money it called for. The check was given to the woman, the landlady, and, ordering another bottle of wine and lighting a cigarette, he made it appear that he would wait the return of his messenger.

He had a good idea of waiting for the money. He knew the man who had come to kill him when he awoke from slumber would return to the man who had gone for it. Possibly others than he knew of the fact that 1000 lire was to be carried at midnight from the town down to the fishers' village by the beach. He made an attempt to precipitate it. There was still another possibility. The landlord might surmise that his guest had been conversed and required the money for a ransom. He would be in no danger from the messenger abandoned on his return by a policeman.

Wilcox realized the fact that he was at the fishers' village near 12 o'clock at the latest. He had, then, two hours in which to wait. But—oh, plague spots!

Thinking there might be, after all, some modifying clause in the will whereby his fortune should descend to another, he arranged himself in a new suit, bought his ticket and left Chicago by a certain train.

Arrived in Los Angeles, he immediately sought out Jack Gordon, his old friend and introduced himself as Alfred D. Bennett of Chicago, nephew of the late Thomas Wilcox.

"Glad to meet you, Mr. Bennett! Take a seat. What can I do for you?" said Gordon.

"There is one feature of my uncle's will that gives me a good deal of uneasiness," replied the young man, seating himself near the lawyer.

"Which one is that?"

"The one that gives me to marry a girl I have never seen. It is perfectly ridiculous!"

The lawyer laughed till his fat sides shook. "Why, that's the best part of the whole will!" he cried.

"The worst part, you mean," said Alf Bennett, sadly. "But, there may be modifying clause? There must be one, be—"

"No, there is none until you have tried and failed to woo and win the lady of your uncle's choice."

"I am supposing the young lady likes the situation any better than I do."

"I don't know. She is a most charming Grayson had a daughter's love for your late uncle and humored all his vagaries. I've heard that she was glad to abide his amusement at the young man's irritation.

"Look here, Bennett. Come and sit down and we'll talk business. I admit, that the singularity of the condition, though it seems more unfortunate to you than to me. But you have the best of it, because you have left! Now, frankly, wouldn't you?"

"That's business, and I respect you for the admission. Now, listen. You have the best of it, too. Who knows but an acquaintance may prove satisfactory to both? At any rate, you two must meet. If some one else gets the girl your uncle is spending the summer with her aunt, who owns a large olive orchard about sixty miles from here, I'll be a real friend of the family. Leave it all to me and I'll arrange a meeting. You can then tell whether the condition is entirely ominous or not. What do you say to that proposal?"

"I'll do as you advise," replied Alf, who, having cooled off, was making an effort to look at the bright side of his plight. "It won't do any harm to see her, at least."

Three weeks later Bennett took the morning express out of the city, bound for the little Arizona town, sixty miles distant. Arriving there, he was directed, pointed to find no conveyance awaiting him and was just starting for the little hotel, the only one that the place could boast, when a luxury came rapidly up to the station and a footman descended.

The agent hurried out to meet the driver, a beautiful young girl, the daughter of a wealthy ranchman, with full dark eyes and a wealth of hair that seemed to be the envy of everybody.

"Did Mr. Bennett come on the train, do you know?" she inquired in a sweet, clear voice. "Mrs. Grayson sent me to meet her guest."

"Yes, Miss Bennett," said the agent, stepping forward and lifting his hat to the fair driver.

"Then I will drive you to Mrs. Grayson's," returned the girl.

"Thank you." And he sprang lightly into the carriage with a full face.

"Do you wish me to take the reins?" he asked.

"Oh, no, thank you! Billy objects to strangers," she replied.

The hotel keeper was on to the trick of coming so far, though," said the young man, stealing a sidewise glance at the lovely face beside him in the trap.

"I don't mind the drive at all. Besides, I was almost obliged to come," he added with charming frank-

The argument advanced in favor of a new phonograph which has its records made of wax instead of hard rubber is that it is possible to provide much longer selections on the older method.

DRIVEN TO WEDLOCK

And Handicapped by an Inheritance

By ADDISON HOWARD GIBSON

Alf Bennett was sitting at his desk making up copy for the Chicago Times when the boy brought in cards and carelessly tossed him a letter. Alf was dismayed when he saw the business, and shabby salt and rusty shoe gave evidence that his checks, "like angels' visits," were few and far between. Yet in spite of this there was an open, honest expression on the man's face that inspired confidence.

He picked up the letter, tore it open and began reading:

Los Angeles, Cal., June 30, '08.

Dear Nephew—When you read this I shall be in my grave. My Arizona mines have proved wonderfully wealth, and my savings are considerable, and you will be my heir. But on one condition—that you marry the girl your uncle chooses for you. I have spent my life to save others when the Indians attacked the settlers in my vicinity.

May is heart free as yet, and I have reason to believe you will be welcome.

My lawyer, F. B. Goodfriend, will arrange for you to meet him. Inclosed is a check for $100. Come to California immediately. Your uncle,

DANIEL T. ROCKWELL.

"Hang it!" he ejaculated as he surveyed the situation. "I don't even know how it would seem to be a rich man. Of course anybody would, but why didn't he marry some nice woman himself and have a family of his own to be rich for instead? That need have left me out entirely.

Thinking there might be, after all, some modifying clause in the will whereby his fortune should descend to another, he arranged himself in a new suit, bought his ticket and left Chicago by a certain train.

"I don't mind the drive at all. Besides, I was almost obliged to come," he added with charming frank-some. "I hope you are going to enjoy your visit, Mr. Bennett. I know mamma and May will do all they can to make your stay pleasant."

"So you are Miss Grayson also? I didn't know there were two Miss Graysons."

"Yes, two May Graysons. But I am commonly called Maxie to distinguish me from my more dignified Cousin May."

"Two May Graysons! It was strange that Lawyer Goodfriend had not mentioned that fact to him before he came. Maxie! She is a perfect little bundle of sweet mystery," thought Alf. "If the May Grayson referred to in his will is half as bright and winsome as this girl by his side I won't find it with a hard matter to live up to the condition after all. And yet I don't know that I really want to live up to it now that I have seen Maxie."

Mr. Alfred Bennett found a very cordial welcome awaiting him at the pleasant home of Mrs. Grayson. May Grayson—the May—was a nice looking stately girl of twenty-five, a beautiful crown of cut brown hair and clear, expressive gray eyes. She was bright and intelligent, and he was forced to admit after an hour spent in her company that, all things considered, the coming camp style in her manners. He liked her very well, too, and might have fallen in love with her if he had not met Maxie first. Bright, merry Maxie! She charmed him more and more as day by day he saw more of her. And yet she studied to avoid him in every possible way, and succeeded in almost always in forcing him into the company of her cousin, thus escaping any marked attention he might wish to pay to herself.

This plan scheming on her part did not lead young Bennett to form any warmer affection on Miss May. For long he struggled against it, but his life would be an intolerable failure if he was obliged to live it without Maxie. The struggle was a brief one, and the desire to gain possession of his deceased uncle's wealth was over. At last he made up his mind and announced to himself.

"May Grayson may have half the money and the orphan asylum the other half for all I care! I'll be true to the love that is in my heart. I'll tell her I will marry Maxie if I can win her. With her by my side I shall be brave and strong enough to do it. I'll win wealth."

Having thus decided in his own mind, the young man set out for a stroll through the pretty little meadow. Maxie joined him almost at once, and in while. "Out for a morning constitutional, Mr. Bennett?" she inquired. "It is an ideal morning for a Cousin May would say."

"Yes, always thrusting 'Cousin May' at me," Alf returned, with some slight irritation. "But it is you I wish to be with, Maxie. I thought that I was going to leave tonight, and I must say something to you before I go."

"We'd be sorry to have you leave us with anything burdening your mind, Mr. Bennett."

"You know, I suppose, why I came here?"

"I believe so," she said.

"Well, I want to inform you that the conditions of my uncle's will can never be complied with now."

"Is that so?" came from her lips in feigned surprise. "I am sure it is such a pity for you to lose the fortune."

"I don't have learned that there is something better than that for me—love, Maxie, I cannot begin to tell you how devotedly I love you. I want you to be my wife."

"What! After all the attentions you have been receiving from May?"

"You are responsible for those attentions, Maxie. I could not be when you persisted in throwing us together so often."

"I think you are very fickle."

"No; I am very constant. I haven't ceased loving you a single minute since I first met you. Can't you love me just a little, Maxie?"

"I'm afraid not."

"Won't you try to love me, dearest?" "I don't need to try, Alf," she replied, looking up at him with a shy smile.

"Your sweet dearest?" he cried, catching her in his arms and pressing her to his heart. "You were fooling me all the time?"

"Yes, for, much as I was growing to love you, I resolved not to let you know it, dearest, until I received from his arms, "because, you see— Oh, Harry, I'm afraid!" she cried, rushing forward to greet the young man who had come unannounced.

"Don't fear it all, darling," he said, shaking hands first with Maxie, then with Alf. "I didn't cover my eyes. I was too interested in the way you two pressed and got here in time for breakfast. Mrs. Grayson told me I'd find you both down in the orchard, and I hurried in time to see that you two have come to an understanding."

"Yes, sir," said Alf decidedly. "I've concluded to enjoy love in a cottage with Maxie rather than to live with Mrs. Grayson with all my uncle's money."

"Love in a cottage! Oh, the refreshing youth!" said Harry Grayson, with a hearty laugh, to which Maxie could not help joining. "Come, come, Bennett," said the lawyer, wiping the birth shed tears from his eyes, "put on a dimmer to the style of your own blunder. I—"

"Blunder, I don't understand you, sir," said Alf.

"Of course not!" And the lawyer went off into another convulsion of laughter. "This sprite, whom you took to be the daughter of Mrs. Grayson's, is the May Grayson referred to in your uncle's will."

One month later the "easying condition" to be with was complied with.

The Result of a Lecture

A Young Professor Gets Off His Best on the Subject of Love

By EVAN HARRINGTON

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

I was but twenty-eight years old when I was called to the chair of mental philosophy in the University of B., a woman's college. I was given to rationalism, materialism and all that group of isms popular at the time and was fond of embodying them in my lectures to my classes. I dictated these lectures, and they were taken down by the students in blank books. I was lecturing one morning, my subject leading me into something at which the girls pricked up their ears. This was the passage that attracted their attention:

Music is an appeal to the fancy, exciting the instinctive fanatic, never to the intuitive. Love is a pleasant language, as in the case of music, but it is not a language of truth. It is a language of martial strains. All our emotions are but the result of impressions. Love, therefore, is a term that is apt to be excited to the same ways. The impressions of love are false in most instances. When these circumstances are attractive love is produced and when they are disagreeable they engender hate. Love produces a false estimate of the whole being. But that it is not in itself reasonable—in other words, separated by itself from the fact that it may be repeated again or otherwise—is seen in the case of the Indian custom of the wife's immolation on the funeral pyre of her husband would not a necessity.

There was no sound in the room except my monotonous dictation for during the pauses at the end of every full dress sound was heard of hurried pen points on as many lecture books. I was a bit uneasy at this position of my discourse, fearing the girls might do or say something that would embarrass me. I was about to proceed after the last word, however, when Kate Swann, the chief mischief maker in the class, laid down her pen and rose from her seat.

"May I ask, professor," she said demurely, while her eyes twinkled mischievously, "does a sense of justice prompt you to the subject we are studying?"

"Certainly."

"Then if love were eternal would it not be just that a widow should immolate himself on the funeral pyre of his wife as well as the wife on the funeral pyre of the husband?"

The class tittered.

"I shall, with an affectation of modesty for my sex, "is not supposed to be endowed with as strong, unchangeable love proclivities as men, partly because he is not as emotional. Nevertheless I grant that if love were spiritual, which I consider to be the same as eternal, a husband who lost his wife should do well to die and be mourning on the funeral pyre of his wife."

"You mean then, professor, I suppose," pursued the miss, "that, while it would be a necessity on the part of a widow to go on the funeral pyre of a man under similar circumstances it might do well to thus immolate himself."

I was in for it. The satire was delicate. Such sufficiently for me to be understood by Miss Swann's classmates. Their faces were turned up to me, their pens hovering above their books, all expecting my rejoinder. I resolved to silence the young lady by a compliment.

"I am quite sure, Miss Swann," I said, "that if you should be a widow you would be the first to go with the rest."

"Will you be my wife forever?"

"Forever."

"Enough to go with me when to go?"

"Where?"

She pointed to the heavens.

"I will be pleased to be a widow."

"Then I will proceed to put what" you were gone."

"I believe in incineration."

"I will be pleased to put what"—

"The man I marry must make my promise."

"What promise?"

"To be incinerated with me when I die."

I stared at her in blank amazement. Did that condition I will be yours."

Memory is a wonderful thing. Lessons will lie dormant there for many years and be called out on a word or an incident pertaining to them. This incineration business called up that combat between the Romans and the Gauls years ago. For the first time I saw something familiar in Miss Swann.

"You are"—I began, but stopped. I had forgotten the name I wanted.

"I am!" She broke into a smile.

"The girl who quizzed me in the lecture room."

"I am Kate Swann."

"And as full of the devil as ever."

"I am not full of the devil except on love that it it were ever my good fortune to meet you I would make you my wife and then I would feel that you were expected here I knew my responsibilities on hand. I told the others that for certain reasons best known to myself I desired to be incinerated with my husband and asked to be addressed as Helen Phillips."

"And in the secret of your reason?" I asked.

"No."

There was a silence between us. I was conscious of having been duped, and that is not a pleasant sensation.

"Miss Swann," I said coldly, "you have won a famous victory."

She looked up at me with an expression of a woman who has been put to repose one she has offended, a sensation which I experienced immediately.

"Was it all for the purpose you have stated?" I added.

The glance sank to the floor, and I took her in my arms.

A VERSATILE WOMAN

Mrs. Haverfield Said Her Fine Stable to Provide Funds for Suffragettes

The Honorable Mrs. Evelina Haverfield, daughter of Helen, Lady Abinger, has made a name for herself and donated the proceeds to the English Suffragettes. When Mrs. Haverfield first took up "Votes for Women," her friends only smiled and described it as a whim of the moment, but when they saw her at the head of a procession three miles long in the streets of London they began to regard her seriously. Now they see her absolutely convinced, for during the past nine years Mrs. Haverfield has made the greatest sacrifices possible to a woman who follows the bounds and is devoted to her home. She has now sold her entire stable, consisting of nine hackney hunters, and handed over the entire proceeds to the Pankhurst family to be placed in the Suffragettes' Fighting Fund.

Mrs. Haverfield, who is a very handsome woman, lost her first husband, Major Haverfield, some years ago. She married her second husband, Major Balgur, but absolutely declined to take his name. She insists to this day on being known as Mrs. Haverfield, and not long ago she and her husband agreed to live apart.

Her mother, Lady Abinger, is one of the leaders of Surrey society, and owns a magnificent castle in Scotland. Her younger daughter is the widow, the Hon. Mrs. Charlton, whose movements are usually announced a few months ago she was travelling in the wilds of Morocco. Just now she is touring in the United States on the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The eldest daughter, the Hon. Ella Synge, enjoys a good practice as a lady doctor at Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. Her friends intend to take part in all the Suffragette demonstrations which are being planned for the opening of Parliament. She has installed Jiu-Jitsu and can throw the biggest policeman in London—if necessary.

AVIATION HOLDS SWAY

Paris Is in the Grasp of a Flying Machine Craze

Europe in general and France in particular is seemingly gone mad on the subject of flying though in the air. What matters it if here and there poor unfortunates are taken from the clouds and is picked up a piece of mangled flesh? Progress must go on. The history of the world's development shows that the sacrifices of some pioneers in new directions is not alone demanded, but is inevitable. A life is a small matter and can not be evaded, for some must die for the sake of many. With every aviation accident resulting fatally some improvement or precautions necessary to avoid similar disasters to hundreds of other aviators, hence the victims have not died in vain, but that many other persons may be saved from like accidents.

In Paris, at present, so great a hold has aviation on the public mind that even in the public parks and gardens where Punch and Judy or similar open exhibitions were formerly given all by itinerant showmen, tiny semi-planes with manikin aviators, are seen flying through the air around and about the show grounds. In fact, in most cases they are controlled by strings held by the showmen who bring the toys to earth in due time."

MANUEL'S FAIR CHARMER

Gaby Deslys Finds her Friendship with the ex-King Pays Well

Gaby Desalys is in Paris again, fresh from her triumphs, if they may so be called, in Berlin, where she had been appearing in vaudeville. Mme. Desalys is the only actress who found so much favor in the eyes of former King Manuel of Portugal. Her value as a star has increased immensely since her name became coupled with that of the ex-King. How much Manuel keeps one eye on the spot in England where the ex-King is living with his mother. Gaby believes that Manuel will be devoted to her as ever. That she will remain this devotion the Portuguese republican government makes itself sufficiently large financial allowance to the deposed king is believed by many who know this exquisitely young beauty.

NAVIES COST MONEY

The Immense Sums Spent for Armament by France and Germany a Heavy Burden

From all the speeches recently made by the various Liberal statesmen in Great Britain, says Pearson's Weekly, the impression how important it is to the present Liberal government to impress the minds on the naval question, and endeavour to counteract unnerving reasoning from Conservative circles mainly in the form of prophecies, that in a certain number of years the German navy will be at least as strong as the British. The Liberals, therefore, are, ever, seen to carefully avoid a discussion of the question.

The only thing which will and must put an end to the building of warships is the inability of the people to bear the burden of the present time the official German press is full of the words of the Chancellor, who is able to present a budget for Germany, in which indirect taxes imposed upon the German people have materially had the cup hoped-for effect. But in strong contrast is the German opposition press points to the increased taxation demands to be laid before the Reichstag. The German people are sighing under heavy burdens, an increase in the price of the necessaries of life, which makes it almost impossible for the working and middle classes to buy meat, and stimulates, owing to new additions to the military and naval expenses. That things will not go on like this forever, is evident. For a while, it is true, there may be a balance by artificial means, but the day will come when this will no longer be possible, and new taxes must be imposed.

OLD-AGE INSURANCE

In Italy the Voluntary System of Pension Buying Has not Proven a Popular One

An interesting conference upon the subject of old-age pensions is at present being held at Turin, Italy. As far back as 1898 there was founded a national fund, which, starting with a capital of $27,000,000, has received every year half the profits of the Post Office Savings Bank. Any working man, on contributing an annual premium of not less than $1 and of not more than $20 is entitled on a pension at 60 or 65 years of age, at his option, and should he have been insured at least 25 years. But this scheme has never been very popular so far, and at the end of the fifty years' 17 years of experience, only 344,262 persons were thus insured.

Accordingly, a system of compulsory insurance, on a system of State-provided old-age pensions, on British lines is advocated by some critics, the latter, however, being mostly favored by the Socialists. Optimists, however, think that much more could be done with the existing voluntary system if the methods were taught to the Italians so that children might avail themselves of them. Others desire the union of the national fund with that for insurance against accidents met with in the course of work; while others again point out the need of more State-aid being granted, inasmuch as has made the fortune of private companies. The Bank of Poor Law system 16 Italy renders some plan of old-age pensions all the more necessary, for the Italian does not get rid of the suspicion of the State and its institutions. He always fears that he will become unemployed when, as in a recent case, the bank manager defaults with the savings, and the State refuses to reimburse the money to the unhappy depositors until the defaulter has been brought to justice—that is to say, till months or even years have elapsed.

BLACK HAND IN PERTH

It is Known as Red Hand There, but the Methods are Similar

A boy of fifteen made an audacious attempt to extort the sum of $5,000 from the manager of the Lonsdale Iron Works, Perth, Ont., a gentleman named Alexander Ernest Lang. The boy, who is the son of Lang's printer's apprentice. He prevented, by himself with a letter at St. Dreux's private residence last night, and, asking to see that gentleman, handed him the following letter:—

"Sir,—Will you give the bearer of this letter the sum of $5,000, if you do not I will put on once I shall blow up your home. This is the last warning you will receive. You should pay in notes and not dare to inform the police because that will not help you, but rather, only cause trouble.

"The Chief of the Red Hand."

"P.S.—Don't say anything around the saloons of the boy who brings this letter, please put the notes in a bag."

Mr. Dreux did not pay the money, but sent the boy off, saying that it would be handed over on the following day at five o'clock. The boy then left, followed by one of Dreux's employees, and to the works, who had him arrested in Longey. With extraordinary effrontery the printer's apprentice declared that the letter had been given to him by a stranger whom he had met near the residence of Dreux. It was only when he was searched at the police station that it was found that the boy confessed that he was the author of the letter, and that he had conceived this method in order to get money for an approaching fete. He also added that he had acquired the idea of raising money in the way from reading of a like exploit of some boys in Paris who had killed and robbed a bill-collector.

GERMANY'S BUSY TIME

The Turks and Persians are Warming Up to the Kaiser

If German never before were in danger of becoming affected, and what is called the "swelled head," the present time certainly invites an attack of that disease. Never has the Kaiser's country to such an extent been the centre of the world's politics as during the last month. With the Monmouth visit to the Persians hailing the Kaiser as the "truest protector of Islam," with German bankers preparing to take over the Turkish railway system, with Berlin and Vienna laying foundations for a new friendship with Belgium, with the Crown Prince travelling towards the far East on a similar mission, and with the Emperor's visit to Fez in Spain, the German press have really had to work hard to find room for all these signs of the empire's greatness. On the surface all these events have little connection with each other, but the German press, they have not been a source of embarrassment.

That the headmen Turks and Persians are anxious to establish touching cordiality—confidence in Germany's might and ruler that they felt convinced he would protect them from agitated the dreaded Russian bear and British bulldog—was, of course, very flattering, but the appeal was a characteristic one. The Chancellor, Minister of Foreign Affairs, who would be more than glad to have stir up the anger of England and Russia and so cause trouble which might end in a war between the Triple and Triple Alliance. Another point worth noting is that German financiers while willing to finance the money which France refused her, are by no means in love with the idea of becoming Turkey's bankers, and are advancing the sum required rather to oblige a government friendly to Germany than to attract them. Germany, with her growing industries, can use all her capital at home, and, indeed, if the friendship between the two countries permitted, would herself be a borrower in Paris.

The French military authorities in Africa are devoting every effort to increase the number of a species of camel which can travel more than twice as swiftly as the ordinary camel of a caravan.

A KERRY COWARD

He Proved That He Was a Man of True Courage.

By M. LOUISE CUMMINS.

Mike Carney sat comfortably on a bag of slag during the last two minutes of the noon hoist, the empty dinner pail which had held his home dinner swinging backward and forward rhythmically between his knees.

His blue eyes, looking straight ahead, held that blending of guilelessness and mysticism which is the birthright of a religious people. Down to the end of his short nose Mike's face might have been a fit study of a fifteenth century monk, but his mouth belied all that, apparently having been formed for no reason on earth but to smile an Irish jig, and the sight of it that moment was sufficient to cure one forever of the idea that life was real.

At present his lips puckered more than once, but only a lone note, which seemed to have gone astray from the rest of the tune, issued from them. Something began to grow in his eyes, burning away mysticism and leaving a smiling a substratum of quicksilver.

"Oh, Mike, be gob!"

He stood up and found the brick wall opposite, as though it was the presence of a friend, and addressed it:

"'Tis chances enough the workin'man has to take anyhow—

His wife's name as if broken. Cringed into himself, he sank back on his stool, torn between the conviction that "'twas fate" and the dictates of inherent abhorrence of "informing."

"Any time, Mike," the foreman's boy soliloquized, his mental attitude seeming to descend despondently with his body. "Any time you're dying, and every day too!"

But at that time when the foreman ordered him to replace a large bolt from a shafting to a countershaft which was revolving at a terrific speed Carney looked him quietly in the eyes and refused.

His glance had measured the danger first. It was a particularly ugly job, for it meant work on a ceiling, compared to which the belt he had replaced that morning was as child's play.

"Not while she's runnin' I'll not do it."

The foreman's strong young hands closed and unclosed at his sides. He was no coward, his husband's junior, with his record still to make. His eyes which answered Mike's narrowed to points of steel. For a moment the two men regarded each other with a deliberation still, flat look.

"You Kerry coward!"

The measured words were like the kiss of scalding steam from the blacksmith's face. All the fighting blood of his race showed in the ole unloosed belt of each man. Mike's head lifted, his eyes. Like a felled log the foreman went down.

Very quietly Mike picked up his belongings and left the shop. Not even the certainty that he had lost his job and the beating thought of a month's months at home to be fed could quell the exultation which was in his heart done. For an hour he walked, hugging it savagely to his breast. Then, as he approached a certain house in town, it seemed suddenly to ooze out of the ground. Nosey eyes, while she stood on the small porch hanging out clothes, were as mirrors from which the light of the sun was reflected on being "out for a job" looked back at him with cruel distinctness.

Margaret Harriman leaned her arms on the back of a chair across the silver and cut glass at her dinner table, her white face and wide open eyes still held by the memory of one who had recently been in the darkness of a cave.

"But the man," Hartman said, fingering his glass—"I wish you had found out his name, Margaret."

"I know, dear; but, Henry"—her hand went to her heart; Hartman felt pallor of her face—"oh, it was all so terrible! Those mad horses with the trailing harness and the broken carriage, the fearful recklessness of it, as they dashed on and on! And the children when baby left Anna and came toddling unconsciously across to where I sat on the curb!"

"There, dear, don't go over it any more." Hartman's voice was low. He rose and put his hand on his wife's shoulder.

"The man," she went on after a pause, "has been hanging about here lately. I have fancied sometimes that he wished to speak to me. And when I had baby safely in my arms I looked at him. He had such tenderness blue eyes—and saw that he was very white. But when I asked him if he had been hurt he only shook his head of a bruise where the shaft grazed his shoulder. It was the quickness and coolness with which he acted, Henry, that stunned me. And no sooner had I thanked him than he was pounded in the funniest way, and he hastened up to me whistling an Irish jig."

Hartman's brows drew together. "Margaret, you're—be—of course not"—

"Who, dear?"

Carney, my little fig whistler. And that reminds me, I've got a scent here around since I got home."

The superintendent of the Lethington Wire works went quickly to the library. A moment later his wife heard him calling up his assistant by telephone.

Mike stood in the Hartmans' library for an hour. His sensitive face worked as he forced a shabby hat round and round by the brim.

"You sure, was saying, ma'am. I've got five o' them meself at home," he said deprecatingly.

"How does it happen that you're not working, Carney?" The superintendent looked at him keenly.

"Well, sir, you see, 'twas this way." Meself an' Harrington had a bit of a disagreement about a belt and—"

"Well?"

Hartman's eyes held his, compelling the truth.

"Mr. Hartman, sir"—the words rushed—"I'm a Kerry man, sir, and a fighting blurt—" once seen a man tore to bits doing what Harrington bid me do. I'm a man, sir, with children, an' children've been sometimes since I've had a steady job, but 'tis hungrier they'd be if I wasn't here at all, an'—I couldn't take the chance."

"You don't have to take the chance." Hartman was pacing the floor, with hands thrust deep into his pockets, the veins on his forehead knotted. "No man who works under me shall be asked to take a chance that I would not take myself. Did Harrington discharge you for that?" He wheeled suddenly, facing Mike.

"No, sir; no, Mr. Hartman, sir. We had a few words first, an' he—he called me a Kerry coward, an'—I bit him a lick."

"Did you, though?" There was relish in the superintendent's voice.

"Oh, sure, 'tisn't any harm I'd want to be after hurtin' him, sir, only when the lad is a dacent lad enough, an' knowledgable, too; only a bit young, an', sir, well, I bit him."

Hartman followed him to the door. "Be at the works in the morning, Carney, and we'll see if we can't find something for you that'll suit you better. Good night."

Margaret Hartman pushed her husband aside and, laying Mike's hand, raised it to her lips.

"He called you a Kerry coward," she said, with leaning tenderness. Her head stood transfixed by the beauty of her clear eyes. "But I call you the bravest man—the bravest man I've ever lived!"

When Mike's broken figure swung Ellen still remained, silently watching the children's movements in the machine. Presently he looked up, and his gaze met her hostile eyes.

"Ellen, Ellen," he said soberly, "you know I wouldn't be after takin' the money out the bank or mortgaged the place if I could see any other way to get dred times as much with this invention.

"If it's a failure, Ellen," he went on quietly, "I'll take a job in the pin factory in Dodgeville till I've earned enough to put the money in the bank. I'll do it and run the farm too. But I'm not going to fail. ...Do you think I'd put that money in it if I hadn't the full assurance of success? I'm going up tonight too. Won't you come with me?"

"No, I don't, Hiram Butler, and I wish you wouldn't fly over the house. The pesky thing might fall on it and knock off a chimney or even harm the roof. And knows, I'd like to keep the roof over my head even if I starve to death!" Ellen turned and pressed red toward the house without one backward glance at her husband.

Hiram stood by the machine, his shoulder drooping slightly, his broad forehead knitted thoughtfully. His brown eyes seemed to peer anxiously beyond the low, red glow of tomorrow of the result of this evening's experiment. Podnaut, the aviator, had in certain places, and he promised Hiram he would buy the patent out right if the "try" didn't make a successful flight across the twenty miles of country that separated their respective homes.

Now, as he stood there in the passing, his thoughts on the public topic of the community, Hiram spoke as if in self defense against his neighbors' disapproval and his wife's bitter resignation.

"I may be a farmer born and bred," he said slowly, still with his head bowing glance across the hills, "and may-be I haven't the very reason in favoring a flying machine when I couldn't even drive a corn sheller or a mowing machine to save my life. Its the work I have done it. I've studied 'em till I think I could almost fly myself."

The supper bell hanged suddenly from the front porch, where Ellen hurried to and fro between the table and the kitchen. Hiram heard her call to each the note of impatience in its brassy tongue and hastened toward the house. As he entered the kitchen Ellen was passed into the dining room and sat down at the table.

Hiram's head rose, as had been all the meals in that house since the mortgage had rented thereon. At last Hiram pushed his plate aside and spoke.

"I'm going down to the postoffice, Ellen. When I come back I'll be ready to make the longest flight I've ever attempted. If I succeed in getting over the Dodgeville place like a bird—and I'll buy me out. You wouldn't want to come out and see me off?"

He spoke a little wistfully.

Ellen's face turned obstinately away as she poured herself another cup of tea.

"Excuse me," she said emphatically. "One idiot in the family is enough. And if you get as far as the chicken house I hope you'll look up the chickens. Tom Nooner was last night."

When she had cleared the table and washed the supper dishes Ellen stood in the doorway looking out into the moonlighted yard. Hiram had not returned from the village, and since he was about to start on his strange aerial journey without coming to the house again.

A Story of an Aeroplane

By CLARISSA MACKIE

It was potzed on the rolling green floor of the west meadow and with its outspread wings looked very much like a great white butterfly.

"I call it as 'air flier,'" explained Hiram Butler to the little crowd of men and women who had gathered about the machine, "I feel pretty proud of her too. Made every bit myself except the engine."

"It must have cost a pretty penny," drawled James Lummer curiously.

"If it'd been me I'd rather have an automobile. You can take the bull family out in one of them cars."

"It do seem sort of a selfish contraption," put in Mrs. Deacon Skinner. "For instance, suppose you wanted to take Ellen out on a Sunday afternoon. How could you, Hiram? And she expected curiously at the broad leather seat that Ellen served as the single seat in the flying machine.

"I wouldn't want to go," snapped Ellen with a little angry glance at her husband. "Catch me trusting myself to the air with any man!"

Then she lipped the last of a small brass lantern held in one hand.

Then he moved forward; there was the sharp clanging of a gong, and Ellen's heart almost stopped still. In another instant it would be too late to detain him—he was in the air or back at her reach, beyond her touch, and he could not hear her plea for safety.

It had flown above the house. Ellen darted desperately forward, grasped the end of the lantern rope, and the rope hastily and clumsily to the nearer projecting rod, passed to tie another knot, when she paused, leaning the flukes on the anchor into the air.

With a whirring rush the machine started down the slope, the wheels rebounded, then rose in a graceful curve

KEEPING OUT OF RENO.

Wife Knew Your Husband; the Rest Is Easy.

"MY husband is just perfect," exclaimed Mrs. Newed. "Heaven help you," put in Mrs. Oldun knowingly. "I hope for your sake he'll get over it."

"Why, what do you mean? It's positively foolish to talk that way, of course you're joking."

"Joking! Not a bit of it," went on Mrs. Oldun derisively. "You see, I know what I'm talking about. I've been through it. I used to think just as you do, and if you are as sensible as I think you are you'll never get over it just as I did."

Mrs. Newed was on the verge of tears. "I think it's sinful to make light of the marriage relation that way. I hope my husband doesn't get over it, and I hope I don't get over it. He's perfect, and we're perfectly happy."

"Oh, yes; you may be happy, but you will never know what real happiness is until you find out that your husband isn't perfect."

"But I tell you he is perfect."

"And I tell you he isn't. Let me ask you do you ever give him letters to mail?"

"Yes, often."

"Very well. If he's perfect he always mails them."

"Indeed, he does. That's one of the things I find in him."

"You mean he always says he mails them?"

"I mean if he says he mails them he does mail them. I hope at least he's truthful."

"Not if he says he always mails your letters, for there was never yet a husband who always mails his wife's letters. He will lie, and all husbands will lie, so that you will continue to think he's perfect. A venture to say you always ask him if he mailed your letters, don't you?"

"Usually."

"And whenever you ask him he puts on an injured air, gets a little provoked?"

"A little."

"That's it. He's just like all the rest. That's just the way my husband did when he was perfect. But then one day I got the goods on him, as the slang phrase goes. I found out positively that he had not mailed a certain important letter."

"What if he didn't?"

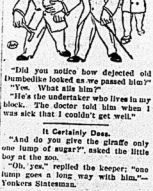
"Everything. It was the turning point in our lives. I took him off his high horse then and there. Oh, the satisfaction in it! You cannot imagine the supreme joy of reducing a husband to the level of a human being. I suppose your husband is very self possessed; never loses his temper. That's a part of perfection."

"Of course he never loses his temper."

"And so he just calmly lords it over you, serene and insufferable in his poise of superiority, while he looks down on you, along with all other women, as consistent and hysterical."

"Perhaps I have noticed just a little of that."

"You must contrive some way to make him lose his temper. The angrier he gets the better for you. Then you have got him forevermore."



"You talk like a crazy woman. I don't see what good that could possibly do."

"Good! Why it's a veritable panacea. Ever after, no matter what the argument may be, you can caution him to be careful, not to get excited and remind him what a fearful temper he has when he becomes aroused."

"Well," said Mrs. Newed in disgust, "if that's your idea I wonder you haven't landed in Reno long before this."

"Reno, nonsense! That's the way to keep out of Reno. Talk about independence! The only thing that is absolutely impossible to live in the same house with is perfection."—Ella O. Jones in Life.

Lost a Job.

"Did you notice how dejected old Dumbbell looked as we passed him?"

"Yes. What's the matter?"

"He's the undertaker who lives in my block. He called me in the other day when I was sick that I couldn't get well."

It Certainly Does.

"And do you give the giraffe only one lump of sugar?" asked the little boy at the zoo.

"Oh, yes," replied the keeper; "one lump goes a long way with him."—Yonkers Statesman.

Desleaging It.

"When a woman marries and then divorces her husband inside of a week, what would you call it?"

"Taking his name in vain."—Princeton Tiger.

"Cham That Has."

"How do you love to cook?"

"We take beef out in the automobile now and then."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Why They Have Cholera.

In Siam, as in many parts of the east where a waterworks system has not been installed, the population is absolutely dependent upon canal, river and rain water for drinking and bathing purposes. In Bangkok, a city of 80 many klongs, or canals, that it has been called the Venice of the east. The natives usually drink the river and canal water, not having the means for cooling it otherwise, and thus usually without filtering or boiling, with the result that all the year round there is a mortality from cholera which, immediately before the commencement of the rainy season in April and May, when the river and canal waters become brackish, runs up into thousands daily. Those who can afford it use filters, and some even boil the water after it has been filtered. Several artesian wells have been sunk, but the water is said to be distilled and soda water, is sold and is therefore beyond the reach of the natives.

A Trick With an Egg.

Place two V shaped wineglasses of the same size near the edge of a table. In the right hand one put an egg, holding the rim of the glass. Hold the bases of the glasses firmly down, the top rims touching each other. Now, with a quick, sharp breath blow upon the line where the egg and the glass meet. The egg will jump to the other glass. With a little practice the trick can be done every time. Be careful to blow in a line with the left hand glass, and the egg will jump in the wrong direction and land on the table with disastrous results.

A Traveler's Tale.

The early explorers of the Brazils brought back some strange tales. One of the most curious of these which Mr. Guy Rothery recalls in his book on "The Amazons" is of a race of men "whose feet were turned the wrong way round, so that if any one attempted to follow in their tracks the pursuers were misled, actually receding from those whom they desired to catch up."

GRIMSBY'S BUSY HOUR.

It Is Grim But Profitable When the Catch Comes In.

Grimsby's (Eng.) busy hour means a lot.

A dark day, with mists rolling from the grey North Sea. Shrill hoots sounding from outside. A churning of oil water, and on race long, narrow fishing boats, the very latest in this scientific seasoning competition, cautioned by men equally up to date in language of the choicest. But you've no time to look at darting, jumbled shipping. You're on the pontoon, a buzz landing. Overhead electric lights, a low roof, a roof to which steel ladders run in shafts.

Along the vast landing sweating, bustling men—men hauling fish, cleaning fish, men packing cases, men filling baskets, men reeling ice from the great insulating opposite. Outside, that long, panting line of steamers, all for fish.

You pause beside one shining heap. Watch a hand, watch a hundred hands, "gutting" with lightning rapidity; watch huge men monsters jumbled into barrels; watch the struggle for the many weighing machines; leap aside as some marine giant, heaving on a shouting string of carriers, hurries past.

Now a train—tucks in; trolleys tear by on the platforms; trucks are labelled for every town in the British Isles. You watch them fighting against time in this cold morning air, and an engine roars and sparks, gives a wild scream, and is gone. That doesn't matter. Here comes another! You are infected with the spirit; find yourself heaving with the best.

Here an auctioneer, surrounded by a mob, who have hardly time to bid, here a policeman talking a man, who's so busy that he hasn't time to discriminate, and has awkwardly collared over other people's property, the fish porter, with other "pros" scaly heaps are sorted. The crowd grows larger. Blue-jerseyed figures work in this rush and scurry like machines.

"Here for Sheffield! Sheff——" That's drowned in a roar of "Fish, mackerel. Come out! Clear away!" She goes in fifty minutes. Already the cargo's showing off; already the platform's clearing; already the big boats lie quiet and deserted, and down the broad platform limited motor wires are coming, basket in hand, for that last catch in fish.

"Money, mum! Daren't talk it!" roars one driver. "Tell ye what, guv'nor, one, if it ain't enough, come again!"

That means there's a glut on the market! Then that generous giver to other people's property which uses virtuously, lights his clay, and takes his two first rests for five hours. And others are resting; and the swarming crowd round that quarter-mile length of trucks thins. Hoarse "Sheffield clear!" arise. A bell clangs. "Puff! puff!" sounds faster and away in this dark space, and she's going, is gone, taking all England's fish dinners, not to mention fish-shop suppers, with her.

The Phrenologist and the Grocer.

Phrenologist—Here is a man could fill his proper sphere. His head betokens high intellectuality and spiritual qualities, yet he is spending his time behind a counter (to customer) I'm not a grocer), I wish to ask you a question. Have you any aspirations?

Grocer (calling from clerk)—John, have we any aspirations?

Clerk—No, sir; we have some in the last of the week.

Melted In Her Badness.

"Why is the world did you try to evade the payment of duty?"

"I expected all the time to pay it," replied the man.

But the burrid customs men went through your trunks."

"Of course they did, and found several gowns worth $400 apiece. I couldn't have given the figures to the inspector myself, could I?"

Prints Own Dictionary.

Mr. Edward Dwelly, of Herne Bay, better known by his pen-name of Ewen MacDonald, is now completing the self-imposed task of compiling, printing and publishing a Gaelic dictionary entirely by his own labor. To extend his knowledge of Gaelic he joined various Scottish regiments, and for the last fourteen years he has worked at the production of "Faclair Gaidhlig" in monthly parts. Unable to afford to pay for publication in the ordinary way he decided to print the work himself. He has mastered all the art, and after compiling a list of a million words, giving their meanings and local variations, and drawing a thousand illustrations, he turned to composing, plate-casting, printing, trimming and binding, finally posting the parts to subscribers. Next year he hopes to have the work completed. Mr. MacDonald has been encouraged and helped in his efforts by the grant of a civil list pension of $250 early this year. Mr. MacDonald is a Welshman and speaks Welsh fluently as well as Scotch Gaelic. The dictionary will be completed in three volumes.

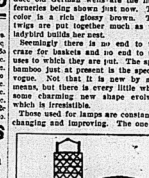
THE BASKET CRAZE

A Fad For Them In Every Form and Size.



ATTRACTIVE LAMP SHADES.

The Popular Basket of the Hour Is Japanese, Split Bamboo—Indian, Malay and Mexican Effects Second Favorites.

Dainty little twigs all the way from the Black forest and made to reproduce old German wells are the little favorites being shown just now. The color is a rich glossy brown. The twigs are put together much as the lobyrint builds her nest.

Seemingly there is no end to the craze for baskets and no end to the uses to which they are put. The split bamboo just at present is the special vogue. Not that it is new by any means, but there is every little while some charming new shape evolved which is irresistible.

Those used for lamps are constantly changing and improving. The one illustrated is particularly handsome and may be surmounted by a shade of the same material or one with very open spaces which show the light through the silk lining.

A new candle shade effect is picturesque. It is the basket type with lining of yellow silk. An incandescent dropped inside makes it a soft, pretty light, and it is decorative for a table in a living room.

Every nation seems at some time or other to have expressed itself in a basket of distinctive pattern. People of semibarbaric history seem to excel in the art.

Indian baskets made of the sweet grass in a variety of shapes and sizes are much sought and difficult to get in certain forms. There are those of the tiniest dimensions, just the size to hold a thimble and in the shape of an acorn, and again this same basket is big enough to hold a piece of pick up fancy work.

Possibly the most unique of the baskets shown are those of Malay make. They are very intricate in design, too much so to show the detail in a drawing.

All of them are a deep cream or tan, for largest part, and in a rich brown. This is a sort of carryall with square corners like a telescope. The women pack all their belongings about with them in this case.

Mexican baskets with their brilliant brown and greens are very gay and extremely durable.

The grass is twisted very tightly and closely, and the fiber is too tough to break easily. It is really the most ornamental and taking of all the baskets one finds now and makes the most attractive of receptacles for sweets or gifts of any kind.

Salt as a Cleanser.

Every housewife should realize the possibilities of salt as a cleanser. Indeed, salt and kerosene should be in the cleaning outfit of every household, for together they form a combination which eradicates almost any dirt.

For polishing mirrors nothing can exceed the merit of salt. When applying it the glass must be wet with clear water, then the salt rubbed on with a damp newspaper. The final polishing may be done with dry newspapers or with a chamois skin.

A tablespoonful of coarse salt, a teaspoonful of ammonia and a pint of hot water mixed and kept for rinsing decanters and carafes will make them as bright as new.

Silver discolored either by egg or other dye will respond at once to a vigorous rubbing of damp salt.

Salt and vinegar mixed will usually restore polish to brass and copper, and salt is a wonderful renovator of polished wood surfaces that have been dulled with hot dishes. To brighten such spots cover the gray portions with salt, which is then wet with olive oil, all of the latter being poured on that the salt will absorb. This should stand for twenty-four hours, when it should be removed and the surface rubbed with a soft cloth. If all grayness has not disappeared repeat the salt and oil bath.

For removing discolorations of fruit from teeth or hands salt is excellent.

Mlle. Helene Dutrieu, a Frenchwoman, has just been officially recognized by the Aero Club of France as an aviator capable of managing an aeroplane. She celebrated the event by making a flight from Blankenberghe, in Belgium, to Bruges and back, the total distance being about fifteen miles.

The feat was the more remarkable by reason of the fact that she carried a passenger with her. For the greater part of the journey she flew at a height of about 1,250 feet. On reaching Bruges she circled the steeple of a church and then set off on the return journey.

On reaching Blankenberghe she descended without mishap and was almost overwhelmed with congratulations. All records made by women in the air have been broken by her journey.

Mlle. Dutrieu was at one time an attraction in one of the Parisian music halls. She was known as "the human arrow," her performance consisting of a leap of forty-five feet through space on a bicycle. She had been fond of cycling from an early age, and the sensational leap was her own invention. It was considered so dangerous that the prefecture of police forbade it.

Mlle. Dutrieu then turned her attention to aviation. She began practicing last year at Issy-les-Moulineaux and had a few mishaps in the course of her apprenticeship. She has now successfully gone through the tests required by the Aero club at Mourmelon, and her name has been added to the list of recognized women aviators. The three others are Mme. la Roche, Mme. Kopchlin and Mme. Franck.

Marcel Braunschwig, who has written on "Art and the Child," makes a special plea for the artistic decoration of the nursery. He argues very against ugly toys, such as the "polly wog," the jack-in-the-box and other grotesque playthings. He wants everything about which the child plays to be highly beautiful and artistic. He wants the illustrations on the nursery walls for that reason to be artistic. He points out that the child's mind is impressionable and that everything which it sees, touches or comes into contact with leaves its impress. Such decorations, he points out, are necessary in teaching the child cleanliness and morality. He says: "The objects in a home have, besides their mortal value, a more secret and quite as important value—they are discreet witnesses of our existence, intimate confidants of our thoughts. They gradually assume an expressive value because of the recollections and associations connected with them. Our hands by touching them leave on them a little of our physical being, and our eyes, too often reeling on them, transfer to them some of our inner being. Thus things objects pass through various periods. They have their youth and old age; they acquire an element of gayety. It is our duty to extract that poetic charm from the objects among which we live and to make our children appreciate that charm. Since it is chiefly for the sake of the aesthetic education of children that we advise parents to enhance their home, it is evident that they must take a peculiar care in adorning the nursery."

A Sensible Mother.

In these delightful days of free afternoon lecture courses, demonstrations, household economies exhibits and many rectifies it comes hard for an up to date and much interested woman to stay at home because she has one or more little ones and no maid. If, however, she follows the example of a certain enterprising young housemother she may very certainly take in many a treat of this sort. The mother in question has been set of happy, healthy and very active little twins with her—not only to convert and benefit by the morning or third Sunday to church as well—without any trouble to herself or any annoyance to the rest of the audience or congregation, because she also always carries with her a large suitcase covered copybook and two well sharpened pencils. She will sit one between the two little ones, and just as soon as they become restless she spreads the book on her knee, gives to each one child a pencil and then is able to give her attention to what is going on on the platform or to the pulpit, while the small boy and little lassie are busy printing out nursery rhymes and drawing pictures.

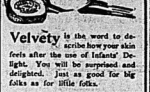
Training the Nervous Child.

This bit of good advice on taking care of nervous children is found in the last number of the Healthy Home: Intestible regulations are essential in the training of the nervous child, because it is only by them that a habit can be gradually formed which shall serve as a barrier to shelter the child from its inheritance. Iron rules should prevail as to regularity of meals and bedtime. Displays of temper or of oversensitiveness or of morbid emotionality should be met with firmness in the one case and kindly indifference in the other. They do not call for nagging or admiration or panic on the part of the elders.

There may be a good deal of common sense in the idea that strict rules are kinder than lax ones when nervous, high tempered children are to be dealt with. When once the fact is learned that a reputation must be adhered to a child accepts it as a matter of course, and innumerable little struggles, as wearing to the child as to the parent, are avoided.

Schoolbooks a Heavy Load.

"Don't let the children carry heavy books to and from school," is the advice of a physician who has had much experience in children's hospitals. A mother testifies that she believes the heavy bag of books which her daughter carried to school every day had much to do with her nervous breakdown, says the Chicago News. The habit tends to make one shoulder higher than the other, to lengthen the arm or enlarge the hand disproportionately. When "home work" cannot be avoided let the child have one book at school and another copy at home. It will pay. Or, if that is not possible, at least do not let him carry his books always on the same arm or slung over the same shoulder.



A Unique Suggestion.

Is it true that women have worse times deciding things than men do? It often seems so. They do agonize over which hat or which sweetheart or which investment to choose. Here's some one suggests a novel scheme. Why not stop trying to decide which chooses you want the most when you stare in despair before the milliner's glass and try deciding which one you want the least? It gives the thing another angle, one by which you can eliminate conflicting elements and the one that's left must surely be the one you want most. At least one woman finds it so.

CRIPPEN'S FATE SEALED.

LORDS UNLIKELY TO ACCEPT FATE

Further Trouble Expected In England Tomorrow Night

QUIET REIGNS NOW

Lords Will Likely Refuse To Become Reconciled To Fate.

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 21.— What will the announcement of the Lords be to-night following Premier Asquith's dec'aration of policy concerning elections? That is the great question in all Britain to-day. It is not expected that a majority of the Upper House will be conciliatory and the outcome will be a bitter fight for constitutional government. Meanwhile, things are quiet this morning.

AUTO RACE CAUSE OF JOHNSON'S COLLAPSE?

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—The auto race with Barney Oldfield 'got Jack Johnson's goat' and when the race he has declined steadily." This was the statement here to-day by Lou M. Houseman, who promoted the race between Oldfield and the colored pugilist, in commenting on the reports that Johnson was suffering from a nervous collapse.

Houseman said that two hours after the race he visited Johnson at his hotel on a business matter and found the fighter in a state of collapse and shaking like a leaf. Johnson confessed bitterly of the chances he had taken in the race," said Houseman, "asserting that Oldfield crowded him and that three times he narrowly escaped crashing through the fence.

Johnson's manager told me last week that Jack had not been the same since the race and had acted strangely."

PLYANA, Russia, Nov. 21.—"God Almighty will open the door into heaven for Tolstoi, if the church won't," was the declaration of the Premier when he moved adjournment of the Douma in respect for the dead novelist. The body has been encased in a rare casket and will be buried with the simplest funeral rites, pomp which he loathed in life.

CRIPPEN TO PAY PENALTY OF HIS CRIME WEDNESDAY

Winston Churchill Refuses To Interfere Further--"I Die An Innocent Man," Declares The Doctor.

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 21.—Crippen must hang on Wednesday. Hon. Winston Churchill finally decided this morning there were no grounds for his interference and thus failed the last resort. When the result of the unsuccessful appeal to the King's advisers was communicated to the condemned man he said; "I shall die an innocent man. I am convinced that it will be eventually shown that the remains found under my house were not those of Belle Elmore."

In the presence of two warders Lenere had a painful interview with Crippen, this afternoon, both breaking down and weeping bitterly. She will see him again to-morrow.

2 ARE KILLED IN EFFORT TO RESCUE IMPRISONED GIRL

Deadly Duel Between Inmates of Hotel And Relatives of Captive Follows Proprietor's Refusal To Release Her--Sheriff Arrests Men and Women

MOUNT KISCO, N. Y., Nov. 20.—In an attempt to rescue a young girl who, it was alleged, was held prisoner in Daniel Merritt's hotel, at even Mt. Kisco and Armonk to-day, a battle with guns that lasted more than an hour was fought with revolvers and rifles. When it was over, two men were dead and several others were wounded.

Merritt's place is an isolated section of Northeast County. Wednesday night, Frederick Johnson, coming to town to the hotel and walking up to the bar, told Merritt the story.

"You scoundrel, you have my little sister a prisoner here. You had her screened from her friends and keeping her here a prisoner. I want to see her right here and now."

At a signal two of the habitues of the place sniped Beyer and threw him out of the place. He was warned that he would be beaten up if he ever returned.

Getting a gun, young Beyer, as he brushed the dirt from his clothes, shouted: "I will come back and I will get my sister or someone will get hurt."

Late last night word was sent to the Beyer home. Beyer, accompanied by his father, and several friends were on the way to Merritt's. The lights were turned low, the doors were barricaded, and the inmates waited. Some hours later a knock came at the door. When it was opened, Brewer's voice was heard saying:

"Send out my sister or there will be something started."

This was the signal for the shooting to be ordered, and the set out side of the building was riddled. The firing attracted until Sheriff Scherpa with a posse of deputies arrived. Upon their arrival the sheriff was sighted, the attacking party fled immediately afterward the back door of the tavern flew open and several women inmates scattered into the road, that led to Armonk.

MR. ARISTIDE BRIAND, Premier of France.

BRUTAL ATTACK MADE ON BRIAN

First Thought of Premier Is For Safety of Assailant.

KICKED AND BEATEN

Man Acted In Behalf of a Society of "Camalott du Roi"

Paris, Nov. 21.—Imposing national ceremonies in the Tuileries Garden yesterday, in connection with the dedication of a statue erected to the memory of Jules Ferry, the French statesman, were marred by an assault upon Premier Briand, who while walking with President Fallieres, was struck twice in the face by a royalist.

The Premier was not seriously hurt. The vast crowd in the garden set upon the Premier's assailant, and only determined intervention by the Municipal Guards saved him from being beaten to death.

The incident occurred at the end of the exercises, which were attended by thousands. Premier Fallieres, M. Briand and other Ministers were walking toward the carriages when a man broke through the Republican Guards that lined the road, leaped to M. Briand's side, and, raising his clenched fist, high in the air, brought them with full force upon the Premier's face. M. Briand reeled, but did not fall. As friends rushed up to assist him, he cried: "I am all right; we must go on with the ceremony."

The very audacity of the assault rendered the crowd momentarily speechless, but a shout of anger and cries of "Kill him," arose quickly from all quarters as men fought their way to lay hands upon the assailant. He was kicked and beaten and badly injured before the Municipal Guards urged on by the Premier, succeeded in rescuing him.

The man was taken before a magistrate. He gave the name of Lavogue, and said he was a member of the executive committee of the Camelots du Roi, an organization of young royalists, and that he wished to strike at the republic in the person of M. Briand.

The Camelots du Roi met last night, and unanimously elected Lavogue vice-president of the association, in token of their sympathy and admiration for his action.

The statue to M. Ferry was erected by the public school children of France and colonies, the subscriptions of whom each contributed one cent. The statue, while honoring M. Ferry as a statesman and upbuilder of the colonies, especially extolled him as father of the public schools of France. A golden book, containing the names of all the school subscribers was placed in a receptacle beneath the statue. There was a great procession of school children and orations were delivered by Premier Briand and other noted public men.

Warns Bigger Discount.

London, Nov. 21.—Mayor Beattie, at a meeting of the water commissioners of Canterbury, urged 25 per cent. discount in power, rates, instead of a 10 per cent., claiming that the city would not compete with the reduction made by the London Electric Co.

Five Years For Theft.

Quebec, Nov. 21.—Five years in the penitentiary was the sentence passed Saturday morning on James Barry, Thomas Barry, Friday morning on, the charge of having stolen the sum of $113 from another man in the Salvation Army barracks.

Vancouver Labor Temple.

Vancouver, Nov. 21.—The contract for Vancouver's Labor Temple will be signed by the Trades and Labor Council next week, and construction commenced this month. It is to be a six-story building, and will cost $100,000.

Will Run for Mayor.

Belleville, Nov. 21.—Ald. Ackerman has announced himself as a candidate for the mayoralty for next year. He has been a member of the council for 3 years.

FOOLISH WOMAN HAS HER EYES OPENED AT LAST

(Intelligencer Special.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.—Mrs. Mina L. Francois is in the House of Refuge here awaiting word from her husband, with whom she left her children after deserting with a prominent man, who took her to Montreal. In a heartfelt confession to a priest and the police she asked them to ask her husband's forgiveness for her.

A Gruesome Find.

Brantford, Nov. 21.—A farmer named William Shore, made a gruesome find near Whitemans' Creek, about 12 miles from this city, on Sunday afternoon. The body of an unknown man was found hanging to a tree, where, it had evidently been for some months. Although the surroundings had frequently been used as a picnic resort during the summer, the remains had not been discovered. An inquest has been ordered.

High Constable Kerr, who is investigating, believes the body, which was almost entirely decomposed, to have been that of an Englishman, Ernest Mitchell, whose grip and clothes, including a Manchester and certificate, were found in a bush a few miles from Whiteman's. Efforts are being made to identify the remains.

Stabbed By Her Husband.

Sault Ste. Marie, Nov. 21.—Mary Nipolitano, married Italian woman, living in the Italian colony, is a patient at the general hospital, suffering from stab wounds, said to be fatal, inflicted by her husband, Peter Nipolitano, who, in a fit of jealousy, attempted to kill her.

The husband returned from a trip out of town, and, finding a number of men in the house, attacked the woman with a knife. She proceeded to the river front, and was in the act of tiffowing herself into the water, when restrained by passers-by.

The husband, took to the woods, and has not yet been apprehended.

Laurier Is Sixty-Nine.

Ottawa, Nov. 21.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on the occasion of his 69th birthday, yesterday received cables of congratulation from King George, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, Gen. Louis Botha, Premier Asquith and many others. A large number of people called at his house to convey their congratulations personally.

HON. SIDNEY FISHER AFRIAD OF MIXTURE, ADVOCATES FRENCH.

(Intelligencer Special)

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 21.—Speaking to the French-Canadian literary Society yesterday afternoon, Hon. Sydney Fisher urged the importance of conversing both French and English in Canada. There was danger, he said, if French was abolished in the schools, of getting a patois mixture of both languages.

Joe Chamberlain Appoves.

London, Nov. 21.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain has written to Mr. Balfour, warmly approving the latter's Nottingham speech. "I wish my health permitted me to take my stand on the platform with you, to promote the great national and imperial reforms, which you described. That I cannot do, but I hope you will go with you in your fight for freedom, union and progress."

Lord Roberts has postponed his resolution on imperial defence in the House of Lords, to Lord Crewe today, pending the second reading of the Parliament bill. It is expected that Lord Lansdowne will take the opportunity of meeting Asquith's challenge that the Unionist proposal for reform of the House of Lords is mere spectre.

John Redmond's 200,000 "good Americans" are playing an increasing part in the Unionist campaign. Everywhere the Government is accused of rushing the election at the bidding of the Irish leader. It is also seriously suggested that a hat, covered with dollar signs, should be carried round in every constituency, and kicked through the streets and burned.

Mexican Insurrection.

Mexico City, Nov. 21.—The insurrection which was said to have been planned for yesterday against the Government of Mexico failed to materialize, although at several outside points there were minor outbreaks.

A newspaper correspondent who returned to Mexico City last night from Pueblo, said that not more than 40 persons were slain in the fight at the house of Aquile Cerdan. Sixteen of the dead were revolutionists, he said, and the others were members of the police force, soldiers and spectators. The correspondent estimated the number of wounded at about 125, and among them were a large number of innocent spectators.

ACKERMAN FOR MAYOR—1911.

The summer of 1912 will possibly see the next general election—about 20 months hence—also the passing of Laurier's Government.

A rich Ohio woman has just run off with a burglar. Of course it may be all right in this particular case, but in general it is better to scream for help.

A New York man has applied for a divorce on the ground that his wife refused to shine his shoes. The woman admitted her guilt, yet the judge refused to grant the divorce. Men are getting the worst of it these days.

The Beef Trust has applied for a change of venue from Judge Landis' court. Why are they so terribly fussy over a non-important matter? Standard Oil will testify that whatever Judge Landis may do, the higher court will prevent harm coming from it.

Note that new sewer pipe near the entrance of the park is liable to get into trouble with ivy in spring if not laid down low in bed of river. Remember what the ice did to the water main at lower bridge. Better have the sewer pipe properly laid while the water is low. Save additional expense by having it done now.

A WELCOME HOME.

Friday evening the ladies of the Tabernacle Women's Missionary Society and many kind friends gave to their president, Mrs. (Rev.) J. C. Seymour, a welcome home. Mrs. Seymour has just returned from the west, where she has been enjoying the balmy breezes of Sunny Alberta.

Mrs. Seymour was very severely remlered by the young ladies present. Rev. Mr. Kenny acted as chairman and made a few remarks after which he called upon Mrs. (Rev.) Mayhee and Mrs. (Rev.) Campbell. They expressed the pleasure of the Auxiliay to have Mrs. Seymour in their midst again. Mrs. Seymour was called upon to say a few words. She thanked the ladies of the Auxiliary and the many friends for their kindness and appreciation to her and sons. During the evening refreshments were served by the ladies and everyone had an enjoyable time.

Beautifying The Roads

Much has been said about the advantages of smooth, hard roads, but little has been said of the advantages of making the roads beautiful, as well as easy to travel. An experiment is to be made in this direction in the State of Washington and Idaho which is of interest and an example to others. Two great roads are to be constructed in the Spokane Valley. Each will be 34 miles long and 24 feet wide with additional strips of four feet more on each side, and each will be of oil macadam. The cost is estimated at $350,000. Preliminary work on them will be commenced at once.

There is a novel feature in regard to these highways which will make them not only of great utility, but beautiful. It is planned to plant apple and elm trees along each of them, making great avenues which will be among the finest in the world. There is no reason why this idea, which has been frequently advocated, should not be followed in other sections, where new highways are constructed. It would be comparatively easy to have every such road made more beautiful by so doing. The work need not necessarily be done by the State. It could be accomplished at little cost of money or work by the property owners living along them who would, by setting out trees, not only add to the beauty of the highway but to the value of their own property.

Ontario is one of the greatest fruit raising sections of the country. Yet practically nothing has been done towards planting apple, peach, pear and other fruit trees along our highways. The fact is, such an improvement would be small, the returns would be great.

Which Is Worst

Death is generally regarded as the severest punishment which the law possibly can inflict on any culprit. A life passed in imprisonment might be held to many persons not to be such a fitting yet life imprisonment falls to inflict penalty than death.

There is, however, one judge in Chicago, Judge Kavanagh, who does not think that way. Recently a prisoner named Joseph Welcome, guilty of an atrocious murder, was permitted to enter a plea of guilty to murder in the second degree and Judge Kavanagh in sentencing him to life imprisonment is alleged to have said that he felt he was imposing a much more severe penalty than death. In pronouncing sentence the judge is quoted as follows:

"Welcome, you committed a terrible crime. Your punishment is to be more terrible still.

"The instinctive unreasoning horror of mankind regards death as a severe punishment. This idea is not correct. You are now to receive a sterner punishment. Your victim died but once; you will die a hundred times. You will suffer more the day you put on your prison clothes than she did in her death. After that there will be only the hopeless, painful years from day to day, from month to month, stretching out forever and in agony.

"In four or five years the eternal solitude and silence will begin to crush in upon you like an iron weight. You hear that street car bell ringing in the street as it passes now? You will remember it in after years as the most exquisite music. It will mean hurrying crowds that go where they like and do as they please; it will mean the greatest of all pleasures—freedom.

"You will only dream of it by day and by night, and your dream will be torture unbearable."

Whatever may be the general opinion as to the relative severity of the death penalty and life imprisonment, the address of the Judge, if rightly reported, seems to have been a most extraordinary one. No matter how atrocious the crime it is not the place of a judge to seem to gloat over the sentence he is imposing, or to attempt to crush the spirit of the unfortunate being before him. And while Judge Kavanagh has painted the horrors of life imprisonment in striking colors, it is not likely that many persons will agree with him. For if they did, it would be easy for the man sentenced to life imprisonment to win the supposedly lighter penalty by means of suicide.

Greatest of Russian Writers Passes Away

Tolstoi Surrounded By His Family at The Last—Had Been For Many Years A Philanthropist and A Powerful Religious Force.

Astapova, Russia, Nov. 21.—Count Leo Tolstoi died peacefully yesterday morning. Countess Tolstoi, his wife, was at his side when the end came. It was recognized long before that his case was hopeless, and at 5 o'clock in the morning, after the countess had been summoned and the other members of the family had gathered in an adjoining room, the physicians issued a bulletin announcing that the activity of the heart had almost ceased, and that Tolstoi's condition was extremely dangerous. Almost at once the physicians were greatly overcome by the approaching death of Russia's greatest writer.

His heart beat its last apparently without a clear moment to enable him to say farewell, or even forgiving look upon his wife and children.

The countess all day long was undressing in her stifled imploring of one doctor after another to gain entrance to where Tolstoi lay.

After the first cardiac attack, Dr. Makovitsky proclaimed that he would announce her presence to Tolstoi at a favorable opportunity.

The second attack came just after a two hours' sleep. The members of the family were hurriedly summoned. The condition of the patient, however, was so grave that he was put to sleep again by injections of morphine, the only means of deferring the end. The family were immediately notified, practical philanthropist leading the movement for social betterment and ethic reform; literary man, easily at the summit of his art; and religious teacher with a world-wide following — Tolstoi would have been a commanding personality in any country.

It was his genius in the intellectual field that made his power cosmopolitan, and though he wrote only in Russian, his speech on any important question was waited for and carefully thought to the ends of the earth.

Tolstoi was especially a power to be reckoned with in his own country. Born in 1828, shortly after the suppressed insurrection of Decembrists against Nicholas I., he lived to see a Czar summon a representative assembly, from which, as many believe, the full constitutional liberties of 150,000,000 people is sooner or later to emerge.

Brought up as a royalist, Tolstoi passed with advancing years into the camp of the opposition, and although out of touch with the revolutionists, whose policy of violence was against his most cherished convictions, he never ceased to condemn the methods of the autocratic regime.

The stormiest period of the reform movement left him unscathed. Many a time suspected of complicity with the conspirators, who found comfort in the spirit if not the letter of his writings; many a time driven to the expedient of publishing in the uncensored press of foreign lands the articles which could not see the light in his own—Tolstoi reversed from his plain speech neither to the right nor to the left.

The Ban Not Removed.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 21.—The church, in the person of the Metropolitan Antonius of St. Petersburg, Vladimir of Moscow, and Flavian of Mieswsk and Lenkkoeid, chief procurator of the Holy Synod, decided last night that the things as they are with respect to Tolstoi. A plenary synod has not been called, and the graphic instructions have been despatched, informing that requiems are not permissible. Burial, according to the Orthodox Church, is considered out of the question.

San Francisco, Nov. 21.—Twenty years' imprisonment was the sentence imposed on Saturday on Dr. Robert Thompson, alias James Grant, for causing the death of Miss Eva Swan by a criminal operation. Lount's Capture.

In Dr. Price-Brown's now-I just pub lished edition, "The Man's of It," with the west hid in and around Toronto at the time of the Mackenzie Rebellion, the author, represent "William Lyon Mackenzie's plans about to fly from defeat at Montgomery's farm to Yonge street, as looking back and seeing Samuel Lount surrounded, and his followers in the loyalists.

Was Lount captured in that way?

"Here is one of dramatic chapters in Bent's history than his story of the way Samuel Lount, after the failure of the rebellion, sought to make his escape to the United States. After many adventures he is represented as having secured a boat and set to sea. He was almost across the lake, and within sight of the American shore, the lount men were unable to proceed against adverse wind and wave and were driven back exhausted to the Canadian side. Here Lount was an object of suspicion, although his identity was not suspected, but it was supposed that he was engaged in smuggling or some questionable business. He was arrested by a rustic constable, and jailed, but no doubt lount have been released, had not a man came along who recognized him as the "rebel Lount," the right hand man of Mackenzie. He was carried off in triumph and, in the end hanged along with Matthews.

We should be sorry to have doubt cast on one of the most dramatic stories growing out of the rumpus of 1837. In Lindsey's "Life of William Lyon Mackenzie," which the leader's account of his own perilous escape across the border is found, we have it most unfortunately, poor Lount's adventures pass without mention. A novelist, however, might find inspiration in Bent's version of the way Lount near-by, but well-nigh gained freedom.

In Search of Treasure.

The operations which were recently resumed for the recovery of the fabulous treasure, believed to have gone down with the Spanish Armada galleon Florencia in Tobermory Bay, 322 years ago, begin with better prospects of success than any of the previous attempts. Spanish, Italian and British records have been ransacked, with the result that Capt. Col. Lyons, who takes charge of operations on the spot, has all the available information at his finger ends. He believes that he has located the wreck within half a square yards, so that the energies of the search party will be concentrated on a comparatively small area. Many articles have been recovered from time to time, but bulk of the treasure still lies at the bottom of the bay.

Just a Little Exercise.

The elevator conductor of a tall office building, noticing that the colored janitor had ridden up with him, several times that morning, remarked: "Sam, this is the fifth time I have taken you up, but you have not come down with me." "Well, you see," Sam replied, "Ah jess washin' windows on de fifth floor, and every time Ah sees ah messe mah hold and falls out."

Tutelary Trees.

Ancient people had their tutelary trees just as they had their tutelary gods—the former being the altars and shrines of the latter. Among the Scandinavians the ash was held to be the most sacred tree. Serpents, according to their belief, dared not approach it. Hence the women left their children with ashen rods standing under it while they went on with their harvesting.

BRITAIN'S WEALTH.

Figures About a Third Empire Discusses Sub-Few Understand.

Eighty years ago the total earnings of all the people living in the British Isles, amounted to 515 millions of pounds. These earnings have been increased at such an amazing rate that for the year ending March 31st, 1910, they passed the thousand-million mark, says Answers in a recent issue.

Of course, this does not mean that we are all twice as rich as our ancestors were in 1830, for, in the meantime, the population of the country has nearly doubled; so, in reality, we are very much where we were before.

The jump in the national income from last year to last year is, according to the Report of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, no less than twenty-nine million pounds; but this increase is largely explained by the far more effective methods for ascertaining income which have recently been introduced.

For instance, in 1908-9 only fourteen individuals and seventy-nine firms paid income-tax on incomes of £50,000 or over. These figures rose in a twelvemonth to twenty individuals, and nineteen firms. The increase is too great to be natural, and must be due to the new forms of income-tax inquiries.

After all, the question of our gross national income is not of the slightest value interest to you or me, who work for a weekly wage. What we want to know is whether wages and salaries are rising faster than the cost of living.

In the engineering and shipbuilding trades the wages paid a quarter of a century ago did not exceed 36s a week. They have since risen by two or three shillings, but at the same time, the hours of work have slightly increased.

Ironfounders, who, in 1865, were paid 36s. now get £2, or more. Shipwrights' wages have remained fairly steady at about 42s.; but the number of hours worked was diminished.

Blacksmiths, cabinet-makers, and coal miners are all rather better off than they used to be.

In the textile trades workers are quite 10 per cent. better off to-day than they were only twelve years ago. The average weekly rise in all the weaving and spinning industries between 1896 and 1908 is 2s. 7½d. per week.

Oddly enough, but quite justly, the women employed in the Lancashire mills have received a much larger rise, comparatively speaking, than have their husbands and brothers.

In the cotton mills the men receive an average weekly wage of 29s. 1d., and the women of 8s. 3d. Twelve years ago the average wage of the woman cotton-spinner was only 7s. 7d.

These figures which we have given are the average wages in some towns they rule much higher. In Oldham, for instance, the skilled hand gets about 42s. a week, and his wife 16s.; while the children, as half-timers, earn 8s. 6d. or 9s. a piece. It is a poor family in Oldham that is not earning its £2 a week.

Agricultural wages have not improved on the same scale as those of other workers. They range from 22s. a week in Renfrewshire down to the miserable pittance of 9s. in County Mayo, Ireland. There are a score of counties in the Green Isle where the farmhand gets no more than 10s. a week and six English counties where they do not exceed 15s. Oddly enough, wages are lowest in the arable counties—that is, where most of our wheat is produced.

Clerks of all kinds are doing worse than any other class who work for their living. The latest statistics show that the salaries paid to employes of companies and firms are falling. They dropped £6 a head last year. But the numbers of employes, on the other hand, increased enormously—from 512,000 to 565,000.

The number of employes with salaries of £5,000, has recently nearly doubled. There are to-day 302 people drawing £5,000 or over for their work.

Whistler's Revenge.

The celebration of the twenty-eighth birthday of Lord Brooke, elder son and heir of the Earl of Warwick, recalls the fact that last year he married Miss Eden, the daughter of Sir William Eden, recalls the sensation created by Whistler, the famous artist, in connection with a portrait of Lady Eden, which he painted. Piqued on account of the modesty of the honeymoon offered to him Whistler ripped the picture out of the frame and forthwith destroyed it. A law suit followed. Lord Brooke has had an adventurous career. He ran away from home when he was seventeen to serve in the Boer war, and married by his display of spirit, his friends obtained for him the post of A.D.C. to Lord Milner. Since then Lord Brooke has acted as a special correspondent—and seen much service!

An Aged Bell-Ringer.

One of the oldest bell-ringers in the England, Mr. Abraham Howard, has just died at Winbigh, aged eighty-six. He commenced bell-ringing at the age of twenty-one, and for fifty years was ringer at the parish church. For about twenty years he officiated in the Old St. Peter's, Wisbech, beginning with the workmen's bell at 5.45 a.m. and ending with the curfew at 8.45 p.m. He followed the trade of a shoemaker.

Two Women.

See the woman. Why is she so sad?
Oh, she's having a lot of dresses made.
See this other woman. Why is she so proud?
Because she isn't having a lot of dresses made.
Both women are queer creatures, are they not?

Twice Lucky.

While fishing off Dungeness, Mr. Borough, of Wandsworth Park, London, caught a conger weighing 16 1/2 pounds, and upon opening it found a whole fresh herring wrapped up in a German newspaper.

A Warehouse Romance.

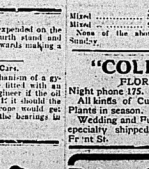
A strange romance surrounds the marriage in Dublin of Mr. Marshall Bailey, a bandy veteran of the American Civil War, about seventy years of age, to an inmate of the Dublin Workhouse, who is seventy years of thirty-five. Born in America, Mr. Bailey had a good start in business. Fortune apparently did not favor him after he left the American army, and for some years past the old warrior had been an inmate of the Dublin Union. The Workhouse. Three years ago, however, he received intelligence to the effect that the American Government had years previously accorded him a pension. The arrears of which had accumulated to £1,750. Before this came to hand he had a substantial pension had been awarded him for the remainder of his life. Shortly after the receipt of the news he died fell in love with one of the female inmates. His proposals were accepted, and their wedding was the culmination of Bailey's good fortune.

Emblem of Chivalry.

No other flower in all the world is so beloved, so exalted, so worshipped, as sakura-no-hana, the cherry-blossom of Japan. It is not only the national flower, but the symbol of purity, the emblem of chivalry and knightly honor, the crest of a cult, the vernal celebration of which has been observed with unflagging zeal for at least two thousand years.

It is Japan's own flower, more omnipresent than the chrysanthemum, and indigenous to the soil of Yamato hillsides and to the heart of the "home province" like surround Kiyoto and Kioto—Eliza Scidmore in The Century Magazine.

How to Mend a Rubber Glove.



To mend a tear or cut in a rubber glove put a piece of adhesive plaster a little larger than the rent inside the glove, hold the sides of the tear in place and press the plaster and the glove together firmly. Of course the sticky side of the plaster is laid next to the glove. This will hold the rubber fast, and it will last for many days despite the unfortunate rent.

A Prosperous Town.

They do some things pretty well on the other side. Dunmanway, Ireland, has made a profit of £16,302, of which £11,600 has been transferred to the borough fund, £2,855 expended on the erection of a new fourth street and gas-store, and £306 towards making a new course.

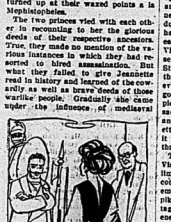
A MEDIAEVAL STRUGGLE

That Took Place in the Twentieth Century.



By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

The Loutons of St. Louis during the winter of 10—, after a summer spent in Switzerland, took a palace in Florence. That they could thus suddenly pick up a palace, that they could afford to hire a palace, is not so startling as might at first appear. Time was when all fine houses in Europe were called palaces. Nevertheless the palace occupied by the Loutons had been during the middle ages the abode of one of those princes among whom Italy was then divided. It stands on one of the many vias, or streets, of Florence, not far from the cathedral called the Duomo. In Florence are various collections of mediaeval weapons, and on the ground floor of the Palazzo is occupied by the Loutons is a room full of blunderbusses, swords, crossbows, pikes, halberds, halberas and parts of armor.

The Loutons being wealthy and Jeannette Louton being but twenty years old and pretty, there sprang up very soon among certain Italian gentlemen with a great deal of rank and a correspondingly small amount of money a spirited contest for her hand. Among these were Prince Tavacci and Strozzi, whose families had struggled with each other several centuries ago. Viscotti was forty, tall, thin, bald and wore glasses, being very nearsighted. Strozzi was thirty-two, stout, fat, high shouldered and wore his hair parted over his ears and his mustaches turned up at their waxed points a la Mephistopheles.

The two princes vied with each other in recounting to her the glorious deeds of their respective ancestors. True, there was no mention of the serious instances in which they had retired behind a blind assassination. But what they failed to give Jeannette was read in history and learned of the cowardly as well as brave deeds of those warlike people. Gradually she came under the influence of mediaeval ideas and gave a hereditary twitch of the right arm that came from those who, dust meeting centuries before, had the hilts of their swords.

One morning each received a note from Jeannette. Lorito inviting him to call at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of a certain day. At the appointed hour Viscotti appeared, and Strozzi was admitted a few minutes later. They were received in the cabinet of arms. This started as the scene of each other, glared and awaited developments.

"Your highness," said Jeannette, "you have both done me the honor to propose for my hand. Having given both I have listened to accounts of the services of your ancestors. You have transacted with me business that could not kept me there till I almost feel that I am a part of them. As I understand it, the faculties you represent took as equally important part in Italian as history. You are both fine representatives of a splendid race. Few women have been honored by a choice between two such offers. Can you blame me for not being able to choose between the two? I must ask you to decide which shall defer to the other. I will leave you in this room and ask you, when you have decided, to let me know."

She went out of the cabinet and shut the door.

For a few minutes there were low voices, gradually rising till they rang back in strong tones.

Meanwhile Ned Sackett, a young St. Louisan, who had been courting Jeannette Louton for several years, feeling that among the princes and dukes about she might slip away from him, had decided to follow her, arriving in Florence on the very day the young lady had suggested to the two princes to settle between themselves which should give way to the other.

That afternoon he sauntered up to the Palazzo V. He was admitted to the courtyard. The door to the cabinet of arms was open, and two men were fighting with swords as long as the antagonists themselves, while Jeannette was making frantic efforts to induce them to desist. The two princes had come to words. In the heat of each each had caught up a weapon. Prince Viscotti, having been hurt in the head, seized a battle ax from the wall. Prince Strozzi, seeing a piece of armor of the fifteenth century, in which he was encased, caught it up and got it partly on his thorax. Viscotti picked up a shield used in the crusades, Strozzi defending himself with an endiron 700 years old, but as Sackett entered he dropped it and replaced it with an immense iron pouch-bowl that had belonged to a Medici.

To add to the terror of the scene, Viscotti's face was bloody and Strozzi limped from a wound in the leg. Viscotti holding his battle ax, and Strozzi his enormous bowl, and grabbed a chair. This gave him such an advantage that it enabled him to drive his enemy into a corner. The next instant in two old newspapers, were 300 years old, were 300 years old, were 300 years old

Four Persons are Drowned

Emergency Ferry Is Swamped At Sault Ste. Marie—Ferryman Bringing A Party Of Six Young Men From The American Side

Sault-Ste. Marie, Ont., Nov. 21.—In one of the saddest drowning accidents which ever occurred on the St. Mary's River, four young men lost their lives Saturday night, and three others of the party were saved. The drowned are: Fred. Parker, 24, son of J. Parker, Weimia street; Cecil Brown, 17, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, Grace street; Reginald Levi, 26, son of Mrs. Mary Levi, Albert street, and John Sherwood, 45, a night ferryman, known as "Pay Leg." The rescued are: Clifford Dilks 16; Norman Tregenza, 18; Alex. Biron, 30.

The accident took place while the party of seven were returning in a rowboat from the Michigan side at two o'clock yesterday morning.

Sherwood was known as one of the most fearless men on the river, and, although he had been warned by customs and immigration officers to discontinue the practice, persisted in bringing parties across the river during prohibited hours. He was warned by a resident Saturday night, and depositing one load on the Canadian side, he returned, but immediately left for Michigan, and, while waiting for his boatload, is said to have imbibed somewhat. The party was made up at two yesterday morning, and left the slip just above the ferry dock in a small boat, which was overloaded. A strong current sweeps around the pier on the Michigan side, throwing with water towards the Canadian shore. With a moderate east wind and the strong swell thus made, immediately dangerous waters were entered. Biron, who was an experienced oarsman, became alarmed, when a couple of waves were shipped and suggested that the boat be bailed, and a can was procured. Members of the party were engaged in bailing when two heavy swells struck the craft and the boat immediately filled and sank.

Parker, Brown and Levi dropped in their heavy clothes and immediately disappeared, and Sherwood, who had but one leg, grasped the oars and his crutch, and made for the Canadian side. He was seen for some distance by those rescued, but eventually disappeared. Biron, Tregenza and Dilks clung to the boat, and their cries were heard by the Michigan side. The Superior Steel Trust supply boat and the log Sabin proceeded to the scene of the accident and rescued the men, who were all exhausted and could not have lasted much longer, as the strong current spun the boat around like a top. It is said that the barge Marquette, which had just locked through on the Michigan side, may have made the swell which swamped the boat, although Biron attributes the accident to wind and current.

The families of the young men are prostrated by the accident, and the Soo is in gloom, as all were popular. A large number of small craft were on the river yesterday with grappling irons, endeavoring to recover the bodies, but up to the present without avail.

DOORS FOUND OPEN.

The police on their rounds of inspection of premises at an early hour on Sunday morning found the back doors of two prominent business places on Front Street open. They made the same secure.

CONSULS-GENERAL HUFFY.

They Still Persist In Staying Away From Reception.

Ottawa, Nov. 21.—The feature of the drawing-room held in the Senate chamber on Saturday evening by the Governor-General and Countess Grey, was the renewed refusal of the consul-general of foreign countries to attend. The senior consul-general in Canada is Col. J. G. Foster, representing the United States. In Ottawa, besides him, there are the representatives of China, Japan and Belgium. In Montreal there are the consuls of Germany, France, Holland, Argentine Republic, etc.

The question is one of precedence. The consuls are offended that they are placed after the mayor of Ottawa, in the order in which they are presented to the Governor-General. They claim that their mission to this country is diplomatic, and that, according, to them, status in this country is higher than mere trade representatives.

However, Canada being still a colony of Great Britain in a technical sense, the Government of Canada does not recognize them as diplomatic representatives, although on occasion they have acted on diplomatic missions, as, for instance, when Col. Foster took part in the recent negotiations regarding the tariff between Canada and the United States. The contention of the Canadian Government is one to be borne out by the very letter of the Federal constitution, as they live in Montreal and not in the capital. Their mission, therefore, would hardly be diplomatic.

Demands Senator's Withdrawal.

Boston, Nov. 21.—Governor-elect Eugene N. Foss issued a statement last night in which he demands that Senator Henry Cabot Lodge withdraw from the field for re-election. In the event of a refusal, Mr. Foss declared he would go into every section of the commonwealth in a campaign to defeat the Senator.

Mr. Foss says in his statement: "Such election to the Senate would be a repudiation of the great victory of the people at the last election. He was elected as much, if not more, than Governor Draper, and it he had been the candidate, my majority would have been double what it was.

"The issues on which the fight was made, on which I was elected, was honest tariff revision downward, lower duties on the necessaries of life, free raw material, untaxed food supply, reciprocity with Canada, and more democracy in our form of government.

"We all know where Senator Lodge stands on these issues and where he has stood all these years. To return him would be a step backward, and Massachusetts has never learned to walk backward."

Carbonari Makes Trouble.

Paris, Nov. 21.—A despatch to Le Temps from Lisbon says that the peace of Portugal is menaced by the attitude of a group called Carbonari, who participated in the revolution. They refuse to lay down their arms and are embarrassing the Government by their lawless demands. They declare that they are ready to place 10,000 fighting men in the streets, if their demands are not complied with. Their leader, a naval officer named Machado, was active in the revolution.

The Government's proclamation forbidding the right to strike, has led to the general abuse of this prerogative, and it is feared that a strike which has been begun by the tramway workers, and the river boatmen and electricians, will be followed by a strike of the railroad employes and the gas men.

Old Man Murdered.

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 21.—The disappearance of Edward McGregor, who resided a few miles from the Town of Digby, and who was reported missing some time ago, is solved. The remains of the old man were found Saturday, Digby, in the woods near a lake. His skull was crushed and his body terribly mangled. Mr. McGregor left Digby two weeks ago, the Attorney-General's office learned, to make an investigation of the manipulation of Mc-Gregor, who was an old man living alone three miles from Digby. He was always known to carry money, sometimes as much as $1000. The Government offered a reward for the finding of McGregor's body.

A man named Tebo has been arrested on the charge of murder, in connection with the case.

TOWN TOPICS.

Rev. W. Carey Sage In Baptist Church

Interesting Campellford Pastor Preaches To Two Large Congregations In This City Yesterday.

At the Baptist Church yesterday, Rev. W. Carey Sage, M.A., of Campbellford, formerly of Wolverhampton, Eng., occupied the pulpit at both services and preached to large congregations. In the evening before commencing his discourse he made a special appeal for increased missionary giving in the church and especially for the northwest missions. He referred to the fact that in Alberta Province the Baptists had 69 appointments and in Saskatchewan 125 preaching appointments which need aid to sustain them.

The subject of his discourse was "Jacob's vision" and his text was from Genesis 28th chapter and 12th verse.

"And he dreamed and behold a ladder set upon the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending upon it."

When this vision came to Jacob he was like us, a mixture of good and bad. He was self rational and just too willing to save on his own account, but sometimes waiting for God's direction. Jacob was a real person and a patriarch, expecting to find his own way out of difficulty. Jacob had divine directed ambition. God had designed that Jacob should supercede his elder brother, but He desired that Jacob should accomplish it in his way. Jacob was in the wrong direction, just as many are doing today. God had His own way and desired Jacob to go that way which was contrary to Jacob's way. What did the vision in the text mean? It represented the Son of Man to Jacob and to-day He is the ladder for us to reach from earth to Heaven. We want to go upward and heavenward. We want to ascend, not to descend. Though we may try to run away we cannot hide from the face of God. The Lord Jesus Christ by His life points us upward and an escape from our sins. The ladder represented a mode of conveyance. Jacob did not see himself lifted up in a supernatural manner, but God suggested to him a means of climbing upward. Believe in Christ as the substitute for sin, believe on Him who will lift us out of the mire of sin, and bring us up higher. He is a living ladder, raising us higher and higher. He put His helping hand in ours and assists us in climbing up the ladder to heaven. We cannot in our own strength start and lead a new life. We will fail to the ground, as our own strength is not sufficient. How did Jacob treat this vision? He was disobedient. Jacob carried with him the consequence of his sin away into the land beyond the river to where went. He made a promise that he would at some future time live a God-by life. Jacob had to surrender himself to God, as we must do. We belong to God, being redeemed by the precious blood of the Lord Jesus Christ. When Jacob came to realize that God was speaking to him, he had a new religious idea, and knew that the vision of the ladder was to point him heavenward. We should put our feet upon the first round of this ladder and, round by round, ascend heavenward to the glorious country beyond.

CANADA CEMENT COMPANY RE-DUCES PRICES.

The price of cement has been lowered. This announcement may come as a surprise to many—for, when Mergers merge, the opposite usually may be looked for, but this time the unexpected has happened.

About a year ago most of the largest cement interests joined hands and formed one company, known as the Canada Cement Company, Limited. It was immediately predicted, in many quarters, that prices would be advanced, and on account of the big merger the consumer would have to pay dear for his cement in future. The promoters of the company on the other hand, stoutly contested this theory, pointing out that owing to reduction of expenses and increased efficiency, they hoped to be able to give even cheaper cement than ever before.

The first move on the part of the Cement Company was to regulate the price of the product and it was no agreeable surprise to everyone when it was learned that in making the adjustment prices were not unduly advanced. That was last year.

On the first of November, this year, a circular was sent out by the Canada Cement Company, further reducing the price of its product throughout the entire Dominion on an average of about 10c per barrel.

This reduction means a whole lot, and proves beyond doubt the sincerity of the statements made by the promoters, when the Company was yet in embryo.

AT GRIFFIN'S.

Miss Virginia Goodwin, ably supported by Miss Grace Hussey and James T. Malone, in a laughable comedy sketch, "Taming a Tiger," is the feature attraction at Griffin's for the first half of this week. Miss Goodwin and her clever company come direct from Toronto, where the act was the headline act on the bill, and judging from the press reports was a big success.

John H. Chambers, presenting a singing, dancing and whistling act, is also a comedian of no mean ability. He is singing and featuring "In Dear Old Tennessee," and carries a beautiful set of colored slides to illustrate same. Taken in all, this is a banner bill and should draw crowded houses.

Why not send your out of town friends, during next Saturday Evening Post for a year costs $1.50 order of Geen district Agent.

ELOCUTIONARY AND VOCAL CONTESTS

The Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A. is doing splendid work. The young ladies of the Y. W. C. T. C. will have contests throughout the winter at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, in which silver and gold medals will be given to the best reciters and singers, under the following conditions:

All recitations must be selected from the approved recitation books of the W. C. T. U. These books contain about five hundred pieces, and each contestant may choose his own piece.

Contestants may select their own songs from anywhere for the singing contests. It is not necessary that, all songs should be selected from one book, but it is preferred that they should be.

Not less than six or more than eight will be allowed to compete in any contest.

Contests will be held as often as may be necessary to give all who desire a chance to enter.

At each and every contest in each series one silver medal will be given to the best reciter and the other contestants will receive lesser prizes.

When six silver medals have been won then these six winners may compete again for a gold medal.

Then when six gold medals have been won these six gold medalists may compete for a Grand Gold Medal.

Five Grand Gold Medalists may then compete for a Diamond Medal.

Boys and girls aged 15 or under, and in the Fourth Reader or higher grades will compete together in the junior series of contests.

Boys and girls aged from 16 to 19 will compete together in the intermediate series of contests.

All aged 20 or over also with to compete will be entered in a senior series.

Professionals are barred in all contests. These medals are for amateurs only.

Any one may enter any number of contests, and while it is often as desired until the medal is won, but no one may win more than one medal of each kind.

The selection recited or sung by a winner of a medal cannot be repeated in competing for another medal.

The awarding of the medals will be done by three talented judges under rules arranged by the W.C.T.U. in these rules voice, articulation, gesture, memory and general effect each take a maximum of ten points in the recitations. In the musical contests time, voice and general effect each affect are each allowed a maximum of ten points.

All pupils in public or high schools or colleges or Sunday Schools must make their entries in these contests through their teacher. They may register with either their day school or Sunday School teacher, as they prefer, and it is desired that the teacher assist in training the pupil.

All who wish to compete, and who are not attending schools, or colleges or Sunday Schools, may make application direct to J. Arthur Mavin, Chairman of the Boys' Work Committee of the Y.M.C.A.

The teachers are requested to join in this work heartily for the sake of the scholars, and to send the names of their pupils who wish to compete to Mr. Marsh at the earliest possible date.

These contests are open to any one and every one in the city or surrounding district, irrespective of color, nationality or religion.

There are no entry fees, or other expenses for the contestants. Everything is free, and the recitation books are loaned by the committee.

COBALT, GOWGANDA, AND PORCUPINE.

Investors and prospects are now flocking into the above regions and the splendid reports of new silver finds at Gowganda and gold at Porcupine indicate that before long there will be a rapid expansion in values and that those who now embrace the opportunity of getting in will be richly rewarded.

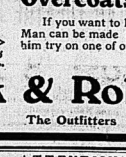
EYE STRAIN AND HEALTH.

Continued.



Serious ocular disease, such as glaucoma or iritis, produces a profound depression of the whole body. In like manner, slighter disturbances long continued will produce profound reflex results. Enthusiasts have claimed the ocular origin of nearly everything, from headache to diabetes mellitus.

Careful observers have demonstrated, beyond a doubt, cases of migraine, neuralgia, epilepsy, chorea, neurasthenia, gastric and gastro-intestinal disease, and spinal curvature, in which the principal source of trouble was refractive error, and which yielded to the correction of that error. If this be true, then it certainly behooves the general practitioner of medicine to take errors of refraction seriously into consideration in his daily work.

It may be safely stated that a perfectly normal eye does not exist. In a flexible structure like the cornea absolutely perfect sphericity such as To be Continued.

Good Form

An Old Colonial Cake.

An old colonial recipe for yellow loaf cake, said to come originally from the family of George Washington, calls for one cupful of butter, two and a half cupfuls of granulated sugar, six eggs, a cupful of thin cream or rich milk, one even teaspoonful of soda, two of cream of tartar, four cupfuls of pastry flour and one cupful of seeded raisins. Cream the butter and sugar, then stir in the yolks of the eggs. Add the cream of tartar to the flour and sift them together several times. Add the soda to the milk and stir the mixture into the butter, sugar and yolks. Then beat the whole into the flour and cream of tartar. When smooth add the raisins and finally fold the whites of the eggs whipped to a very stiff froth through the batter. Do not stir the cake after the whites are added. Butter a large tube pan and fill it half full. After it has baked and becomes cold ice it with a heavy snow white icing that will contrast prettily with the yellow of the cake. Citron sliced in thin strips may be used instead of raisins or in combination with them.

This confection may be used as a birthday cake and is very attractive for the purpose.

Cooking Green Peas.

It is very easy to ruin fresh green peas by cooking them in too much water, says Cornelia Bedford. This is a frequent fault. For a quart of peas measured after shelling put into a saucepan a large tablespoonful of butter, a half teaspoonful each of salt and sugar and a dash of pepper. When melted add the peas, cover and shake over the hottest part of the fire for five minutes; add three tablespoonfuls of water and draw to one side where they will cook more slowly. Unless old they should be done in half an hour. Add a spoonful or two more of water if in danger of burning, the evaporating depending upon their juiciness. They should be almost dry when dished.

Awfully Busy.

"The words used in everybody's mouth," it is the great American catch phrase, says Belle Tolle, "it is the excuse for all shortcomings, the reason for every diminution. On the whole, nobody seems to regard being awfully busy as a matter of satisfaction to be in the fashion. To have a day of leisure, or even an hour to oneself, would argue that one was not at all to the swim. So there are many who multiply engagements and fill them with the mistaken idea that it is keeping up with the times to be awfully busy. With not a few it amounts almost to a desire not to be always occupied, and the disease finally develops into nervous prostration. It is a pity that we cannot learn something from the wars of nature.

What Marcel Prevost Says.

Among those few men who possess the knowledge and, let it be added, the fortitude necessary to write exclusively on the subject of woman—the most difficult and baffling of all subjects—M. Marcel Prevost, the famous French author and member of the Academie, admittedly ranks first.

Feminine psychology is his domain. He has studied it from behind the scenes especially the woman of the upper classes, in such perfection of detail and precious qualifications for doing so, that practically every chapter of his books after perusing a few pages has exclaimed, somewhat sensationally, "Why, this is the very type of sweater woman."

In his latest volume, aptly entitled "Feminines," which has just been published by M. Lemerre, Paris, this unique conception of woman is carried on his favorite subject in his own inimitable and smiling way.

Corsets.

An awkward subject, but our French "immortal" is not embarrassed and, dealing as he does in his book with all problems of vital interest to women, he could not have dared to avoid the subject of corsets. To mere quote, however, M. Prevost's conclusions:

"Corsets are not good for the health, but they suit."

"Woman wears them not because they are comfortable, but because she has an instinctive dislike of anything as nature made her. In China she tortures her feet into abnormal and distorted stumps. In Africa and elsewhere she passes a ring through her nostrils, in parts of the east she blackens her teeth. In the west her motive for deformation she chiefly applies to her waist and her hair.

"On the other hand, it must be admitted—

"First—That no husband would allow his wife to go without corsets.

"Second—That corsets create an average type of femininine gracefulness.

"Third—That women who wear corsets does not do so in order to deceive man about the size and shape of her waist, but in order to please him."

Towel Borders.

Towels that have been embroidered with initials and monograms should have embroidered borders also. These are delightful or accepted. They should be embroidered in such design as will rose, aster, forgetmenot and fresh patterns and conventionalized wreaths, bowknots and flowers. Towels, sheets or pillowcases thus embroidered are a joy forever and a priceless gift to the particular and lovely loving housewife.

THREE PIECE COSTUME OF GRAY DIAGONAL

"The Illustration shows one of the smartest motor or rain coats of the season carried out in steel gray diagonal serge. The skirt is five gored and closes at the left side and buttons by the way of an inverted pleatette to the dart fitted blouse, which is fastened beneath the left arm and also across the shoulder.

In addition to the fur lined storm collar, there is an Eskimo hood with long tabs that fall across the blouse.

Young Roosevelts Live Simply.

Theodore Roosevelt, jr., and his wife are regarded as an "ideal couple" by their California neighbors. Since their wedding they have sought to live quietly and simply in their home in Pacific avenue, San Francisco. They have a house surrounded by a large garden, and the chief diversion of the two seems to be in the cultivation of flowers. Every day Mrs. Roosevelt may be seen in the garden at work. She usually wears a broad, drooping hat and gardener's gloves. Armed with clippers and trowel, she passes hours weeding and training the flowers. She appears in the evening again, this time snapping garden hose, with which she sprinkles the flowers. Her husband spends much of his time with the family for many years and knows a great deal about them. They says that Susie can distinguish several blue and both colors from white and she understands about twenty words of English. "She is only about eight months old," said Professor Garner, "and I bought her when she was only five weeks old. I raised her like a baby on milk. She is the most intelligent ape I have so far found and I can distinguish about twelve words of her own language and hope to be able to interpret them all before long."

WINTER WINDOW GARDENS.

What Plants to Depend Upon Through the Winter.

This is the time to stock the winter house garden. Some plants are to be saved from the summer and some ordered from the florist.

Benjamin Hawkins tells the readers of Country Life that no window garden plant is more dependable than the common geranium, especially in the single varieties, which are handsomest for the purpose. He names the geranium first for parsley, the bellotrope next for fragrance and says a good many people like the old fashioned lemon verbena.

Primula obconica is recommended for its free blooming habit, its pale pinkish blossoms being produced in abundance. He has a good word also for the beautiful begonia Gloire de Lorraine, but he says it is less dependable than the tall coral begonia (B. coccinea), whose large red blossoms hang from the stiff stems for three or four months. Another good begonia is B. semperflorens, var. gigantea rosea. These will provide bloom.

Forced Dutch and cape bulbs, brought in in succession, add much to the interest of the window garden. The so called Chinese lily, double Roman, two Sicas, Gesla d'Or narcissus, crocus and Princess Marianne tulip will make a string of blooms from Christmas to early spring. Hyacinths, single and Roman freesia, iris, snowdrop and scilla are also favorably mentioned.

Latest Paris Hairdressing.

This eccentric coiffure arrangement is the latest cry of Paris. The front hair is puffy and waved from the face and braided in two braids. The braid from the left side is brought at the back to the right side and the

A SMART SUIT OF BROWN SERGE.

Overhaul your wardrobe and find out just what you have.

There is your winter suit. You feel as though you could not wear it another season. But how can you afford another? Let's look it over carefully. The skirt is frayed, it's the first place. Well, that can easily be remedied. This is a plait which will serve many times. When the back of your cloth gown cuts out take a very sharp pair of scissors, insert at the largest hole and cut the edge of the hem through very exactly, so that there will be no jagged spots. Turn both the edges this gives to inward each other, the inner one's a little more than the outer or dress edge, and baste carefully. Then slip stitch by hand, dampen and press. Remove the basting threads before the final press, cutting them irregular so that there will be no pulling. After pressing sew on a good quality of mohair skirt braid, letting it come below the edge, and be sure that this braid has been shrunken, or at the first wetting the trim will all wrinkle.

But before going any further it will be well to clean all spots from the suit before attempting any further renovation. The coat is perhaps the most difficult matter. It is doubtless too long and has the long shawl collar of the past season, but it is not hopeless. Cut the coat to a becoming length, a little below the hips. Fit closely about the waist and, if necessary by a tailor, and, lo, you have a new and fashionable garment.

The street suit pictured offers current suggestions for remodeling last year's finery. It is a three piece affair, and the coat is lined with a brown and tan silk which makes the upper part of the skirt and forms the yoke. A cream lace yoke veiled by brown chiffon brings the whole right up to date.

Charge It to the Woman.
That cheerful farce known to the public as an "inquiry into the causes of the cost of living" assumes many amusing proportions day by day. Somebody or something is to blame for the prohibitive prices which mock our indigence, and under no circumstances may the sensitive feelings of the protectionists be hurt. Consequently political economists who are not callous enough to share the frank indifference of congress offer us strange and artful explanations of a problem which has grown too formidable for pigs, says Agnes Repplier.

The most original of all these suggestions comes from an instructor in economics in the Wharton School of Finance at the University of Pennsylvania, who holds that food is dear because women buy it and women "have no basis for estimating the value of what they spend." Money to a man represents so many hours or days of labor. Money to a woman stands for no economic effort. The price of all commodities is unreasonable here because of the "extravagant willingness of women to pay for them."

If this be true all that is needed to reduce the cost of living is that men shall stop and market. The poulterer will not venture to ask $2.50 for a pair of chickens; the dairyman will blush at the mere thought of demanding forcents a dozen for eggs when confronted by the meek partner of the family. Hops were quoted recently at a figure calculated to make these lordly animals a wagger in their midst—but they will soon be reduced to humility and modernized if the "mother of the family buys the morning sausage. Even the cook will cheerfully accept $1 a week instead if when her master pays her wages, especially if she can be brought to understand that he is ridiculously inefficient as to food and that it was only the "extravagant willingness" of her mistress to pay her $7 which made her ask so much.

Following is the death toll: Stephen Labelle, killed by falling rock in Union, Cobalt mine, at Elk Lake; George Annandale, killed by an explosion of gelenite at Moose Horn mines; Arthur Morin and George Morin, drowned while crossing lake Temiscaming.

Labelle was to have been married shortly. He was working in a shaft when the rock fell on him.

VIOLENT QUARREL LED TO LONDON HOMICIDE WHICH PUZZLED WORLD

Crippen Writes Full Confession For London Times --Poisoned Wife, Then Buried Her Body--Leneve Innocent of Complicity

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 22.—Crippen has confessed. The London Times, which never makes a misstatement of fact, came out to-night, in its evening edition, with the story of the crime as written by the condemned doctor himself.

It is understood the story has been written for days and has been held till all chance of intervention had pass.

Just what the big Thunderer paid for it is not known, but the proceeds go to Miss Leneve and their unborn child. It was stipulated first that a portion of the money go to the father of Crippen, who has since died.

The confession states that quarrels caused first by attentions of male admirers of Mrs. Crippen, and intimacy between Crippen and Miss Leneve, were responsible for the terrible tragedy.

Following the party last January, the quarrels were bitterer than ever and Crippen began administering slow poison and when it was effective he buried the body.

In conclusion, Crippen says Miss Leneve knew nothing of the murder.

(Intelligencer Special.)

The United States may step in and take over Mexico to compel the peace and protection of United States interests.

Pueblo and other important towns have fallen to the revolutionists, President Diaz has placed himself at the head of the troops. All males have been summoned to join the rebels, but some fail to respond.

BOURASSA WILL RUN AGAINST SIR. WILFRID

Nationalist Leader, Will, If Plans Work Out, Beard The Premier In His Own Constituency, Quebec East.

MONTREAL, Nov. 22.—The Nationalists, at the coming federal elections, will carry the war into Africa, and, if the plans now entertained by the friends of Henri Bourassa come to fruition, the leader in person will oppose Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Quebec East, which, up to the present year of great happenings, has vied with Drummond and Arthabasca as being the most pronounced Liberal stronghold in the Province of Quebec.

This, then, is the present program. Mr. Bourassa will run in two constituencies, as he won't be never burn his bridges by accepting nomination in one county, with so formidable an adversary as the Prime Minister, and it is also quite likely that the leader of the administration will also run for two constituencies.

The latter supposition has, however, been denied in certain quarters, where the assertion is made that Laurier will stake all in his old constituency, and should Que bec East, which has never elected anything else but a Liberal since confederation, withdraw its confidence from the one-time idol of his race, Sir Wilfrid Laurier will bid adieu to public life.

CHOLERA A PAPAL SCARE, ASSERTS MAYOR NATHAN

Rome's Mayor Says Vatican and Alien Hotelmen Would Keep People Away From Italy Next Year

ROME, Nov. 22.—In a speech opening the session of the municipal council to-day, Mayor Nathan complained that interested hotelkeepers abroad, especially in America and Switzerland, had given currency to exaggerated reports of the cholera epidemic in Italy, thus serving "the lowest interested motives of the clericals who wish to detract from the success of the festivities in 1911 in celebration of the proclamation of Rome as the capital of United Italy."

Considering the influx of people from the provinces to the capital, it was impossible, the Mayor said, to avoid specific cases in Rome, but measures had been adopted to isolate the sick and prevent contagion, with the result that in four months there had been but 39 cases, with 21 deaths in the city, a lesser number than had occurred in Berlin, Vienna and Budapesth.

Mr. Nathan referred once more, but briefly, to his controversy with the Vatican, and hinted at a possible connection between the artificially spread fears of cholera and "the fears tempested in the name of the health of the soul, which were meant against Rome and the patriotic manifestations of 1911."

CHANLERS PAY THE FAIR DIVA

But Cavalieri Had To Abandon American Tour.

GETS $25.000

"Bob's" Relatives Ante Up Rather Than Live Near The Songbird.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Lina Cavalieri has acquired more Chanler money, is the latest news of that fascinating songbird.

Not much this time, a mere trifle of $25,000 or so. But she didn't have to "Lina" out to get it. She merely had to declare:

"I agree not to come to America to sing during the opera and concert season of 1910-11."

As a guarantee of good faith she affixed her interesting signature to a legal document pledging that she would remain away from America and not appear to add further confusion to the rest of the Chanlers, who have not relished their relative, the Sheriff, having plunged them into publicity.

It was learned from an authoritative source that the fair Cavalieri had accepted a certain sum, which was unnamed, from one of the Chanler family direct, and in return had agreed to remain abroad.

To do this she has had to break all her contracts calling for operatic and concert performances in this country during the present season. The American learned that she had already attended to this end of the matter by blithely disregarding engagements, and maintaining complete silence to the frantic appeals of persons with whom she had signed for appearance.

She was to have appeared in concert about thirty times throughout the country, and for this her price would have been at least $500 a concert, or $15,000. From these two musical sources she would have earned in the neighborhood of $25,000.

"When Cavalieri agreed with the member of the Chanler family with whom she did business, to stay away from America, it was only on condition that she should receive what might have earned," so our informant says. "She showed her contracts and was paid exactly the sum they called for. It was not any of Bob Chanler's money, understand—he probably didn't know about the deal. But the sum paid it was a good-sized one—came from one of his near relatives."

The last heard of Cavalieri was when she announced in Paris a couple of weeks ago that she still ain't going to sing "Thais" in the French capital.

SIDNEY CROSSING.

Nov. 14th.—The Ladies' Aid of Centenary church gave one of the most successful "Chicken Teas" held here for many years on Tuesday evening last. The tables which were set in the new dining hall were temptingly laden with no abundance of good things for which the Centenary ladies are noted. Mr. Henry Pringle, of Belleville, addressed the chair, while Miss Jessie White, of Belleville, who has recently returned from a trip through Scotland, gave some splendid Scotch selections in her own inimitable style, which were thoroughly enjoyed. The choir—Miss Goldsmith and Mr. Roberts, also little Misses Terwilliger and Gardiner, with Rev. Mr. Cooke, of Walbridge, helped to make the program an excellent one. The proceeds exceeded $115.00. Mrs. D. Thrasher, the president, with her members, deserve great praise for the success that has crowned their efforts.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Montreal Gazette, in commenting upon Sir Wilfrid's letter to La Presse, re naval policy, says "Be Honest." Why, dear Gazette, ask an impossibility?

"The wealth and beauty of the East," says the Associated Press of Saturday, "streamed through New Haven to Yale field." Mouth, perhaps, but beauty NO! To our positive knowledge she worked all day making crabapple jell and never left the house until 8 p.m.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared in his letter to La Presse, in which he attempted to explain his naval policy, that "I do not believe that I am at the head of Canada for my personal satisfaction. My duty is to work for a strong and respected country." That is to see his "day dream" fulfilled: "The independence of Canada."

Social & Personal

Mr. George Dulmage's condition today was about the same.

Mr. George Brough, who has been ill for some time, was to-day removed to the hospital in an ambulance.

Miss K. Musgrove, who has spent the past two months in town, returned to her home in Picton to-day.

Miss Potter, of Trenton, spent Sunday with her friend, Miss Mabel Jeffery.

A number from here are to attend the Epworth League Convention in Belleville, on Tuesday.

Rev. Mr. Tonkin, of West Huntingdon, preached from the pulpit at Asbury Church, yesterday afternoon.

Rev. Rural Dean Beamish will be to Kingston to attend the last quarterly committee meetings of the diocese of Ontario.

Mr. Richard Dunseberry, who is designated as the iron king of the city, was this morning taken ill upon the street. He was conveyed to his home in conveyance. His condition is not serious.

Working Women

HERE IS A HELPING HAND—A NEWTON WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

You know how it is yourself—when you are tired out, perhaps a little run down, and hardly able to drag around—life is a burden, you are irritable, nervous, depressed, and every task seems like a mountain.

Miss Katherine Burns, Newton, Mass., says: "About six months ago I was in a run-down condition and my blood was very poor. I had taken several medicines prescribed by physicians, but they seemed to do me no good. Finally I read an advertisement and found the Red Bottle I noticed a great improvement. I have taken six bottles and now I feel as well as ever, and I would unhesitatingly recommend it as being a good tonic to build them up and make them strong." (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

We want to ask every woman who finds herself in this condition to try Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, with the understanding that they money will be refunded to them if it does not help them.

We know Vinol will create an appetite and digestion make pure, rich, red blood and in this way build up and strengthen the wisdom, overwhelming nervous system. You take no chance. Try it. J. S. McKown.

MINOR LOCALS

Yesterday afternoon the funeral of the late Mrs. James Walt took place from the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. James A. Zufelt, who resides on Lambs Street. Many were present at the obsequies. Services at the house were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Bigshop, pastor of Bridge Street Church. Interment took place at the Belleville cemetery. The bearers were old friends of the deceased. A number of floral designs were placed upon the casket by relatives and friends.

The Salvation Army here will start four days of special services, commencing on Saturday night. The services on Saturday and Sunday will be conducted by Staff Captain Barr, the new Chancellor for this Province. On Monday evening the Brigadier and Mrs. Hargreaves, provincial commanders, will conduct special services in the citadel, and on Tuesday evening Colonel Mapp, second in command in Canada, will lecture on "A World Wide Salvation Army." McBride Cannot Attend.

Toronto, Nov. 22.—Sir James Whitney yesterday received a letter from Premier McBride of British Columbia stating that it would not be possible for him to attend the interprovincial conference at Ottawa on Dec. 5, owing to the early opening of the Legislature in that province in January. It is expected that Premier McBride will be fully represented.

It is probable that Hon. J. J. Foy will accompany Premier Whitney as the representatives of Ontario.

Boisterous Buffalo.

Winnipeg, Nov. 22.—Word has been received here that the Montana authorities have entirely changed their attitude towards the proposed hunt by Canadians of the big herds of the Pablo-Buffalo herd. These animals are striking terror throughout the Flat Bush Reserve, near Missoula, Mont., running amuck, and even tearing down buildings. Montana will be glad to have them exterminated.

Real Blood Shed.

Paris, Nov. 22.—Real blood was shed in two French duels yesterday. Count Raymond de Castellane spitting Count de L'Estrange's right arm in the first duel, and George Casella punching his little nose through Jean Marmoid's right arm in the second affair of honor. None of the participants was seriously wounded, and honor was perfectly satisfied.

Will Fight Scheme To Lay Five Piers

Executive of Property Owners Association in Session Takes Vigorous Action-Committee To Interview Council.

A meeting of the Executive of the Property Owners' Association was held last evening in Mr. J. F. Wills' office, Campbell Street, and was well attended.

A constitution and rules of order were drafted and will be presented at a subsequent meeting of the Association for approval.

After some discussion it was decided to appoint a special committee of five members to interview the Mayor and representatives of the city regarding the decision of the Railway Commission to allow five piers under the bridge proposed to be built over the river by the Canadian Northern Railway. An effort will be made to have this decision reversed. The committee will also consult and take such action as is necessary for the protection of property on the banks of the river, and especially on Front Street, from flooding.

The question of the grades of the sewers under construction was discussed.

Another matter discussed was the laying down of the outlet sewer pipes in the river at the foot of Dundas Street. The general opinion was that the pipe should be placed deeper, and properly protected so as to prevent it being carried away, and also so that the river at that point may be clear from any obstruction in order that anchor ice may have access of flow into the bay.

PROPOSED C. N. R. BRIDGE

The Board of Railway Commissioners has finally decided that they will reconsider the matter of the bridge of the C.N.R. over the river here and on Tuesday next the Board will be in the city. On that day, at 9 o'clock in the morning the Commission will hold a session in the city building for the purpose of hearing arguments for and against the placing of five piers under the bridge.

It has been suggested that a public meeting be called by the Mayor on Friday evening of the Property Owners' Association, Board of Trade and citizens generally to thrash this matter out.

COST HIM $50 TO SHIP FISH

Maskinonge at fifty dollars each are expensive eating, but the fish that T. McWain, of Deseronto, was sending out in a crate of whitefish, will not be eaten by those who expected to receive it. Instead of that McWain was fined $50 for attempting to ship the fish. McWain is a fish buyer at Deseronto, and shipped a box of whitefish through Toronto. Henry Watson, fish and game overseer at the Union Station, saw the box and grew suspicious. He opened it and found, packed with the whitefish, a fine, large muskie. This was enough for him, as it is against the law to sell or ship game fish. An information was also laid against McWain, and Mr. Watson, T. Hunter, of Belleville, tried the case at Deseronto and imposed a fine of $50 and costs.

AT GRIFFIN'S

A large audience attended the show at Griffin's last night and were well repaid for venturing out in such inclement weather. Virginia Goodwin and Co. in their clever farce comedy, "Taming a Title," drew forth many laughs. The story revolves around the troubles of a rich American heiress, daughter of a Chicago meat packer, who marries foreign nobility to secure a title. Miss Goodwin, who cleverly portrays the part of the misguided heiress, is ably supported by James T. Malone as the count, and Miss Grace Honore as the chic little maid. This is a clever sketch, well acted and well written.

A novelty in a musical act is offered by John H. Chambers, who gives an imitation of a bass saxophone solo on a tuba horn. His singing of "In Dear Old Tennessee," illustrated, called forth merited applause.

There will be a pie eating contest on Wednesday evening and a genuine treat is in store for all those who attend this popular theatre.

Balfour and The Lords

In the speech delivered by Mr. Balfour at Nottingham on the 17th inst. he expressed his regret that the conference between the Government and leaders of the Opposition upon the question of depriving the House of Lords of the veto power had resulted in failure, adding: "I am perfectly certain that we should have been regarded as traitors to our cause had we gone further than we did in the direction of that peace and good-will between the parties which, I readily admit, our radical co-conferees were anxious to advance."

He next forshowed what the policy of the Unionists was upon this question, declaring:

"That a Second Chamber was indispensable, but hereditary qualifications for membership in it must go. It must be greatly reduced in numbers. Its members should include persons qualified by distinguished public service, as well as a section elected by the peers, but half the chamber should be appointed by external machinery, election or otherwise."

"The present Government, he declared, talked as if it meant to destroy the British constitution in obedience to the British democracy. Nothing of the kind. It was going to destroy its power to the American subscribers to the Irish party. Were they, he asked, going to allow the constitution to be shattered at the bidding of men who, however sincere their convictions, did not possess even British citizenship? If so, Great Britain would cease to be a self-governing country."

We might well ask the question, what would the statesmen of the United States say if England or Canada were not only to permit, but encourage, emissaries from the South to seek, in any form or shape in this agitation to dismember the Union now existing of the different States? Many yet live who remember the frenzied denunciation of the people of the North, because a few people in Canada expressed sympathy with the South. Even this nearly led to war, though some 40,000 Canadians joined the Northern army it is the struggle to preserve the Union intact. Mr. Balfour is right; it is Redmond and Yankee money the Unionists of the Empire will have to fight.

Balfour Tariff Reform

There is to be no misunderstanding as to the stand the Unionists put on the question of Tariff Reform at the coming elections in England. Whatever other question that may agitate the electors, this question will be among the issues to be tried.

In a forcible speech made by him at Nottingham on the 17th inst., Mr. Balfour declared that

"Tariff Reform was still the foremost plank of the Unionist platform. He pledged himself that it would not increase the cost of living to the workingman. If there were such an increase he pledged his party to reduce the indirect taxation on tea, sugar, etc., proportionately.

"A two shilling duty on foreign wheat alone, he pointed out, must extend those great fields which are a best supply to an unlimited amount, which were largely situated within the Empire, from which wheat would come in free, and would come in freer and cheaper the more the extension of agriculture in those vast wheat producing fields was encouraged.

"If I turn to the self-governing portions of the Empire," he said, "here are three no lessons to be learned as to the imminent and pressing necessity for fiscal reform? I say you are trying the self-governing sister States of the Empire too high when you desire indefinitely making any response to the preference which they so generously and gladly gave to the Mother Country. Canada is naturally, necessarily, and highly making its own arrangements utterly irrespective of our Foreign Office or Board of Trade with this or that foreign country. How could she do otherwise? We refuse to have anything to do in the way of reciprocity with her. Naturally, while she maintains steadily her desire for Imperial Preference, she is bound, therefore, to make treaties which may hamper the future of fiscal union among the different parts of the Empire, and that increased free trade from one end of his Majesty's dominions to the other which is the ideal of the fiscal reformer."

There is no mistaking this language. The question is put fairly and squarely. Yet we find in Canada, the leading Liberal organ of the Government not only throwing cold water upon a proposition so vital to the interests of Canadian farmers, but actually supporting the English Free Traders in their opposition to the policy of reciprocal trade with Canada and other portions of the Empire. This, too, in the face of the declaration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1900, when asking the support of the electors, that if, he returned to power, would send a delegate to England to demand a preference in the English market of lower duties upon articles the product of Canada, when exported to Great Britain.

That upon such a question Sir Wilfrid should prove recreant, no one who has watched his career will be surprised, but that he should be able to drag his followers through the same quagmire of inconsistency, people not knowing them will wonder.

LITTLE JOHNNY WORKED HIS DAD

But The Third Trip To Woodshed Proves Painful To Boy

WELL SPANKED

Son's RomanceTwice Made Mr. Elder Give Up--But The Third Time--!

WHITE HORSE, N.J., Nov. 21.—Johnny Elder, eleven years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Elder, of this place, has been envied by the boys in this neighborhood for the last few months because of the money he received when two supposed attempts were made to kidnap him and owing to the large amounts of money he was able to exhibit. In fact, "Johnny" has been a regular chieftain among the White Horse youths of late, on the same age, but now the tables are turned because of several severe spankings and public knowledge of the fact that he successfully "kidnapped" himself on both occasions. He was making a third effort to make his family believe he was in the hands of bandits or Black Handers when he was discovered.

About six months ago "Johnny" disappeared and his father found this note pinned to the front door of his home:

"We have kidnap you boy John and will kil him if yer dount put fifty dollars in th' back shed for us to-night."

Mr. Elder was so badly frightened that he believed the best policy to pursue was to leave the money in the shed and keep the affair to himself until the kids were caught. He even afraidto go near the shed after he left the money there, thinking, perhaps, the presence of Mr. Elder in the kidnappers and prevent the return of his son. He found the money gone next morning and a few days later "Johnny" turned up with a tale that would have made Desmond Dick blush.

Mr. Elder believed the story, which was that he was caught and carried away by three gianlike men who tortured him, threatened to burn him to the stake and then slid him to the limb of a great tree over night. The boy was unable to tell just where he had been kept as he was given a description of the alleged kidnappers. He found himself a hero and was delighted at the attention he received both by relatives and the boys and girls of the neighborhood. Time disappeared two months later and the father again found a roughly penned note pinned to the door. In the note the amount asked was $25. The money was left in the shed and "Johnny" put in an appearance the next morning after leaving a little suspicious, although the boy was unaware of it.

The youngster decided it was time for a third kidnapping and disappeared, after leaving another note for his father. Mr. Elder consulted with Chief James Jackson and the two secreted themselves in the shed where the money was supposed to have been left. Just before dawn a little form entered the shed, which is a sort of combination shed, which is a sort of combination structure. It was "Johnny," and he was then made a captive. He confessed that he had been kidnapping himself and that he had saved much of the money his father had left for the kidnappers, intending to use it to go West where he could "fight Indians." Johnny now takes his meals standing up.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS.

It is generally anticipated that Mr. Asquith will announce the decision of the King to dissolve Parliament at the earliest possible moment; that the people may give their verdict in the issue of the veto. When the Commons is dissolution occurs, Mr. J. E. Watson, the London correspondent of the Globe, Toronto, whose letters on the civil situation have given evidence that he is exceedingly well informed and closely in touch with affairs at Westminster, will send a summary of the situation by cable daily for the information of readers of the Globe in Canada.

So perfect an insulator is dry air that it takes 10,000 volts of electricity to leap a gap of an inch.

SITUATION BAFFLES POLITICAL PROPHETS

Difficult To Estimate Chances of Parties In England

FROM PEERS TO PEOPLE

As The Moment The Liberals Seem To Be In The Position of Favorites.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—With a general election immediately imminent one naturally tries to size up the political situation. To say that that situation is complex is to make a remark which would have been applicable to political affairs in Great Britain at any time within the last fifteen months or so. But, at the present moment, the complexity of the situation is such as to well nigh baffle the most astute of political prophets. During the last few days, event has succeeded event with a rapidity almost bewildering. We have seen the veto conference dissolved, we have had the Premier's statement in the House of Commons, we have seen Lord Rosebery's resolutions for the reform of the Upper House passed by the Peers, and we have had a fighting speech, which combines singular subtlety with its tone of defiance from Mr. Balfour at Nottingham. The question that interests us all is what does all this portend?

At the moment the Liberals seem to occupy the position of favorites in the fight which must ensue shortly after the dissolution of Parliament the week after next. They have afforded their adversaries little room for the opportunity of a conference, which was an act of special grace. Rightly or wrongly the breakdown of that conference is laid at their adversaries' door. They are appealing from an oligarchy to the people—from the Peers to the people.

Moreover, the circumstances this in their favor—the agitation against the Lloyd George budget, largely no doubt, fictitious, has by this time almost entirely subsided. The budget is working smoothly, enough for the most part, and in such cases the opposition continues to manifest its hostility to the filling up of the forms which it entails such opposition has come to be regarded as more or less formality. The clauses imposing the land tax have been found far more burdensome in practice while those dealing with licensing have undoubtedly resulted in a diminution in the consumption of alcoholic liquors and presumably in drunkenness.

At the same time it is undeniable that the factics adopted by the Unionist party have been of the cleverest. They have taken an early opportunity of declaring that the veto conference came to nought owing to the extreme demands of the Liberals. Mr. Balfour himself has stated that, if they had accepted the Liberals demands, they would have "betrayed their cause"—by which expression he meant that they would be the cause of unionism as opposed to Home Rule. This statement, it is safe to predict, will act as a touchstone of Unionist sentiment throughout the country. For there has been an uneasy feeling in England for some months past that Home Rule, in one way or another, is to be the result of not a few ardent Unionists were openly accusing their representatives at the veto conference of having deliberately thrown into their enemies' hand.

And again, there is undoubtedly a feeling in the country that the Liberals have tried to force the hand of the King. The broadly constitutional grounds there is something to be said against the idea of the Government asking for the creation by His Majesty the creation of a huge number of peers, merely in order to swamp the Upper House. Moreover, in the reign of King William IV. the monarch's assent was certainly obtained to the creation of a sufficient number of peers to carry the Reform bill, but the number needed, however was infinitely smaller than that at present in contemplation, and, as the peers knew very well, King William was never called upon to make use of his power. But the creation then contemplated would have been for the specific purpose, namely, the carrying of the Reform bill, whereas the 500 odd peers which the Liberal now wish to see created would be called into being simply in order to put an end to the effective control over legislation which the Upper House at present possesses, but the King should have fair play is the unanimous wish of his subjects.

It would be idle, too, to ignore the fact that Mr. Asquith, in his latest speech; Lord Rosebery, in his resolutions, and Mr. Austen Chamberlain, in his resolutions which he is to propose at the Liberal-Unionist conference, to be held next week, have practically all advocated the abolition of the veto power of the House of Lords in no niggardly spirit. It is worth while to point out—for Canadians are apt to overlook the fact—that, within the Liberal party there are thousands of men who wish to see the Lords reformed, but yet are most unwilling that their power of veto should be abolished. How far the resolutions of the Unionist leaders above mentioned will satisfy these moderate Liberals remains, of course, to be seen. But it is right to emphasize the fact that many of them are desirous not of ending, but of mending, the House of Lords.

The ...Veiled Lady...

...And by the stricken man, whose blood was welling from a half-healed scar, which he gained in the dug-out on the Plate, Harold Durnsford knelt, sobbing, "Maxwell, I cannot fight the man who saved my sister's life. Oh! this is hor-rible, horrible."

He caught Seaton's cold glance fixed on him with the deadly glance of "a-waiting murder," Durnsford's Anglo-Celt nerve returned. He was a loyal brother himself.

"Seaton," he said, "I am innocent of all. I never saw that woman until I joined the yacht at Yokohama. I have never spoken to her. It was once Beaufort's secret, and is now my sorrow. God deal with me as I speak the truth. The solemn voice of Durnsford rang as if from the open grave. Beverly Seaton threw himself on a chair, and covering the face of the "Bride o' Night," now arriving from the theatres and cafes of the distant city.

Durnford in a low voice, communed with Maxwell: "Shall I go or stay? You are the only man who knows I am."

"Here, Durnsford," bright-eyed Maxwell answered almost fondly, "you can rise above the mere self-interest of night. Seal your lips. Hasten for your life to the yacht. Make Beaufort sail at once. We will think of all here. Don't be—" but with an instant. The yacht needs no customs formalities. If she s away before morning, you will death are in our hands alone. Be ruled. Be guided for your darling sister is my promised wife. I will keep guard over your honor as if it were my own.

"Now, Durnsford," he continued, "you may also save your sister's future happiness. I implore you. Life and death are in your hands alone. Be ruled. Be guided for your darling sister is my promised wife. I will keep guard over your honor as if it were my own.

Durnsford bowed his head gravely and went slowly to the yacht. Still Maxwell silently wrung his hand. "I will control events, Durnsford," said his brother. "Be a month. Beaufort, poor fool-ish boy, picked up that beautiful fiend ignorantly. This is a crowning calamity. But I am the real victim. Now go, my brother," said the gallant soldier, who sadly paced on once Seaton, who was slowly whispering: "One of us must die. Which one?"

Silence reigned, and for a minute or two words craftily explained all to the astounded Boniface. A cold rain was falling as his carriage rolled away. "Twenty-five dollars," the Englishman cried, "if you can make the wharf in an hour." The coachman lashed his tired team.

Beverly Seaton, this face turned to Jones watched over the pallid dark face. Jones knew he was infinite pity. He stepped and laid his hand in reverence on Seaton's brow. "It matters not, my only human being who can share my secret. I had at last he understood the un-old secret of this "Bride o' Night" love it: tell me the whole truth!" In a few words of bitter self-scorn, and self-Seaton talked in wh spers by the side of the almost plateless Gordon. It was a night of woe.

As they unravelled the shadowed past, with its sacrifices and its despair, the first Lieut-shire Witch drove swiftly through the gate of the tenth of a rising gale. For Harold Durnsford's mission was never pitched.

A wretched woman through her blinding tears, saw from the gate Jones's motion mast of the "Ci-d Rose." She packed around by. It was adorned with the lights, which shone on her distorted husband, rugging at death's door, and the heart-broken brother of her youth. She dared not ask herself, "Is love worth all this?"

Forty days later, Maxwell and Durnford read the significant words of a telegram: "Arrived at Port Said, Egypt. Australia today. I will for Panama d ect. Harold all my property there is Pay for mail steamer." "Beaufort." "Beaufort." And so she was gone a last the fatal siren. Murder was balked for once.

RED REVOLTS.

About Portugal and Its Predecessors in Insurrection.

Dramatic indeed was the sudden-ness with which the revolution sprang up in Portugal. On Monday, October 3rd, everything was, apparently, tranquil; on Tuesday there was fighting in the streets, a fleet was threatening the palace, lines of communication were cut, and King Manuel had to flee his palace.

They were terrible—the events which pilfered King Manuel on the throne. Less than three years ago, On February 1st, 1908, King Carlos, while driving in an open carriage with the Queen, the Crown Prince and Prince Manuel, was attacked by a band of assassins. In spite of the heroic efforts of the queen, who grappled with one of the murderers, the king and the crown prince were shot dead, and Prince Manuel was wounded.

This outrage was planned in a cafe, and the object of the conspirators was to exterminate the entire royal family.

King Carlos is believed to have received a warning which he disregarded.

About seven in the evening of June 10th, 1908, the majority of the 6th and 7th Regiments of the Servian army decided to change an end of the Obrenovics dynasty. And in the first hours of the following morning a tragedy was enacted within the palace at Belgrade that shook the world with horror. The door was blown open by dynamite, and, in the explosion, Nanuchetch, the king's traitorous aide-de-camp, was killed. The king and queen were found in the royal dressing-room, but were followed, and murdered. Many thirty to fifty officers entered the apartment, and every one struck a blow. The royal bodies were pierced by innumerable thrusts from bayonets and sabre, then thrown from the window to the ground below.

Since that fatal day, King Peter, of the House of Karageorgevics, has reigned over Servia—but not in peace. He is constantly the object of plots, intrigues, and conspiracies. In 1908 his throne trembled in the balance, on the hazard of a general election.

Regarding the States of South America, it would be a task to enumerate those that have not had revolutions than those that have.

One of the most remarkable revolutionary movements in history was that started in a small way in the state of Bahia, Brazil, in 1906, by a fanatic named Antonio Conselheiro. In one engagement 600 Government troops were killed; and there is no saying how far the movement might not have spread, had not the leader been killed in an sthoughful after a long siege.

And of the most extraordinary feature of this rising was the fact that women, as well as men, fought for Conselheiro. On one occasion some hundreds of these Amazons, shouting like fiends, made a sortie on the troops, and put them to rout, sparing not even the wounded.

It was in July, 1908, that the bloodless revolution known as the "Young Turk" movement was consummated, and despotism in Turkey was destroyed in one day. Government thenceforth was to be along enlightened lines; the hated Spies of the harem were set at liberty, and many other reforms inaugurated.

But equally dramatic was the sudden reinstatement of the Sultan's power, in April last year. The "Young Turk" Government was overthrown; the Committee of Liberty was scattered, and Abdul Hamid was master in his capital once more.

Fortunately, the reaction did not long maintain their ascendency. Before the end of the year 30,000 were killed in the bombardment of Constantinople, and, finally, the palace capitulated, the Sultan was deposed, and narrowly escaped execution, and the new "Young Turkish" under the new Sultan, Mahomed V., are supreme in the Turkish empire.

The Mattress.

Some one has remarked during the history of the matters. Its beginning was the collection of rags, lumps of reeds which were bound together and sewn down anywhere to form a restling-place for the weary, and a couch for the rich. It is suggested that their first mattresses were made of leaves, were derived originally from Arabic bound [illegible] To the middle ages the feather beds found favor with the wealthy, but this mattress was not used by them. Inventories of estates owned by the American colonists show that feather beds were the order of each, being made of hair. In England the mattress is less familiar, and once used, and vegetable fibres of various kinds have served their turn.

Receding China.

The mixed people, who have square chins and big lower jaws say that we Americans generally have neither will nor strength of character. Which is absurd, as any one may know who reads history. Had Gladstone had a chin, Mr. Pitt had practically no chins at all, as in the pictures and engravings and statesmen. To judge a man by his chin is as "less foolish" than to judge him by the bumps of his skull. —London Spectator.

Still Worse.

Two young ladies were talking the other day about a third who had just been engaged to a widower who plays the cornet and has four children.

"That could be worse," exclaimed one, "than four children and a cornet!"

"Nothing," said the other, "except-ing perhaps two children and a trombone."

Two and a Half Hours on Operating Table

Specialist Could Not Remove Stone in Woman's Bladder.

GIN PILLS PASSED IT

JOLIETTE, P. Q.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering from a stone in my kidneys and bladder.

He decided to operate but said the stone was too large to remove and too hard to crush, so I went home and was reconsidered by a friend to try GIN PILLS.

They relieved the pain. I took two boxes and went back to the specialist. He said the stone was smaller but he could not remove it although he tried for two hours and a half. I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS, and to my great surprise and joy, I passed the stone.

GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did me so much good, I will recommend them at the rest of my life".

BIG GAME OF THE SEA

DESCRIPTION OF WHALE HUNT OFF SHETLAND ISLANDS.

Norwegians Have Established Stations and Four Hundred Giants Fall Victims to Them Every Season—Every Part of the Whale Can Be Utilized to Profit — Explosive Harpoon is Sometimes Employed.

"You cannot please everybody," is a truism, and if you manage to reconcilate the greatest number, you may fairly be said to have done your duty. That, at any rate, has been the policy of the British Government with regard to whaling off the Shetland Isles; the few would go a-whaling; the many followed herring, and the lean kine swallowed the fat—at least, so said the herring-fishers.

Opinion differs as to the method of consumption. Some hold that the delicate herring leave the water which is tainted with the blood of the whale. Others also complain of the destruction of the whale. As the sullie shrpe herds the sheep, so the whale herds the herring, they say, driving them in from the outer ocean. Whales, they declare, are always to be found on the outer edge of herring shoals. They do not explain how a whale should come to exist where no whales be—off the Yarmouth, for instance.

However, much speaking has prevailed in this instance, and a 40-mile limit has been secured to the herring-fishermen by Act of Parliament. No vessel registered in Britain may take so much as a "baby tinner" from out the sacred water.

It is the Norwegians who hunt for the whale off the Shetland Isles. Driven away from their own coasts because of the jealousy of the cod-fishers, they have gone to Scotland to incur the wrath of the herring-fishermen. But being hardy Norsemen they brave "for a' that."

Four whaling stations have been established within twenty-five miles of the Shetland coast. Leirdna Whaling Co., the Norenna Whaling Co., the Shetland Whaling Co., the Olna Firth Co., and over 400 whales on an average are captured during the season. These are from fifty to eighty feet in length.

Once secured, the whale is pure profit. From ten to thirty barrels of oil are found in the blubber, tons of good meat provide food for Norwegians, Danes, Swedes, and Japanese, or are used as manure, ground into beefmeal for feeding cattle, while the bones and offal are sent to the bone-mill to be turned into splendid manure.

Whale steak is considered by some to equal ox steak, with a finer flavor, but it is sold for a little as 10 cents per pound. But the fibrous meat is said to pack it off—flesh and bone—like the fibres of wood, and the oil and the perfume is not odorous. Only the whalers are imperious in it, or perhaps, indifferent.

The whale is their one and only concern. For this purpose they have powerfully built little vessels, about 100 feet in length and 20 feet in beam, and which are not only withstand the buffeting of the high seas, but the rude attentions of the whale. These are not always of the most desirable kind. Recently a motor whaling schooner off the Shetlands had a narrow escape, notwithstanding they were in safe defence.

The whale, maddened by the harpoon wound, charged the stern of the vessel with its head, and succeeded in so damaging it that the whaler sank in a few minutes. The entire bottom of the schooner had been crushed in. Happily the crew were able to escape in their small boat.

It is the destructiveness of the whale which constitutes the chief danger of the whaler. Sometimes the harpoon kills it outright, for inside the clever-ly contrived weapon is an explosive charge. But although it may be so damaging it that the whaler sank in a few minutes. The entire bottom of the schooner had been crushed in. Happily the crew were able to escape in their small boat.

It is the destructiveness of the whale which constitutes the chief danger of the whaler. Sometimes the harpoon kills it outright, for inside the clever-ly contrived weapon is an explosive charge. But although it may be so, the stout little cannon, which is fixed in the bow of the whaler, is often fired, the whale dies at once. But in the majority of cases it is in the conditions of hunting make it so.

Directly the whale has been harpooned the 40-mile limit. The first business of her crew is to attach a whale. The lad in the crow's nest is the most important.

"Whales in sight!" is his first announcement cry, and down below all is activity. Harpoons heads for the spot where the spouts were seen. In the meantime, the whales have disappeared. They only come up to breathe, and, having taken their fill, they dive below again. But in time they must repeat the operation, and then the experienced eye on the direction the whales have taken enables the whaler to have a shot.

The difficulties of shooting are immense. Even if a whale comes within range—a distance of 50 yards or less—it may not raise himself sufficiently out of the water to give the marksman a chance.

So it happens that a promising shot may only succeed in wounding the whale. Nevertheless, the whaler has him on "a little bit of string." That consists of 350 fathoms of rope, the thickness of a man's wrist, which is attached to the harpoon.

The whale is held fast, though he has to the rope out to its fullest extent. Powerful are the struggles he will exert it in. Diving furiously, through the water, he will tow the steamer faster than her registered twelve knots. When he can be seen by the increasing weakness of the struggle for life, erty that the prey is almost exhausted, the whaler draws in the line by a few cuts with specially long lances at the fight. The whale must be pumped full of air so that he may float when killed.

Finally, the whale is secured by the tail to the bow of the ship, and the whaler is free to go after other prey.—Peggy Scott in London Graphic.

The Pianist's Vacation.

An interesting story has got into circulation concerning a famous pianiste. Unable to tear himself altogether away from his art while enjoying a rest in Switzerland, he had a piano taken to a secluded chalet in the wood, and every day went there alone to advance himself. By chance one day some one strayed into the neighborhood of the chalet, spent a pleasant hour drinking in the sounds from the closely-shuttered chalet. Next day he went again with some friends. At the end of an hour the virtuoso discovered that a big crowd was collecting his performance. At first he felt inclined to resent the intrusion on his solitude, but better thought prevailed, and during the remainder of his stay he threw open the shutters and played his very best.—London News.

The Abyssinians.

"The handsomest people in the world," said a university lecturer, "are the Abyssinians, slender, rich red, copper hued — there people who have undertaken to sing to a selection and legging in a fine art. The color of the healthy man is a black and a greenish bronze hue, of a shade often seen in statues, but generally believed not to be found in real life. These men, by the way, have the most luxuriant hair in the world, and yet never can grow more than the scantiest, scrawniest beard."

NEW HEALTH CRAZE.

"Caravans" Are Now a Smart Set Fad in England.

Travelers in England's southwestern counties can witness now the beginning of the most ingenious health movement the world has inaugurated for many years.

A "caravan"—one of those traveling house wagons such as the Englishman have been taking to more and more numerously during the last few years—is, making its slow and comfortable way along the hedge-bordered roads, stopping here and there in green hamlet or village with a free popular entertainment that brings the folk out a-gaping and sends them home again filled with wonderment and many doubts—doubts of the wisdom and even of the propriety of the show they have attended, and more doubts still of the wisdom and propriety of the live they have been so far been leading themselves.

In another year that solitary caravan will have its duplicates rumbling like leisurely fashion, all over England, and Scotland will have its own Vans, too, with Ireland following a good third, yet entitled, by all rules of enterprise, to rank first in the general movement, of which the caravan feature is but one incidental development.

The intellect, surprising as they are, even for a modern health and hygiene campaign, are rendered available largely by the stolid, conservative British mind of the promulgation of a wholly new set of the Ten Commandments—commandments of the care of personal health.

And more startling still, they are being handed down, not by any one to the people of the modern Moses of a people's salvation, but by a woman and a noblewoman at that.

The noblewoman, reverend enough herself, disclaims any divine inspiration to usurp the authority of the famous lawgiver of the Old Testament. But she unreservedly says that the time has come when somebody must do something or so, why not she?

The Viscountess Wolseley, a leader in the new leader of a people otherwise proverbially slow and conservative, has found it in a darkness equal in opacity to the fearful plague of Egypt, but a darkness due this time to a combination of ignorance and of the people's, among other remedies for clouded intellect, new sun command-ments, the sovereign remedy of water; and she is smiting us vigorously on the head—the people as ever Moses himself smote on the rock in the desert.

It was only this fall that Viscountess Helmsley, as the leader and organizer of the Women's Imperial Health Association of Great Britain, had the joy of christening the first of the picturesque train of caravans she hopes to see carrying the gospel of health throughout the land.

She did it with a bottle of water, having an intimate sense of the appropriateness, as the bottle came to splash over a front wheel of the caravan's van, the whisky started off on its peregrinations, and the good work of thousands of high-born English-women, Americans and other adornments of hundreds of the most prominent British physicians, urged it on its way.

Lady Muriel and her Imperial Women's Association are purely altruistic as well as philanthropic in their motives. They feel that they have a genuine, if curiously modern and novel, gospel to propagate, the gospel which, in a phrase, avows cleanliness to be next to godliness, and to be certainly synonymous with health.

That gospel the caravans carries, and that gospel all the succeeding caravans will carry, in its pristine purity, its apostles being up-to-date lecturers and its miracles the miracles of modern science, with moving picture shows to display them.

HE WHO WAITS.

Wooed and Won His Bride as a Poor Young Man.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

"Yes," said, Fred Livingston as he skillfully threaded the maze of tables in the hotel dining room and led his mother and cousin to a desirable place in a cool corner, "I rather pride my self on having found rooms for you here in the Cray House. They claimed they were filled to the brim, but I pleaded my purse, the ogle screamed, and they passed the trick. How do you like it, Stella?"

The girl, hair smiling at her cousin's rattling talk, was idly watching the gay scene of which she was a part.

"It's lovely, isn't it, Aunt Jo?" murmured the girl in a low tone that she might not interrupt Fred, who was ordering the meal. "I wonder if we will meet any acquaintances here."

Mrs. Livingston patted her stiffly arranged white puffs, pushed in a loose strand and twinkled her earrings with a slight toss of her head. "I trust we shall not meet any undesirable acquaintances," she said significantly.

Stella Hewitt flushed rosily, and her pretty teeth closed on her red lip.

WHO WERE YOU SMILING AT, STELLA?

"Who were you smiling at, Stella?" demanded Mrs. Livingston.

She did not reply.

Mrs. Livingston had seen, however, and so it was the very next day she gave up the rooms Fred had engaged and made a visit to a town where there would be no doubt as to who would serve the soup and where there were no dangerous attractions for the boy.

September came, and Fred went back to college, a rejected suitor. Stella was most unhappy with her aversion, but could not conceal the bitter disappointment she suffered in her son's failure to win Stella.

The girl was very gentle with the older woman, who chided her with its gratitude and coldness. At last she slipped away for a long visit to another relative of the west, while she turned her thoughts to other matters and tried to forget the failure of her cherished plans.

In March Fred suddenly married a girl of whom he had met but one or two classmates—and his college career came to an abrupt close.

Then the summer a telegram was brought to Mrs. Livingston. She read it and uttered a startled exclamation.

"Why—Stella is married!" she exclaimed.

"To whom?" asked Fred.

"She doesn't say—merely 'Will be with you during our honeymoon. Letter follows.' Really, you can't but be hasn't mentioned any one in her letters."

"Some compunction," suggested Fred a little drearily, then with more animation, "but, Mother, you remember that chap, Jim Forrest, who waited on table at Bellfly last summer—the one who saved Stella's life?"

"Yes."

"Why, he's turned out to be all sorts of a big success. He finished college, his work his way through college—but I don't care what he did so long as the labor was honest—and now he owns the coal and Forrest is a millionaire. Isn't it great?"

Mrs. Livingston flushed deeply. "It would have made a splendid match for Stella," she said regretfully. "And that's always the way! If she had taken him it would have turned out he was a hero."

"You could trust Stella to pick out the right party, Mother, you see, you scared them both off, mother. I don't believe either one of them thought of love or anything else. He was merely polite, and Stella was grateful to him. If they had been left alone it might have developed into a pretty romance, eh, Florrie?" He grinned across at his pretty little cousin.

She nodded wisely. "Poor old Stella!" she said condescendingly.

The bride Stella never came, but Stella came herself, with her husband to love—none other than big Jim Forrest himself.

"I won her as a poor man," he said proudly to Fred, "first as a waiter, and afterward I met her on the River Leaf ranch, in Wyoming, of which I am part owner. As a cowpuncher I made her love me, and I have only told the fellow that she won't have to count the pennies, and she's a dear disappointed, I do believe!"

But then who looked at Stella's happy face, with its radiant eyes and expression of perfect love and trust in her husband, felt that whatever disappointment Stella might have as to her husband's fortune, she was quite satisfied with him.

House Debate Has Begun

Mr. R. L. Borden and Sir Wilfrid Cross Swords Again—Conservative Leader Congratulates Premier on Attaining His Sixty-Ninth Birthday—First Bill Presented.

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Much interest centered around the opening debate of the House of Commons this session, and from the time of assembling until adjournment the galleries were crowded with spectators. The leader of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech was upon the counties in Dunwood and Arthabaskaville, while Mr. Borden confined himself to a discussion of the problems presented to the Premier on his recent tour of the west, and a reference to the tariff issue, combined with the reciprocity negotiations.

There were a few preliminaries, one when R. L. Borden extended to Sir Wilfrid Laurier congratulations on his attainment in good health and spirits of the age of 69 years. He was glad to know that the cares and responsibilities of office sit so lightly on the shoulders of the Premier. He hoped that if such should be Sir Wilfrid's lot in the future, he would still have strength and energy to retain the leadership of the opposition.

Sir Wilfrid, who was somewhat surprised and visibly affected, said that he was more touched than words could express. Up to the present time there had been one invariable addition to his becoming an opposition leader, the will of the people. He would when retired by the will of the people no doubt become a private citizen.

In presenting the report of his enquiry into printing bureau affairs to the House, Hon. Charles Murphy announced that later on he would move to have the report considered by a joint committee of the House and Senate.

The first bill of the session was introduced and explained by Mr. Lancaster. It is an amendment to the Railway Act, to compel the binding of imports in all cases of death by railway accidents.

In response to an enquiry by Mr. Borden concerning Federation, Mr. Aylesworth said that he believed that the order for extradition was at the moment subject either to an appeal, or that the decision was being reviewed under habeas corpus proceedings. Until such proceedings were closed, it was not likely that the evidence would be sent to Ottawa for review.

Sir Frederick Borden assured the Opposition leader that Major-General French's report would be tabled without delay.

H. B. McGiverin (Ottawa), in moving that an address be presented to His Excellency, referred to the fact that this was the first time that a member from the capital had been given this honor. As regards reciprocity, he said Canada had been a party for thirty years to discuss the question, and to come to an understanding that would be mutually advantageous to the two countries. Canada was still ready to go to Washington, but he did not think the Government of the Dominion should act promptly. The matter of the recent negotiations had been gone about as reasonable business would have done. The negotiations were re-open.

E. A. Lapointe, Kamouraska, who seconded that address, advocated a liberal commercial agreement with the United States. Turning to the navy, he said that after the expenditure of millions, the religious privilges, were bound up in the conservation of imperial supremacy. "We must not be turned from our duty," he said, "and our responsibility to the Motherland by cries from the platform of imaginary perils."

R. L. Borden, who followed for the Opposition, paid a tribute to the services rendered to Canada by Earl Grey, and deplored the absence of Mr. Fielding. The result of the fisheries case before The Hague tribunal was a matter upon which he could well congratulate the Minister of Justice.

Turning to the reciprocity negotiations he said it was only fair and right that the people of this country should be informed upon what principle the Government proposed to act. After showing that Canada purchased five hundred million dollars' worth more goods from the United States than they purchased from the Dominion during the last six years, and that Great Britain purchased over $270,000,000 more than Canada purchased from the old country, and during the same period, he asked what were the bases to be expected by a lowering of duties or by reciprocity.

After dealing at length with the investigation into the spending debts and the several discharges in connection with the printing bureau, Mr. Borden concluded by remarking that while "the mills of the gods grind slowly they grind exceeding fine" and the responsibility of the loss of the people's money would be laid upon the shoulders of the men who were to blame, namely, the Government.

Sir Wilfrid said that, whereas Mr. Borden believed that there was danger in the west of British and Canadian conection, he himself had found no trace of any such danger. Every man who came to the west had been pressed to become a Canadian and a British subject.

The Premier then reviewed the tariff negotiations to date, describing the recent conference in Ottawa as "informal pour parlers" to see if it was possible to reach a common basis on which a new policy could be based.

Sir Wilfrid touched on the bye election result with the remark that history teaches us that there are defeats more honorable than victories. That election was won, he said, by a combination of what is left of the once great Conservative party in Quebec and certain young reactionaries who were brought up in Liberal principles. That combination so dispersed with the smoke of battle had cleared away the public conscience was aroused to shame and indignation.

The law of last session had not been condemned by the electors. That bill provided for a naval service, but nowhere did it state that the service was to be created by conscription or by forced enrolment. But those who attacked the law did not say there was to be no forced enrolment and that there was to be no conscription.

Mr. Paquet: "I said that."

Mr. Monk: "I said that also."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier: "I am glad to know there are two men who oppose the naval policy who told the truth in that election, lest they were given to lie by those who assisted them."

Sir Wilfrid then quoted from a pamphlet circulated in the constituency in which the opponents of conscription were described. He said the man who wrote the pamphlet was ashamed to put his name to it, but it was circulated by the connivance of the Conservatives and the Nationalists. A member of the House of Commons in the course of the campaign had declared he had had enough of England and the English."

Hon. Mr. Foster and F. D. Monk also spoke, after which Hugh Guthrie moved the adjournment of the debate.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 22.—The Russian Empress has written the following note on the margin of the report, which M. Ogrpin sent to his Majesty at Tolstoi's death:

"I heartily deplore the death of the great writer who embodied the golden age of his talent in his creations of types of the fatherland, constituting one of the most glorious periods of Russian life. May he find in God a merciful judge."

The Douma adjourned yesterday's session out respect for Count Leo Tolstoi, though the decision to do so was reached only after a wrangle, the members of the extreme right contending the honor the memory of the Russian reformer and novelist would be a challenge the Greek Catholic church. It was asserted that the Douma was a state institution to which the church was especially protected.

It was reported here yesterday that the Holy Synod of the Greek Catholic Church will shortly review what Tolstoi's visits to the monasteries of Schamardino and Optin indicated his wish to return to the church and will raise no objection over religious ceremonies at his funeral.

The Homeward Journey.

Astapovo, Nov. 22.—A special train, bearing the body of Count Leo Tolstoi to his Yasnaya Peliana, the family estate in the Government of Tula, left here at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The countess and the other members of the family and intimates who were here when the author died Thursday, accompanied the body.

A halt for the night was made at the railway station at Gorbatchevo, and the train will arrive at Daseiks, the station near Yahnaya Peliana, early to-day. The distance from the depot to the estate is about is not great and the casket, according to Russian custom, probably will be borne to the house on the shoulders of the mourners.

Since early morning the countess had sat in the stationmaster's hut, where her husband died, with the head bowed upon the casket, and weeping. She appeared not to notice the peasants admitted to the death chamber, and quitted her position only when M. Gunzburg, the sculptor, came to take a death mask.

Leonido Pasternak, the portrayl painter, sketched the scene. This was a simple as Tolstoi could have wished. The body reposed in a plain oak coffin, at the foot of which a few wreaths of fir, emblematic of immortality, had been placed, and the platform of the railway station was covered with fir boughs, spread by the peasants of the neighborhood.

Defaced the Tablets.

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—Dr. Herman V. Hilprecht, the famous assyriologist who resigned two days ago as head of the Department of Assyriology and Semitic Philology and Archaeology at the University of Pennsylvania, in his letter of resignation openly charged that while he was away on his mission last summer, his office was broken into, his desk ransacked, and many valuable papers stolen.

The hardest blow of all, he declares, was when he discovered that the ancient tablets he dug from the mounds at Bal'bon and deposited in the University museum had been mutilated, defaced or stolen. The tablets bore the inscription upon which he had based his most famous theories.

Emperor Counselled Temperance.

Fernsbrook, Prussia, Nov. 22.—In opening the new naval academy at Mosrwick yesterday Emperor William read an address to the cadets in which he urged upon the qualifications necessary for naval officers, and later, speaking extemporaneously, made a plea for temperance on the part of the officers.

The times, the Emperor said, required ironclad men. Character was the first essential and character was founded upon strong moral and religious convictions. He admonished the cadets against excessive drinking, which he said, undermined the nerves, and the strenuous naval service of to-day required strong nerves.

Let Americans Dictate.

Calgary, Nov. 22.—At the Technical Education Commission Saturday Inspector of Schools Boyce Richardson in reply to Dr. Bryce, said that some trouble had arisen in respect of the singing of British patriotic songs in rural districts such as "Rule Britannia." Americans were in the majority in such Canadian national sits, but they arose when purely patriotic songs were sung.

"Is the singing of these songs insisted upon?" asked Hon. Mr. Armstrong.

Mr. Boyce replied that where objections were taken the songs objected to were usually dropped.

A Unique Paper.

Paris, Nov. 22.—The strangest of all newspapers is being published in Paris now. "Excelsior," with a million dollars capital, is an illustrated morning paper, and though it has "appeared" for 56 days, complete in every department, the public has not even a single copy of it. Until recently a month's working order, the daily output, as described and edited by a huge staff of men, is tossed into the furnace.

Robbed the Insane.

New York, Nov. 22.—Dr. William Mabon, superintendent of the State Hospital for the Insane on Ward's Island, testified yesterday before Commissioner Pendry of the department of accounts, in the last three years, during which he has been superintendent, 216,000 pounds of meat intended for the patients had been stolen.

Hundreds of long-standing frauds of such magnitude came to light the arrest last week of Simon Katzenstein, a refuse collector, who had the contract to remove bones and fat from Ward's Island. He is out on bail, specially charged with the theft of seven barrels of meat and chickens, which, when seized, were found to be packed on top with a layer of soup bones.

Commissioner Faulyck believes the frauds will run into much larger amounts than are shown in Supt. Mabon's estimate. He thinks they may go as high as 150,000 pounds of meat a year, or 1,400,000 pounds for three years involved.

Exhumed the Body.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 22.—Going to Grand Rapids for the purpose of securing evidence for the defence in the charge of Stanley Ketchel, murdered middleweight champion of the world, two attorneys from Springfield, Mo., together with the undertaker who had charge of the Ketchel funeral, had the section of the local Potter's Cemetery, surreptitiously exhumed the body of the dead fighter yesterday.

The action says the two men closely examined Ketchel's wound in Ketchel's breast and minutely inspected the head for other suspected wounds. The action was a violation of the state health laws.

A Martial Loss.

New York, Nov. 22.—"I can't be a soldier, and I refuse to be a nurse on the battlefield." Gladys Amy Graham, 12 years old, daughter of James Graham, a retired officer of the Second Royal Munster Fusiliers, and for 27 years a British soldier, made this statement when she arrived yesterday on the Ancher liner California, en route to Toronto, Canada. There she is to enter a convent to complete her education.

The girl traveled alone. She said her uncle, John M. Craw of Toronto, would take her to that city.

Two Accidents With Guns.

Sunbury, Pa., Nov. 22.—Reuben Forde, aged 15 years, of this place, was seriously injured while hunting just outside the city Saturday afternoon. In pulling his rifle over a fence it was accidentally discharged, the bullet entering his body one inch above his heart.

Fred Rose was severely injured Saturday by the explosion of a gun. A quantity of powder and shot struck him in the face.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 22.—Rose Bell, daughter of an Italian contractor, is seriously ill. She was struck on the head by a public school teacher, Miss Mulroy, two weeks ago, she says. She is suffering with spleneic pneumonia. Chairman Flemister of the public school board yesterday said he would investigate the case. Miss Mulroy, when questioned concerning the child's story, said she might have done it.

London, Nov. 22.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Speaking in the east end of London, Lloyd George said that the real hope for the reform of the House of Lords lies Government's ough patience and pleasure. Under that enumerated by the Land Lords' Bill the medical bill would be sent to a referendum. The Government would have none of these shams.

The Chancellor was in excellent form, his wit biting as ever. The huge hall wherein he spoke was filled with an enthusiastic crowd.

Referring to the Tories' sarcasm about Home Rule as a "dollar dictator," Lloyd-George declared that their bogey time was a German invasion. Since then, he asked, had the British aristocracy started depriving American citizens of their estates because many tottering nobles' houses.

As regard the constitutional issue no country in the world would stand for a second chamber. It was like, he said, having a horse and an electric car on the same track.

Lloyd-George declared that Conservatives that a large portion of Redmond's funds came from Canada. He claimed that, when Canada and Canadian statesmen were used as excuses for taxing bread, then Canadians were filth and kin beyond the seas. Their money was taken by force to enable Ireland to obtain the same self-government they possessed, they were called aliens tearing down the constitution of the country.

Humorously the Chancellor took his hearers to the overton dominions in search of a similar institution to the Canadian. The interviewed Australians, then engaged in a fierce struggle somewhat like the descendants of the French Bilbocrats in Louisiana, and got the reply that they had a few years ago inadvertently given away land and only stolen seven cattle, not land. They had been hanged before they had the opportunity of founding families.

Shortage of Labor.

Fort William, Nov. 22.—The ... departure of the foreign element to their native lands for the winter season and resulting shortage of laborers in Fort William, has created a difficulty for the C.P.R. freight sheds, and, ... 200 or 300 men are secured immediately, it is feared a tie-up will result. Where 600 men were engaged early in the spring, now only 300 are employed against 850 in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg have been asked to supply the men.

During the 1910 season of navigation approximately 700,000 tons of bituminous coal was unloaded at the Canadian Pacific docks, about 100,000 tons more than was ever handled by any other single dock on the continent. Several more cargoes of anthracite will be brought here before the close of the season. While the figures have not been compiled, it is known that the total receipts for the season are considerably larger than during any former year.

Grafters Jailed.

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—Two former councilmen of Pittsburg, by a decision announced yesterday in the State Supreme Court, must go to jail for accepting bribes to influence their votes as councilmen. The court sustained the convictions against M. F. Swift, jr., and A. V. Simon in the Allegheny County Court, the former for receiving $81.10 for his vote in favor of vacating a city street, and the latter for accepting a like bribe for his vote on the street ordinance, and $100 for his vote on a measure designating certain banks as depositaries for city funds.

TOWN TOPICS.

Springer Lock Coy Advancing Rapidly

Now An Industry of Which Belleville Should Feel Proud—New Addition Is Nearing Completion—Everything of Most Modern Type.

A progressive industrial establishment in this city which is well known and is even becoming more widely known in the commercial world, is the Springer Lock Manufacturing Company, which is situated on Coleman Street, just south of the lower bridge. When this concern was first established trunk locks, suit case locks, refrigerator and padlocks were the articles produced. Since Mr. Springer has become the manager, the manufacture of builders' hardware has been added. A representative of The Intelligencer this morning was taken through the establishment by Mr. Springer, and it was certainly a hive of industry. Between 60 and 70 men, the majority of whom are skilled mechanics in their line, were busily at work. Recently a considerable quantity of new machinery has been added and much more will be installed in the new addition which is rapidly being pushed to completion. The new part, which will be devoted to plate polishing and finishing, is a one-story 120x40 feet, and two storeys in height, and built in such a manner that additional storeys can be added when the increased trade demands such.

To head the different departments of the large establishment, Mr. Springer has secured the best skilled mechanics possible, and everything is being done in a most systematic manner. In the upstairs part of the new building the space will be devoted to lock-fitting and assembling together of the stock. The building extends from Coleman Street to King Street, and the company have also secured additional vacant land adjoining the premises, so as to be in a position to extend if necessary. To the north of the new addition is situated a substantial brick building, 30x20 feet, known as the japanning building, which is equipped with up-to-date appliances for doing this most important class of work. The foundry is a fine large, airy and well lighted building, being 60x90 feet, and it is also supplied with all modern appliances for turning out a high grade of material. The roof is supported by steel trusses. The buildings throughout are steam heated comfortable and commodious. Two boilers are used for this purpose. The machinery about the buildings is, however, operated by electricity and is also well lighted by electric lights.

Brass and nickel plated work is quite extensive, and this department of the work is certainly interesting to behold. It is supplied with all necessary appliances for turning out first-class work.

The establishment has at present a large trade extending over an immense area, and the prospects are that it will be considerably increased in the near future. The company at present is well filled up with orders and daily large shipments are being made.

The officers of the company are: Sir M. Bowell, President; J. F. Wills, Vice-President; W. C. Springer, Managing Director; A. D. Bird, Sec'y-Treas.; G. A. Bennett and C. J. White, Directors.

Rural Dean Beamish Pens A Second Reply

Calls Attention To Indefensible Methods of Madoc Correspondent.

TRANSUBSTANTIATION—AN ATTEMPT TO DEFINE THE INDEFINABLE.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—I desire first to call your attention to the indefensible methods of my correspondent of Madoc.

I quote from the correspondence which you can verify by reference to my files:

1. "I would like to ask the Rev. gentleman what kind of a Presence he believes in." (Note the first letter.)

2. "He asks what kind of a Presence. Can he define it?" (From my letter.)

3. "He says I asked him to define Presence. I asked him to define nothing of the kind." (From my second letter.)

Again, QUIBBLING and HEDGING be made more evident?

Again, I quote from your correspondent's second letter: "It is himself (note the elegant English; quite Irish you know) who tries to define the indefinable. He tries to limit Christ's power." I have not offered any definition of the Presence, as reference to my letter will disclose, or attempted to limit Christ's almighty power in any way.

Once more I quote from the same letter: "He tries to sweep away Transubstantiation, although IT takes place in himself every day when the very food he takes is transubstantiated into his flesh and blood by the powers of nature."

Medical science teaches us that chemical action takes place in the process of digestion. Are "transubstantiation" and "chemical action" synonymous terms? I was unprepared for such rationalism! He says: "I am not in getting 'tony' to be Catholic." Ironically he thereby explains why "Roman Catholics" have endeavored to arrogate to themselves the exclusive title of "Catholic." Has no one would dream of associating "Holy Roman" with "tony"——

Again, I quote from his second letter:

"He says the great Roman Catholic Bishop of London asked and answered the question—Why am I not a Roman Catholic. Because, thank God, I am an English Catholic!" He might as well have asked and answered the question—Why am I not a black man? Because I am a white man. What an unfortunate analogy for himself! thereby ranking all Roman Catholics as white men! He must not deal so much with his co-religionists, for even I am not prepared to say that all Roman Catholics are black men.

Your correspondent really endeavors to uphold the mediæval and quasi-metaphysical theory which is the doctrine of Transubstantiation is based, and says that it is held as the true philosophy in all the great universities of the continent of Europe. Could empty assertion be better exemplified? It is even beneath a challenge.

How can it be taught in the light of modern science and philosophical discernment? Take a concrete example. The common article of diet, table salt, or sodium chloride, has certain well-known "Accidents" or properties or characteristics such as taste, color, etc. By heating it under proper conditions it may be reduced to its constituent elements, sodium and chlorine, each with marked different "Accidents" or properties from each other and from the common salt. Sodium and chlorine in equal proportions and equal in weight to the sodium chloride employed, are the SOLE MATERIAL RESULTANT. Where is the "Substantia" of the old theory upon which the dogma of Transubstantiation rests? It is NON EST, a pure fiction! So in bread and wine, what is the "Substantia" which is supposed to become the actual flesh and blood of Christ at the Prayer of Consecration? It is unponderable and is therefore immaterial, and, if it becomes actual Body and Blood, they, too, must be immaterial.

Moreover, St. Paul in I. Cor. x. verses 26-28, refers to the Consecrated Elements as "Bread."

May I close with a reference from one whom your correspondent will allow as infallible—St. Peter?

"Whom having not seen ye love; in whom, THOUGH NOW YE SEE HIM NOT, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,

GEORGE ROSS BEAMISH.

One of the eminent fathers of ophthalmology protested that if his optician should send him an optical apparatus as poorly constructed optically as the human eye, he would send the work back. Cookery Points

Bird's Nest Pudding.
Pare and core six large, sound apples, then put them into four well buttered biscuit pan; now mix together five heaping teaspoonfuls of flour, one scant teaspoonful of salt and one cupful of milk into a smooth paste, then add the yolks of three well beaten eggs; add the whites and another cup of milk; pour this over the apples, bake one hour; serve hot with hard sauce or sweetened whipped cream flavored with lemon extract.

Peanut Cookies.
Shell and rub off the inner skin of sufficient roasted peanuts to measure one pint when chopped fine. Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter and one cupful of sugar; add three eggs, two tablespoonfuls of milk, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, the chopped nuts and sufficient flour to make a soft dough. Roll out, cut in circles and bake in a moderate oven.

Cream of Celery Soup.
To two stalks of grated celery and one cupful of boiled rice add one pint of new milk and simmer all to either grate until the celery and rice can be pressed through a sieve. Season to taste after adding one quart of milk, thickening with a little corn starch dissolved in cold water. Serve hot with toasted bread sticks.

To Whip Cream.
If the bowl of cream is kept in a pan of ice water before beating there will not be the embarrassment of seeing it come to butter when butter is the last thing desired. The cream should be very cold before it is worn begun.

FANCIES AND FACTS.

Milady Will Be Seen This Winter Wearing the "Beauty Spot."
Report says that the "beauty spot" is to be a fad of the winter—not, mind you, the artificial looking bit of black court plaster, but the genuine beauty spot, the tiny brown mole. If you haven't one be right sport—and few people have—paint it there. It is surprising what this little bit of makeup, if artistically done, can do to enhance the beauty of starry eyes, a faultless curved chin or a lovely mouth.

Persian silks and gauzes as well as plaid silk taffeta are popular for separate blouses. They are worn with fine broadcloth or dark silk suits.

The newest ideas in trimming are the fancy for fringe in widths from an inch to twelve inches in depth and lovely new designs and bandings in bead work.

This little dress can be so trimmed and changed in various ways that it really means several frocks in one. With the trimming portions and the fancy collar it becomes a dressy frock; without the trimming portions and with plain sleeves with yoke of silk it is a smart morning dress. Made with round neck and short sleeves, milady is ready for the party.

HERE AND THERE.

The Popular Hand Bag in Paisley Designs—Worsted Metering Muffs.

Hand bags are more popular than ever, and the mode now is to match the bag to the costume, or, better still, have the satchel made from a piece of the identical fabric. The latest bag expression is the paisley model mounted in green gold with gold handle ornamented with jewels.

In motoring one throws a scarf and muff of worsted knitted in heavy yarn in fancy stitch. The muff is flat and bound at openings with wide satin ribbon. The scarf is finished in the same way. The price is $20 for the set. The Mexican drawn work mesh is the latest in face veils. The patterns are not unlike those used on centerpieces and doilies. It is rather less grotesque than some of the veilings we have had lately and ranges in price from 40 cents to $1.50 a yard.

The severe, mannish, shirt waist is liked by many women. This one is adapted to silk and flannel as well as to cotton and linen fabrics. The sleeves are without fullness at the shoulders and are inserted after the manner used in making men's shirts.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes from 32 to 44 inches bust measure. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, etc., and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage, which insures more prompt delivery.

A New Negligee.
For the woman who likes red and is fond of adding picturesque garments to her wardrobe comes the chanticleer negligee jacket—a gorgeous affair in cockscomb red satin. Lace medallions are used as a border trimming, and feathered rooster heads of startlingly realistic aspect ornament the edges of the sleeves and form message adornment. The chanticleer crazy dies hard, and this aftermath suggestion of the rooster fad is certainly a strange one.

Suit Case Polish.
Some persons are surprised when they go to pack their suit cases for a journey to find them shabby or spotted, the leather dry and cracked or covered with greenish mold. They have been stored away either too near furnaces and steam pipes or in damp cellars.

All leather goods, chair seats, book covers, traveling bags, etc., must have consideration if they are to retain a fresh, attractive appearance. Shoes are preserved by the dressing on the leather. Book covers of leather or calf which are beginning to grow dry and brittle should be rubbed with a very small quantity of vaseline. If merely shabby and spotted they should be rubbed with well beaten white of egg. This should clear seals and all other leather articles. The same recipe for sole leather suit cases, which are less cleaned by using ordinary russet shoe polish.

For the Children
A Hippo Very Patiently and Quietly Waiting For His Dinner.

Above is the portrait of the largest hippopotamus in the New York zoo. He is hungry and waiting for the attendant to ring his dinner-along. You can see by his open smile that he is able to take a pretty large mouthful. In captivity the hippopotamus is fed grass and hay, bread, carrots and various other vegetables. When the keeper feeds bread the hippo simply opens his mouth and lets the man pitch the loaves into his cavernous maw.

In their native habitat Africa, hippos are sometimes found as much as fourteen feet long and nearly five feet high, but they usually are much smaller. They delight in water, living in lakes and rivers and feeding on water plants and the herbage growing near the water. They are good swimmers and divers and can remain under water eight or ten minutes.

A Roland For an Oliver.
"A Roland for an Oliver" is an expression that dates from the time of Charlemagne. Roland was a knight-errant, like the great Charles, was eight feet high. Oliver, a celebrated knight of the same time, was quite a match for him, and they agreed to test their respective strength and skill in a combat on an island in the Rhine. The contest lasted five days without the slightest advantage to either. At Roland got in a well directed blow his opponent gave him quite as good a one in return. Each of Oliver's enemies of extraordinary skill Roland was sure to match it with a counterpart quite as adroit. It was a remarkable and altogether unsettled combat, and it gave rise to the saying "a Roland for an Oliver", when a person who has attacked another receives a blow or a return fully equal to what he has given. Whatever it may be that is received, a return in kind is often called "a Roland for an Oliver."

Elephants Good Workers.
Elephants are used in every department of sawmills in Burma. In the work of piling logs they show great intelligence. One elephant will drag a log out of the water to the saw bench and place it on the skids on the table, while his mate waits at the other end, ready to take the log. During circular saw has converted the round tree into a four sided log, to lift it off the bench, place it on the ground and drag it out to the storage yard, where he puts it carefully into position, placing one log exactly on top of the other. Elephants can pile logs as high as their foreheads. When the squared logs are wanted for shipment the elephant picks out the required number and drags them down to the waterside. If it is necessary he enters the river and holds the logs in position while they are being bound together by the rattanen.

Portrait—A Game.
In the game called portrait one person sits near the room while the others choose the name of some one they all know. The person on re-entering the room has to find out the name chosen by asking questions, which must be answered only by "Yes" or "No." For instance, "Is it a man?" "Yes." "Is it a woman?" "Yes." "Is she married?" "No." "Is she tall?" "Has she fair hair?" "Has she blue eyes?" "Is she in this room?" and so on till the portrait is recognized.

Sometimes the company chooses the one who went outside to be the portrait, which naturally makes the guessing rather more difficult.

What Feet Are They?
There's a foot that's played all over our land
There's a foot that is often seen in the sand
There's a foot that crosses many a stream in a dream.
There's a foot that makes it rain or shine.
And a foot that has measured many a line.
There's a foot which makes for our feet a rest
And a foot which is heard from east to west.

Answers—Football, footprint, footstep, footboard, foot soldier, footrule, footstool, footstep.

Do You Suffer from Piles?

If so, we would ask you to enquire amongst your friends the value of Zam-Buk for this ailment. You cannot but meet with some one who has proved how excellent it is.

Mr. H. E. Hill of Sherlin, Man., writes:—"I suffered a long time with piles and tried numerous remedies, but without effect. Having tried a sample of Zam-Buk and being encouraged by the result, I persevered, using two boxes, which worked like magic, and effected a complete cure in a very short time."

Mr. James Ruddy of Killaloe, Ont., says:—"I suffered greatly from piles for pain from these—as anyone who suffers from them will know—was at most unbearable. I tried first one remedy and then another, but all without effect. Then I heard about Zam-Buk and determined to give this wonderful balm a trial. I obtained a supply and commenced with the treatment, and after a great job, after perseverance with Zam-Buk, I obtained permanent relief from the agonizing pain of the piles. Having been cured myself, I can heartily recommend the balm to all sufferers."

Zam-Buk also cures inflamed sores, ulcers, abscesses, blood poisoning, eczema, chapped hands, cold sores, chilblains, scalds, all skin ills, and all diseases. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse substitutes and imitations.

WIFE MURDERER HANGED FOR HIS CRIME AT NINE O'CLOCK THIS MORNING

Crippen's Expected Statement on The Gallows Does Not Materialize But Confession in Times Regarded as True—Body Interred in Jail Yard —Leneve Sails

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 23.—With all the mediaeval formalities of English executions, Hawley Crippen, United States doctor, was hanged this morning at nine o'clock, English time, for the murder of his common wife, Belle Elmore. Crippen made no statement on the gallows and nobody was permitted to question him regarding his confession reported in the evening Times, which paper to-day reiterates its statement that it has the confession, as outlined yesterday. Crippen died a Roman Catholic, having changed from his nonchalant position in religious matters and accepted the ministrations of Father Carey.

The priest who spent the last hours with the condemned man toward the end wouldn't discuss the reported confession, but stated that Crippen was extremely solicitous for the future of Miss Leneve and their expected offspring. He slept little last night, frequently asking the death watch the time, as it so measure every last minute on earth.

When daylight came the Jail Gorterner notified Crippen to prepare for death. He refused breakfast, and Father Carey administered the last rites. Then the solemn procession was formed. There were two official reporters, Jail Governor and Sheriff in full robes of office, Crippen and the surgeon.

The actual hanging was much the same as the Canadian execution, except that there is more ceremony. The official hangman pulled the lever and the condemned man dropped, the rope tightened, and in a few seconds the surgeon reported Crippen dead. The Jail Governor walked out and posted a notice on the jail gate that Crippen died according to law. The large crowd there awaiting the news was well handled by the police. The body will be buried in quicklime in the jail yard, just as he buried his wife, according to his confession in The Times.

It is reported that Miss Leneve sailed for New York this morning as "Miss Allen."

Crippen's confession is generally believed here.

JEOPARDIZING HOLIDAY TRADE BY EXCAVATING, MERCHANTS UP IN ARMS

Front Street Opened up For Purpose of Laying New Sewer—Merchants Make a Vigorous Protest—What Mayor Marsh Says.

Merchants doing business on Front Street are up in arms, and they have apparent'y good cause to be. This morning a gang of men was put to work to open up the street for the purpose of laying a new sewer preparatory to the laying of the permanent pavement.

This work, if continued, will seriously affect the holiday trade of the merchants, which is just beginning. Business men seen by The Intelligencer declare they won't stand for the work continuing, and unless suspended they will take drastic measures in the matter.

Former Mayor Sulman told The Intelligencer at noon that while he and Ald. Deacon were together this morning Mayor Marsh and asked his worship if the work of excavation was to continue. The Mayor replied that the sewer was going down and that they were going to be paved whether they liked it or not."

WRECK EVERY WINDOW IN ASQUITH DOMICILE

Suffragettes Attack Premier's House Doing Considerable Damage—Ten Arrests Made—Others Allowed Their Liberty.

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 23.— Early this morning during an intense fog, Suffragettes swooped down on Premier Asquith's London residence and, with a shower of bolts, wrecked every window in the place, destroying much furniture, crockery, etc., and narrowly missing seriously injuring the inmates. Ten were arrested.

Hon. Augustine Birrell, who was attacked by Suffragettes yesterday, is so lame to-day that he had to cancel all engagements.

Over one hundred and fifty women were arraigned in courts this morning but all were discharged by order of Home Secretary Churchill, except ten held for wilful damage to property and serious assault on Birrell yesterday.

7-AVIATORS-7

Alfred Moisant To Exhibit Performers In Every Hamlet.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—To-morrow morning Alfred Moisant, brother of John B. Moisant, will leave for Richmond, Va., with his aggregation of aviators, for a four-day exhibition. This troup of 6ers has been incorporated as the International Aviators, and starts out with eight flying machines and seven performers. The aviators include John B. Moisant, Charles K. Hamilton, Roland G. Garris, Rene Simon, René Barrier, Edmond Audemars and John B. Prier.

Mr. Moisant said while the tournament will be conducted more or less on the plan of a circus, it's purpose is educational. He said school children and innumerable charitable organizations in all cities will be admitted to the exhibition free of charge. He said this liberal policy is made possible by the combination of aviators under a sing'e management. In short it is expected that this aggregation of fliers will use a special train to carry machines and a corps of mechanicians.

Mr. Moisant said that he had signed contracts with aviators involving more than $500,000 and had spent something like $150,000 outside this sum. The International Aviators is incorporated with this same capital of $250,000. During the year no effort will be made to give the inhabitants of every hamlet in the United States an opportunity to see a flying exhibition. Large guarantees for holding meets will be demanded, but the fliers will go to any city where the inducements are sufficient to cover expenses.

CANADIANS IN MEXICO SAFE.

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—A. W. Donly, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Mexico, has cabled that Canadian interests and Canadian citizens there are quite safe and he doesn't see any immediate cause for alarm there. This cable, of course, has been passed under rigid Mexican censorship.

MINISTERS ASSAULTED.

Asquith and Birrell Are Roughly Handled by Suffragettes.

London, Nov. 23.—The political campaign is being waged with a ferocious almost unknown in England, both by politicians on the stump, and suffragettes on the battlefield.

The battle of Downing street, which was fought Monday afternoon, when several hundred suffragettes attempted to storm the Premier's residence, assaulted Mr. Asquith and Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, and broke many windows in the Government office, surpassed all previous spectacles of that sort. Both Mr. Asquith and several men supporters are in the police station.

Following an announcement by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons, that if he were still in power at the next session of Parliament, the Government would give facilities for the consideration of a suffrage bill, a large body of women, inflamed rather than placated by this promise, which was characterized as "nothing more nor less than an insult to the sex," left Caxton Hall in search of the Premier.

They came upon him on the way to Downing street, and immediately formed a hostile cordon around Mr. Asquith, who instantly has resorted to all kinds of subterfuges to keep himself clear of the hands of the militant women. One of them, Henrietta Williams, struck him, and he would have fared badly had not a large detachment of police come running to his rescue. The police had great difficulty in putting down the disorder.

Portugal is a Roman Catholic country, hence any measure favoring divorce would be looked upon by the church with disfavor. That that country is falling from grace is that particular is shown by the fact that the new Portuguese divorce law, described in despatches from Lisbon, provide for a dissolution of the marriage tie by mutual consent of the parties concerned. The recent revolution was rather more than political. It is upsetting the old ideas as to things social as well as governmental. This is worse than Dakota, U. S.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The commencement of opening up Front Street roadway for a new sewer at this season of the year seems to be an ill-advised procedure, particularly as it will leave the street in a most deplorable state during the time our merchants are in the midst of their holiday trade.

Wonder is that the merchants, one and all, don't rise in their might and have this street excavation stopped at once.

We are creditably informed that the tenders for this Front Street sewer never came before the Council as a whole; that the tenders were opened by Ald. Lott, chairman of Public Works, Mayor Marsh and Ald. Thompson, and the tender of Mr. Thos. Manley accepted. Is this so?

Ex-Mayor Sulman informs The Intelligencer that while he and ex-Ald. Deacon were together this morning they met Mayor Marsh, and, during a conversation about the Front Street excavation, his worship informed them that "THE SEWER WAS GOING DOWN AND THAT THE STREET WAS GOING TO BE PAVED WHETHER THEY LIKED IT OR NOT." Is this so?

WHO'S RUNNING BELLEVILLE, anyway? The Council or a select few?

Can it be true that an effort is being made to obtain authority to order NOW the material to be used in the construction of a permanent roadway? Such, we are told, is the case. The incoming Council of 1911 have the right to purchase supplies to be used during their term of office, and not a moribund Council. Why this haste?

What about that public meeting Friday night, Mayor Marsh?

FOR MAYOR, ALD. H. W. ACKERMAN.

Lake of the Woods Milling Company has cut the price of flour thirty cents a barrel. Question: Will price of bread take a tumble?

It must grieve the Suffragettes now that the English authorities refuse to make martyrs of them. Letting them go is worse punishment to them than jail.

Kingston Council refuses to go back to the one year term for Aldermen; they are now elected for three years. Know some Aldermen in Belleville who would like life seats.

By visiting the stores now and during at least some of your Christmas shopping, you will save yourself from the crush of next month. Shop in comfort now; don't wait until the last week.

Brantford First Baptist Church took fourteen inches of display space in the Saturday papers to announce the withdrawal of its Sunday evening service. To other churches we say: Go and do likewise.

Women rush from the comic to the tragic in fashion with desperate haste. Is it new, new must be the ultimate best. While the bobble skirt is enjoying the height of popularity, woman's attention is being in part distracted by the appearance of the first dinner-ling hats.

A Western Ontario weather prognosticator says: "The animals want need the extra coat to combat with the extra cold fall, which will be over about the 15th of December, from which time the mildest lot of weather for the time of year that is possible for us to have will continue until May 1st, 1911."

If the above predictions come true, it means a lighter coal bill for some of us.

BELLEVILLE BOARD OF TRADE.

The Board of Trade will meet Friday evening, the 25th instant, at 8 o'clock, in Council Chamber, City Hall. General business, and the following special features: (1) Report of Messrs. Elliott and Ketcheson on "Ontario in Great Britain." (2) J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., on "Hydro-Electric in Berlin." (3) Report of Secretary on "Associated Boards of Trade of Ontario." (4) City Publicity movement. (5) Harbour and Navigation Improvement. (6) Elections for City Council. (7) Reciprocity. A full and interesting meeting is expected.

The commencement of opening up Front Street roadway for a new sewer at this season of the year seems to be an ill-advised procedure, particularly as it will leave the street in a most deplorable state during the time our merchants are in the midst of their holiday trade.

Wonder is that the merchants, one and all, don't rise in their might and have this street excavation stopped at once.

We are creditably informed that the tenders for this Front Street sewer never came before the Council as a whole; that the tenders were opened by Ald. Lott, chairman of Public Works, Mayor Marsh and Ald. Thompson, and the tender of Mr. Thos. Manley accepted. Is this so?

Ex-Mayor Sulman informs The Intelligencer that while he and ex-Ald. Deacon were together this morning they met Mayor Marsh, and, during a conversation about the Front Street excavation, his worship informed them that "THE SEWER WAS GOING DOWN AND THAT THE STREET WAS GOING TO BE PAVED WHETHER THEY LIKED IT OR NOT." Is this so?

WHO'S RUNNING BELLEVILLE, anyway? The Council or a select few?

Can it be true that an effort is being made to obtain authority to order NOW the material to be used in the construction of a permanent roadway? Such, we are told, is the case. The incoming Council of 1911 have the right to purchase supplies to be used during their term of office, and not a moribund Council. Why this haste?

What about that public meeting Friday night, Mayor Marsh?

A Western Ontario weather prognosticator says: "The animals want need the extra coat to combat with the extra cold fall, which will be over about the 15th of December, from which time the mildest lot of weather for the time of year that is possible for us to have will continue until May 1st, 1911."

If the above predictions come true, it means a lighter coal bill for some of us.

FRONT ST. MERCHANTS ARE UP IN ARMS TODAY

Work of Opening Up Street Begins and Holiday Trade Is Interfered With--Vigorous Protest Made

Mayor Marsh, when seen by a reporter for The Intelligencer, said that the Public Works Committee accepted Mr. Manley's tender and it was desirable to have the work done as soon as possible. The contractor had twenty men at work this morning and ten or fifteen more will be added. No one will be inconvenienced more than possible. Provision is made for vehicles on either side of the excavation and pedestrians can, as usual, cross from one side of the street to the other. The work will be carried on as fast as possible, and Mr. Manley expects to have the sewer completed by December 15th. Traffic will not be impeded to any extent.

LETTER FROM MR. SULMAN.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—The storm of indignation that was raised by our merchants, in which I joined, this morning, caused by the very untimely opening up of Front Street, was surely justifiable. Front Street merchants have to spend months of their valuable time preparing for Christmas trade, and which means the outlay of large amounts of money, expended for all kinds of goods, especially suitable for this season of the year.

This is the time that we want everything done that can be done to make our places of business attractive and access to our places of business easy and pleasant.

If this sewerage work goes on, it appears to me that prospective purchasers at Christmas gifts, etc., will be denied the opportunity of properly seeing the many beautiful displays of goods. In consideration of the comfort, the convenience and respect due to our citizens, and in the interest of our merchants, I think this sewerage work might be deferred to a more convenient time.

Non Support Charge Against 2 Husbands

Ostrom, Defendant In One Accuses Wife Of Being Untrue--His Salary is $4. a Week and Board

Two cases of non-support were this was done they could possibly live contentedly together.

In answer to a question from the County Attorney, Ostrom said that at present he was earning $4 a week and his board.

Magistrate Masson decided to adjourn the case for eight days, and suggested that Ostrom make an effort to secure a home for his wife where they might live together contentedly. He was allowed his liberty upon his own bail of $100.

George Bennett, painter, of the city, was also arrested of not supporting his wife. Bennett did not appear to answer the charge, although it was proven that he had been personally served with a summons to appear. The case was adjourned until to-morrow when no doubt Bennett will appear.

SUCCESSFUL ASSEMBLY

Under the auspices of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, a successful assembly was held last evening in the Academy. Upwards of one hundred couples were in attendance and danced until an early hour this morning. An appropriate programme of music was furnished by the Belleville Orchestra, and Mr. R. J. S. Rogers, H. Ketcheson was master of ceremonies. At midnight the ladies provided a bountiful repast, after which dancing was again indulged in. The affair was both pleasant and profitable.

The Committee of Management was composed of Messrs. G. Bowen, E. Calcutt, A. Milne, G. Naylor, W. Dennis, J. Ferrah, W. Morrison and H. Bell.

WRECK SURVIVOR DEAD HERE

Mrs. Catherine Kemp, widow of the late Mr. Wm. Kemp, passed away last evening at the residence of Mrs. Latta, Frank Street, where she had been living for some time. Deceased, who was 82 years of age, was born in Ireland. For many years the deceased was a resident of Shannonville and Marysville. Mrs. Kemp and her husband were in the terrible wreck on the line of the G.T.R. which occurred near Shannonville some 35 years ago, in which a number of lives were sacrificed. Mrs. Kemp was severely scalded and her husband injured. Mrs. Kemp was subsequently appointed station agent at Marysville, which position he filled for some years. The deceased lady was a devoted member of St. Michael's church and respected by all who knew her. No family survives.

OBITUARY

REV. EDWARD COSTIGAN.

Rev. Edward Costigan died suddenly at Toronto on Monday morning. He had not been well for some weeks, and a bad cold had settled on his chest. Ten days ago he became worse, and pneumonia developed. Mr. Costigan was the assistant rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist. He was born in Lurgan, Ireland, in 1869, and came to Canada in the early nineties. He was first occupied as a lay-reader with the late Rural Dean Bliss at Petawawa. He was ordained to deacon's orders in 1892, and as priest in the following year. He next acted as missionary in charge at North Hastings for three years, and was then Rector at Deseronto for some time. He was a Mason, being a member of King Solomon Lodge. A widow and two children survive.

A team of horses belonging to Mr. Benjamin Westfall, of Canniffton, ran away on Murney street yesterday afternoon. The animals were attached to a waggon which was badly wrecked. The horses ran for some distance before they were stopped in their mad career.

Suggestive!

As an Ottawa paragraph of yesterday, explanatory of the inability of foreign Consul-Generals at Ottawa to obtain diplomatic recognition in this country ends with the observation that "Canada is still a colony of Britain." Why inject the word "still"? By so doing readers are apt to infer that the time is approaching when Canada will not be a British colony. "Canada is a colony of Britains" would have sounded better.

The other night at Peterboro a debate took place on the subject, "Should Canada Become an Independent Sovereign State?" It strikes us that the Society under whose auspices the debate took place might have found a better subject. It doesn't sound well to hear our young men arguing in favor of the independence of Canada, especially when there isn't the remotest possibility of such a thing being brought about.

We are pleased to note, however, that the negative side of the debate in Peterboro was taken by Belleville young men.

Tired of Diaz Despotism

Mexico is plainly in the throes of revolution. Directing minds are at work beyond doubt but what they can work out is the unknown factor at present. The despotism of Diaz has been continued until the nation has grown uneasy about it, and in many quarters there is a disposition to return to the old Mexican remedy of revolt.

The stress of the situation became apparent when Diaz found it well to go into the magazines of the United States to defend and justify his policy and career. He has had a press bureau hard at work in his behalf and meanwhile has run his government with a severity toward all possible rivals that is the rule with such men everywhere when in power.

It remains to be seen whether the assortment of men, good and bad, along with the usual grist of the indifferent have force enough to make head against the despot, of whom the world is beginning to learn something beside his success in running Mexico as a business machine. Some terrific reports of his course of dealing are coming to the light, and many facts indicate a restlessness on the part of his people under his yoke, even if it is locked up in his sanitary and sup ports claim on his behalf.

There is no question of the need of a firm policy in the executive branch of the Mexican government, but it ought also to be one that is free from the reproach of constant cruelty, with occasional resort to exile or worse for those who do not happen to agree with all that the monarch, called President, does. Napoleonic methods may be advisable to some extent for the Mexicans, but we will rather expect pathies with the people than with the ruler in such case.

If revolt spreads into revolution in Mexico it may be a sign of the further awakening of that country from a submission to benevolence in authority that has grown intolerable at last.

"JAPANESE MAYBRICK" CASE THING OF PAST

Mrs. Carew, Sentenced In Yokohama For Life In 1897 For the Murder of Her Husband, Released From Aylesbury Prison

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Mrs. Edith M. Carew, who was sentenced to death at Yokohama in 1897 for poisoning her husband—a sentence that was afterward commuted to penal servitude for life—has been released from Aylesbury prison.

The murder, which caused a tremendous sensation in the Far East, is known as the "Japanese Maybrick case," for it presented many points in common with the celebrated Liverpool affair.

Mr. and Mrs. Carew were well off, and moved in the best society in Yokohama. Mr. Carew was secretary and manager of the United Club of Yokohama (Mr. Rudyard Kipling's "Overseas Club.")

On October 15, 1896, he was taken ill, apparently with a liver attack, but the medical man who attended him could not account for some of the symptoms.

A local merchant made a remarkable statement a week later to the effect that his children's nurse had just told him that she had met Mrs. Carew's nursery governess, Miss Jacobs, coming out of a Japanese chemist's, and that Miss Jacobs, apparently in great distress, had said to the nurse: "I must tell the doctor of this poison. If I do not speak now it will be on my conscience all my life should Mr. Carew die."

Mrs. Carew stated in the witness box at the Supreme Court that the same day from exhaustion. On the night of this death Mrs. Carew mentioned that her husband had asked her to get him arsenic.

The medical man then refused to give a certificate, and an inquest was held on October 21 at Yokohama.

Miss Jacobs, in her evidence, stated that she bought Fowler's solution of arsenic and sugar of lead on Oct. 15.

The medical man who analyzed the contents of the victim's stomach stated that, in his opinion, Mr. Carew died from poisoning by arsenic, not administered by himself.

Mrs. Carew stated in the witness box that her husband had taken arsenic for years, that she had sent Miss Jacobs for arsenic at his request and that she only once sent for arsenic herself, and that was on the doctor's prescription.

An amazing element was then introduced into the case. Mrs. Carew spoke of a girl named Annie Luke, with whom, she said, Mr. Carew had been intimate before his marriage.

Evidence had already been given of a veiled woman calling at the house during Mr. Carew's illness while Mrs. Carew was out.

Then a series, of hysterical letters, purporting to be signed by Annie Luke, were put in. They were addressed to the coroner and to Mrs. Carew's counsel. Here is a passage from one of them:

"You will be acting on behalf of the wife of the man who was to me more than the world. Dead men tell no tales; no, nor dead women, either, for I am going to join him. . . ."

For eight long, weary years I have watched and waited—waited till I knew he would grow tired of her, that silly little fool! And then I came to him. What is the result! Ah, 'Between us, electrify Japan.'"

The writer referred to Mr. Carew as "my twin soul" and added, "As we were divided in life, we were not in death."

No trace of Annie Luke could be found. The jury found there was no direct evidence to show who administered the poison to Mr. Carew.

Five days later Mrs. Carew was tried for murder before the British consul at Yokohama. A new surprise was furnished by the production of fragments of letters from her newspaper basket, which, when sewed together, showed that a clerk in a local bank was paying Mrs. Carew regarding proceedings she was contemplating against her husband.

The letters were produced in court, and on being returned one was found to be missing. The clerk was immediately closed, and ultimately a female searcher found the letter in the dress of Mrs. Carew, who was allowed to sit beside her counsel. Mrs. Carew was then committed for trial.

On the resumption of the trial affectionate letters written by the bank clerk to Mrs. Carew were read, in which he urged her to obtain a divorce. The clerk in his evidence stated that Mrs. Carew had deceived him by alleging brutality against her husband.

Mrs. Carew was found guilty and sentenced to death, but the British Ambassador to Japan commuted the sentence to penal servitude for life. Mrs. Carew was removed to Hong Kong and subsequently to England.

CITY SEWERAGE WORK

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—Will it be too much trouble for the Treasurer to give to the press the amount of the contracts for the sewers given out by the city? The debentures issued therefor? Apparently the quantity of sewerage undertaken by the city is immense. This is to be paid for, and it becomes a necessity for the people to know how much indebtedness is being increased.

I am at present not questioning the advisability of this course pursued. I do, however, insist that the taxpayers should be informed how much indebtedness has been incurred, and if contracted for, by the present Council. This information should also, I think, be supplemented by a statement of the present amount of Belleville's assets and a list of her assets. The Council approving out many contracts involving vast sums. Do we, outside the Board of Works, apparently, know anything whatever as to what is being done. It is advisable that we, who are the taxpayers, and will have to pay, should learn our true position. If this cannot be ascertained from the Auditors, then let us get at once interested accountants, who will make a correct statement. Gravel pits and the work done was most satisfactory to the ratepayers.

I understood that the City Council voted one item of $30,000 for a school that have been satisfied with $20,000. At all events, whether this is the case or not, $30,000 is an enormous sum, and I trust the Board will make their expenditure much less than the sum voted. I am

Yours truly,

Belleville Debaters Win Against Peterboro Supporters of Resolution That It Is Time This Dominion Became An Indenpedent Sovereign State

The Peterboro Examiner gives the following synopsis of the addresses given by Messrs. Chas. Dolan and Jas. Winn, of this city, on the negative side of a debate held in the town hall day evening, the subject of which was "Resolved, that the time has come when Canada should become an independent nation."

"Mr. Dolan, speaking on the negative, stated his opinion of the case. He thanked the people for the warm hospitality they had shown to him and his partner and stated that he hoped the time would come in the near future when the Belleville people would get a chance to reciprocate. He also brought out many useful points. He asked the question, 'Are we not prospering under the present conditions?' 'Our exports are increasing,' said the speaker, 'they have increased 35 p.c. in the past year, and $1,000,000 over the corresponding month for last year. The immigrants coming to Canada bring lots of money. Look at Canada as a rich country! Why is she becoming a complete network of railways. The railways are increasing in the west and there are the possibilities of the west are increasing. 'If we become independent,' continued the speaker, 'we must look out for our own protection. Then look at the east. Look at the east-coast line we have to protect; the extensive boundary line with 40,000 men to defend and bring it. Look at the cost of building a navy and keeping its expenses paid. We can see our necessity now as we place it, we see t to, for the protection of our defences, but if we were independent we would have to spend our money on deefnces, and it would seem right to spend money on defences. which we are now using for the development of manufactories and the bettering of our condition. When we think that Great Britain's colonies are at in all parts of the world, we should feel proud to be a part of that great family. Then last, but not least, the question is to be considered. It costs not only two cents to send a letter to the

Mr. Charles Gregory, who resides on McDonald's Corners, reported to the police that yesterday a man named James Neville, who was boarding at Gregory's, left his place and took away with him three five-dollar bills and an overcoat belonging to Gregory. Neville spoke of a girl named Annie Luke, with whom, she said, Mr. Carew had been intimate before his marriage.

Be On Your Guard Against Imitations Of "PROGRESSO" Overcoats

The successful article is always imitated.
"PROGRESSO" is the most successful creation in Overcoats ever introduced into Canada.
Its distinctive features are so unique and valuable that they have been patented.

The ...Veiled Lady...

"He wished to spare me. He thought of me at the last. Ah," mourned Maxwell, as he walked to the window to hide the rising tears. "One woman's work. How shall we tell Gordon?"

The message from the dead was soon at hand. It was dated only two days before the suicide. His hand had firmly penned these lines:

"Dearest Maxwell—I have left Seaton Hall to you. Gordon does not need it. He is as unhappy as I am. I leave it to you, as I am the lair of that unlucky race. Even in my lonely death I am not ashamed to bid you see me laid by my father and my dear mother. Colonel Lomax has my full instructions. I wrote him last night as strangers can-not interfere with my last wishes. He will write you all. Take care of the old veteran as a trust from me. God pity and pardon one poor betrayed and erring soul. If you ever meet her tell her it was my last word to you, that I have forgiven all. But the name is safe, not openly dishonored. I have destroyed all the proofs of a certain deed. I go out into the shadow land from an unhappy world, with neither fear, hope nor regret. I had sworn in my heart that one of us must die. I will have kept my word when you read this. May your own bright manly presence bring back the luck to Seaton Hall. The Fates are against us. Love yours dainty Sanfield Rose. You are worthy of each other. Dear old Jack Gordon knows my wish-heart now. I did him unwittingly an injustice. I have never wanted to live since I knew she was the woman known far and wide as the masked Venus. Thanks for your brotherly kindness. I think of you fondly at the very last. Look out for my colored people."

There was not a tremor in the clear characters of the signature, "Beverly Seaton."

A gallant martyr, defeated in life's battle at every turn, and yet "a hero in the strife." He saved her, the woman whom he could neither guide nor control. She was spared to the hazard for of the only man on earth she ever feared. Dear dead brother, Beverly.

"How old Beverly looks. How worn. And in desperation he drank deeply of a dark flask, labelled 'Cognac Superieure.' "If I can sleep, I may forget Beverly," said this modern Heloise-this nineteenth century Messalina knew not. Like her dim Parisian prototype, that "far away the brother of her heart" was sleeping under the long grasses. The dim future hovered before her.

"Onward. Anywhere," she muttered, "only far from America. But they will follow me?" The shuddered. No, Beverly will not, and—and—Gordon is a Kentuckian." She burst into a wild tears.

CHAPTER XV.

Rosy chains they were, these lightly worn bonds, tying the ex-officer of the United States Army, to the white cliffs of Albion; for the family party had so long ago shaken the dust of irreligious San Francisco from their baby British sandals.

"By Gad, Harold" said stalwart Robert Dursnefel, when he learned of the untimely death of Beverly Seaton, "Let's go home. Let's leave this dreadful land. By Heavens. I'll do something. I'll see the British Consul. I'll—I'll—write a letter to the Times. I'll—By Gad," he said, with a lucid interval, "I'll go to the Duke and look the whole party. (Maxwell and all) for home

"You dear old papa," said Rose, as she clung to him,—with—he made a wild dive for his mackintosh and tightly pulled sombrelle. He clung to this as the ordinance of his order—Intermediate Briton. Even as the boast-of-Rose was hurled to the front. In the guise of good knights and true, so that thirty-shilling, silk-clad javelin, Dursnefel's might have been seen to-day, after his arrival, dead or alive. It was the "property" umbrella in the Pacific. It filled the snob with awe.

It partnized the Scottish hoodlum, and awed even the barkeen. It was undeniably British.

"Mr. Jones may have a few words to say to you, dear papa," said Rose, mindful of her 'Prince Charming.'

"Ah, by Gad, Rose, you're right. Let me see. He is in the Royal forces, No, the Marines. No, the something or other." Papa Dursnefel was 'rattled.' He spoke the blushing girl to his side. "See here, Rose, I can't take his discharge! If-you must have him."

"I must, dear papa. I really must" said the glowing girl. What pape, her own officer, a staff officer. He's in the Engineers.

"God, I am glad of it," said Dursnefel, fondly reflective. He can help us run home. I know Jones, Jones & Co. and we build lots of engines, he."

"Dear papa," said Rose, "not a steam engineer. He's an Army Engineer, arts and crafts, you know," she said doubtfully.

Oh, I see. Well, we don't build forts and things. He may come in handy, though. We build shells and things, and they knock his paper fort all to pieces. Now, Rosie. Must you have this Yankee?" cried the old Britannic, who really I had Maxwell.

"Yes, papa," said the fond Rose, as she stole a kiss on her tiptoes.

Whence Does the Great English City Get Its Name?

Some remarks respecting the derivation of the word "Birmingham" have been sent into the office by a correspondent. In an old work the following appears: "Hutton's etymological knowledge is not of the most limited nature, and a common corruption is pronounced under the head our genial old gossip astray. He tells us that the 'original seems to have been Bromwych; Brom, perhaps, from Bromma, a birch, for the growth of which the soil is extremely favorable. Wych, a descent; this exactly corresponds with the declivity on which the High street to Digbeth.' Having got from Bromwych, he has to account for the 'ha.' This word being Saxon for home, he says was added, probably, under the Saxon Heptarchy. Thus the meaning of the word would be the home-on-the-descent on which broom grows. Unfortunately for this pretty theory, the old name was not Bromwycham, but Bermingham or Bermingham, and therefore the prolific nature of the soil in producing broom has nothing to do with the name at all."

A better, and doubtless the true derivation, is given by Mr. James Freeman, in a letter published in the Birmingham Gazette, September 8, 1855. He says "The word Birmingham is thoroughly Saxon in its construction that nothing short of positive historical evidence would warrant us in assigning any other than a Saxon origin to it. The final syllable, 'ham,' means a home or residence, and 'Berminges' would be a patronymic or family name meaning the Berms (from Berm, a man's name, and 'ing' or 'ung,' the young, progeny, heirs or tribe). The word inserted in this manner would signify the home or residence of the Berms; and there can be little question that this is the true meaning."

Dr. Sebastien Evans has written as follows on the word "Brummagem": "The vernacular 'Brummagem,' is a variation of the word Birmingham, which seems to have been unnecessarily puzzled etymologists. Berminghan is the spelling of Domesday, and there can be little doubt that the 'e' following the 'g' signifies that the 'g' was pronounced soft, as are frequently the case in the Midlands, in words in which the 'g' was elsewhere pronounced hard. The entire word would, therefore, be sounded as Birmijam, which, swiftly spoken, slides naturally in the mouth of a Midlander into Bremijam or 'Brummagem.' A precisely the same phenomenon presents itself in the case of the name Bagot. One branch of the family, whether of Midland origin I know not, thought fit to pronounce the 'g' soft, and called themself Bagehot, sounded Bajhot. A vast number of words were in the same way pronounced with the 'g' hard or soft, according to the dialect prevailing in the district. Thus springs are, in some parts of England, called springes, hedges, hedgings; and fifty more instances could be quoted. It is observable that the name Edgbaston presents another instance in point. Original-y Edgbaston at Egbald's tun,' or town, the 'g' being pronounced soft, as in Edgware, Middlesex, giving rise to the modern form of the word. The literal meaning of the word Birmingham is 'the homestead of the sons of Berm,' or 'Berm.'"

There are at least 140 different ways of spelling the word, declares an author of 40 years ago.

Singing Statesmen.

Dr. Macnamara, the popular English member for Camberwell, and a leading member of the Government, seldom goes down to address his constituents without being asked to oblige with a song; whilst no social gathering in his constituency is considered a complete success unless the "Doctor" is induced to give "Tom Bowling."

The new Governor-General of South Africa, Lord Gladstone, the youngest son of the great Victorian statesman, is another who has the finest tenor voice in Government circles; and his wife, who was one of the Scarnell Family, also sings beautifully. The two are always in request, wherever they go, for duets, and during the recent visit to South Africa Lord and Lady Gladstone, on more than one occasion, assisted an impromptu concert on the liner in charming fashion.

His Majesty King George, like most sailors, used to be fond of singing; and rollicking nautic songs, and certain it is no concert on shipboard is held to be considered complete with-out Prince George's contribution. The Prince of Wales, too, is distinctly musical, and everybody will remember his occasion on which he sang the famous rollicking song, "D'ye Ken John Peel" at a concert at the Royal Naval College at Osborne.

HOLMAN HUNT'S TOMB.

In "Artists' Corner" of St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

The ready consent of the authorities of St. Paul's cathedral to the interment of the ashes of Holman Hunt in "Artists' corner" has given wide satisfaction.

The place where the ashes of Holman Hunt are laid to rest is in that part of the crypt beneath the eastern extremity of the south choir aisle to which the name of "Artists' corner" has been given. Here are buried Sir Joshua Reynolds (1723-1792), founder and first president of the Royal academy; James Barry, R. A. (1741-1806), the historical painter; John Opie, R. A. (1761-1807), the portrait and historical painter; Benjamin West, second president of the Royal academy (1738-1820), one of the original Royal academicians; Henry Fuseli, R. A. (1741, 1825); George Dawe, R. A. (1781-1829); Sir Thomas Lawrence, third president of the Royal academy (1769-1830); J. M. W. Turner (1775-1851); Sir Edwin Landseer, R. A. (1802-1873); George Cruikshank (1792-1878); Lord Leighton (1830-1896), seventh president of the Royal academy, and Sir John Millais (1829-1896), eighth president of the Royal academy.

In addition to the foregoing painters the crypt contains the remains of the sculptors John H. Foley, R. A. (1818-1874), and Sir J. Edgar Boehm, R. A. (1824-1890), and of the architects Robert Myine, F. R. S. (1724-1811), and George Dance, R. A. (1741-1825).

The grave of Holman Hunt is at the foot of that of Turner and as near as possible to that of Millais. It is immediately beneath Gilbert's monument of Randolph Caldecott.—London News.

Waterproof Boots For Hunters.

The best waterproofing I have ever used is deer's tallow, say a pint of it, with an ounce of beeswax and one to two ounces of rubber, writes Amos Barbara in Recreation. Chip up the rubber (a boot heel is best) piece by piece the size of a grain of wheat and add to the hot tallow. If deer tallow cannot be had, take mutton tallow. Heat it till all the ingredients are thoroughly mixed together and then apply hot to the boot and rub down into the seams well. A small brush will help in doing this. If the boot is warm and pliable at the time of waterproofing the job will be that much more thoroughly done. Apply this dressing to the leather of old shoe and then put over it the new. Heat in the stove, and you have an ideal easy running on the feet in dry or broady going and upland shooting. Any other legging will do, and do the exit handy for blinding it and comes down squarely over the top of the shoe to keep out dirt and weedy trash will do as well.

Cold Railway Cars Abread.

"In Prussia," says the Railway Age Gazette, "a passenger was directed to a car where the heating apparatus was frozen up and during the whole journey didn't get thawed out. He caught cold and brought suit for his doctor's bills. The court decided that not only had he failed to prove that his illness was due to the lack of heat in the car, but declared that the passenger had no claim to have the car heated at all, and on appeal this decision was affirmed. This is probably a continuation of the legal ruling which existed not so long ago on European railways, when cars were either not heated at all or so imperfectly that passengers were expected to carry wraps and rugs enough to keep themselves comfortable, as the fancy were in a stagecoach."

PUNCH IS DISAPPEARING

MUNCHBACK AND HIS SPOUSE NOT SO FREQUENT NOW.

The Merry Scoundrel Whose Habit of Avoiding His Troubles by Killing Mrs Gelder Is Rendered Him to Children Is Still Seen About in London Streets—Two Men Run the Show—Reward Is in Coppers.

About some of the hysterets of London; those not so frequently as in past years, we may still see the travelling exhibition, or show which goes by the name of Punch and Judy—an older name for it was Punchinello—this puppet show, for such it is, being the last remaining of several which used to draw together crowds by day or night. Illustrations show an evening performance of Punch and Judy lit up by a paraffine lamp, but this is rather uncommon, except, indeed, at some country fair, where the show is one of the popular exhibitions. Two persons, mostly both men, take the Punch and Judy show about, living upon the chance contributions they get from schoolmockers, seldom obtaining silver coins.

There is a story, however, that a rich lady living in a London suburb was so fond of seeing Punch and Judy that if she heard at a distance the funny "root-toot" or other sounds announcing its approach she sent one servant to tell the men they might perform in front of her house. When they had finished the lady often gave them food, always a handsome present in money.

It was the business of one man to move the figures and carry on a talk between them, changing his voice as best he could, and some of the Punch and Judy showmen have been rather clever at this. Punch is the leading character, of course, and, as the writer of a quaint poem upon this street amusement remarks, if he is not animated he is animating. Certainly the doings of Punch always cause excitement among the juvenile portion of the onlookers, one of his peculiarities being his rapid changes from kisses to slaps. Standing in front of the other man blows the wooden pipes or mouth organ between the short spells, perhaps while it is going on he keeps the children at a proper distance and collects what money the crowd happens to give him.

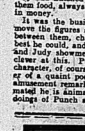
Then there is the dog, a live performer, for Toby generally appears on the scene, though sometimes we see a Punch and Judy show which has no dog. Long since, early in the eighteenth century, there was a performer named Powell, who used to show his puppets in the places at Goodman's Fields, London, and, besides a dog, he had several trained birds, cockatoos and chaffinches; also a pig. This pig, we read, was to be seen dancing a reel with Punch, but surely it must have been quite a small one!

But what does Punch represent? Guesses have been many, but it seems very likely that Punch is the fool of English life in the middle ages, who was dressed in clothes of various colors and had bells or large knobs hanging upon his attire. At one time he wore a hood. Afterward this was changed for a cap, and he had the great or comb of a cock, so that he was sometimes called a "cockscomb."

And it appears that formerly, before Punch in this show, there was another male figure representing Jack-a-Harlequin. The behavior of Punch in the performance tells us of the long arguments and conduct common a century or two ago, but now happily much diminished. After many acts of violence to the baby, to Judy, to the interposing policeman and others he ends his career by being hanged on the gallows.

A House In Two Parishes.

The Revising Barrister at Northwich, England, had to deal with the problem of a house which was suitable in two parishes. The barrister remarked that the voter's head would be in one parish and his feet in another. It reminded him of a cottage from which once confronting him at Warrington. A voter was there found to sleep in Lancashire and Cheshire, and remarked Mr. Williams, "I presume the head was the best part of him and put him in Cheshire."



Cause of the Clash.

"What was the trouble between Swinton and his wife? Was it his fault or hers that they were unable to get along together?"

"It's rather hard to decide. It appears that whenever one of them had an irresistible impulse the other had an unalterable objection."

The Oldest Inhabitant.

Municipal Ownership Succeeds.

Brockville, Nov. 23.—The annual report of the commissioners of the Light & Power Department, showing the net revenue and actual cost of operation for the ten years of municipal ownership, ending Sept. 30 last, was issued yesterday. It shows to what extent economies have benefited since the corporation purchased the gas and electric light plants ten years ago.

Since then the commissioners have handed over to the town $50,156.52, while $97,546.37 has been written off for depreciation and $14,901.78 spent in repairs. The net surplus of profits accruing during that period was $11,402.22. The amount set aside for depreciation has been spent on capital account.

Old-Time Skippers.

The English seafaring men were trained like farmers' sons in the service itself. Their lessons were those of early navigation; the rest of cabin-boy to that of master. Such a school was likely to turn out men of efficiency, but not of scientific learning if the late Mr. James Runciman has gathered some stories of these worthies.

A man who could neither read nor write would carry his vessel without a mistake from port to port. The lights on the coast were his only books, and in the intellectual exercise consisted in calculating the set of the ebb and the flood. With all the phenomena that he was used to observe in his ordinary life, he could deal promptly and sagaciously, but anything new tended to disarrange his mind.

When steamers were first ordered to carry red and green side-lights, with a light while lights hung forward an old sea captain saw the mysterious colored circles moving about upon him. He did not understand this new thing, and his faculties became confused. He shouted, "Hand over board! We'll be into a chemist's shop."

Another master who happened to have a literary turn presented to the bear a popular lecture on astronomy. He was much troubled by what he heard, and explained his perplexity with great feeling. "The man told the lot of us," he said, "that the world turns round and round and round; but I cannot understand how that can be, for Halter's Rock has been there ever since I can mind."

The Life of a One Dollar Bill.

It is a matter of record in the treasury department that the life of the one dollar and two dollar bills is becoming shorter since the issue of either of these denominations does not obtain in circulation now much over three months, while the life of the bill of a small bill was about two and a half years. It has been gradually reduced, and the ragged and dirty money that comes into the treasury now for destruction is worn out in two years old. The new money washing machine installed in Washington to cleanse this money is expected to have some effect in lengthening the life of the currency, but it is not believed it will greatly prolong its existence.—Washington Star.

Flower of the Falls.

Growing in the spray of the great Victoria falls in South Africa is a gladiolus has been discovered and named the Maid of the Mist. Four bulbs of this plant sent to England here, been induced to sprout and bloom by means of constant spraying in a hothouse. There the interesting discovery was made that the petals of the flower, which is funnel-shaped, form a penthouse to protect stamens and pistil from the rainwater that would pour to which they would otherwise be subjected in the native haunts of the plant.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Days of Declining Race.

According to a return laid before parliament the aborigines of New South Wales continue to decline in numbers. The aboriginal population in September last numbered 7,370 as against 8,919 in 1882, when a census of the native population was first taken. The number of full bloods has declined from 3,040 to 1,723, while the half castes show an increase, there being now 5,647 as against 5,879 in 1882. The present population consists of 886 male and 583 female full blooded adults, with 645 full blooded children.—West minster Gazette.

NIAGARA LUNATICS.

When Pride Comes Before the Falls and Often Ends There.

The rapids below the Niagara Falls, where the whole enormous river crashes at a appalling speed through a steep, narrow, cliff-bound gorge, seem to possess an extraordinary fascination for a certain class of fools.

The latest Niagara lunatic is a Mr. Leister, who has run through the rapids in a motor-boat. His engine quite smashed, he was his rudder, and we are told that in one place the boat's hull was actually floating bodily out of the water, jumping a height of twenty feet. It was the merest fluke of luck, apparently, that saved the battered boat and its badly-injured occupant into a calm pool, from which it was possible to rescue him.

For the past forty years we have had a succession of similarly foolhardy feats, each one of which had the slightest justification. About the year 1860, a small steamboat was launched above the rapids, and, quiet as the foot of the Falls to take visitors out as far as the whirlpool below.

The business did not pay, and in 1861, the owner of the Maid of the Mist, as she was called, decided to sell her. A bill was posted on a man down the river at Lewiston; but, in order to deliver on he had to take her down through the whirlpool rapids.

A huge crowd gathered to watch the issue. The little vessel flashed into the whirlpool, and was absolutely lost to view amid the huge waves. Everyone thought that she was gone. But she emerged again, shooting out to that half her keel was exposed to view, and fled down the torrent at incredible speed.

To make a long story short, she did get through, battered but sound. Joel Robinson, who commanded her, never recovered from his awful experience. Within a few weeks his hair went white, and he died about three years later.

Sixteen years later—in 1877—a man named Charles Percy went through the rapids in a specially-constructed lifeboat. The boat was a double deckd, with three two sit-chambers, in one of which, carefully padded, Percy lay.

He accomplished the trip safely, and soon afterwards made a wager with a another lunatic called Peter for a race through the whirlpool rapids, the stake to be $500 a side.

Flack apparently was a bigger fool than Percy, for he braved the terrors of the passage in a boat partly built of cork, but with no pads or air-chambers. In this he set out for a trial trip on July 4th, 1883. Before he even reached the famous whirlpool a wave upset his boat, and it went into the eddies bottom up. An hour later it was picked up some miles down, and Flack's body was found still strapped to the seat.

This put an end to the boat business, but several individuals have since "tried the rapids in "barrels" specially built of stout oaken timbers and elaborately padded within.

A Boston policeman, named Kendall, was the earliest barrel man. He went down for the first time in July 1886, and in the following August gave a second exhibition, together with two other men. In each case the voyage took about twenty minutes. A woman afterwards ended a similar experience. Her barrel leaked, and she was half-drowned.

And then there was Captain Webb, the only man who ever swam the English Channel, who scorned boats or barrels, and without even a lifebelt made an attempt to swim the rapids on July 24th, 1883.

Unfortunately photograph exists showing the last glimpse which the huge crowd obtained of this prince of swimmers, as the first wave of the whirlpool tossed high before dashing him down on the jagged rock which tore the life from him.

High-Born Lady Smokers.

According to a Paris journal, the new Queen of the Belgians is a lover of the Egyptian cigarette. The Queen Mother of Spain used to astonish ambassadors to smoke in her presence Queen Regent, Queen Victoria, Her Majesty being a good smoker herself. On the other hand, the late Queen Victoria had a great objection to tobacco.

The German Empress tolerates smoke, for her lord is a great smoker —cigarettes, cigars, and even the old china bowl pipe. Queen Marguerite in Italy and the Queen of Roumania do not object to the smoke habit in the Empress, unlike her mother-in-law, has forbidden ladies in her presence to indulge in nicotine.

Distribution Faulty, Says French

Inspector-General Says There Is Too Much Infantry and Heavy Artillery In Canada--Militiamen's Duties Should Be Enforced More Strictly Excellent Material and Fine Spirit In Work--Field Artillery Weak

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—The Minister of Militia yesterday made public the report of Sir John French, inspector-general of the Imperial forces, upon the Canadian militia. In his summary he says:

"The full measure of service and diligation which a volunteer, whether officer or private, takes upon himself, must be exacted. In a force raised and maintained on a volunteer system, nothing less than this will do, and anything less will mean inefficiency, failure, and, at last, disaster. According to my judgment, those important requirements are not fulfilled.

"I may summarize the principal shortcomings as lying in an inefficiently developed organization, inadequate knowledge of the higher conditions of the test qualification for officers and non-commissioned officers of the active militia, laid down in the regulations, not being strictly enforced, and in the rank and file not being compelled to fulfill their engagements. Only when the regulations which govern the constitution and maintenance of the Canadian militia are strictly enforced, will it be possible to say whether the present system meets the defensive requirements of the country or not.

"Judging from what I have seen of the excellent material, and the fine spirit which is apparent in all the ranks, and taking into consideration the marked progress which has been made in the past few years, and the evident signs of its continuance, I should be inclined to think that, so long as the present condition of affairs on the North American continent remains as it is, the existing system, on a sound basis of peace organization, should suffice to meet the needs of the Dominion.

"We five, however, in times of great change and progress, and it behooves the intelligence department to keep a sharp eye upon the course of events, so that the Government may be kept au courant with any military changes in other countries, which necessitates consideration of a more drastic military system on the part of Canada.

"I may mention that, in the course of my tour of inspection, I have seen several bodies of cadets. The movement seems to be making good progress throughout the Dominion, and I have been struck by the fine physique and training of the boys, and their smart and soldierlike bearing on parade.

Sir John French begins by emphatically that a sound system of organization is the cornerstone of all military efficiency, and he adds that "no amount of superior physique, armament or individual excellence, in either commanders, staff or bodies of troops will compensate for a want of it."

He criticises the Canadian organization on two lines. The proportion between the various arms of the service is not correctly defined, there is too much infantry and heavy artillery, and only half as much field artillery as is advisable, while the engineers and supply services are too weak, the distribution of troops is faulty.

He submits with this a scheme of organization which shows a shortage of

One regiment of cavalry.
Two battery of horse artillery.
Twenty batteries of artillery.
Eight field troops of engineers.
Five field companies of engineers.
Four telegraph detachments.
And numerous units of army service corps and medical corps.

Gen. French next advocates the drawing up of a sound scheme of mobilization, which would include the establishment of a railway war council, presided over by the chief of the general staff, and including amongst its members the managers of representatives of the railway companies of Canada.

In this connection he says: "The work of completing the arrangements for speedy mobilization, of providing or ensuring the provision of transport, equipment, stores and supplies; of preparing the necessary regulations and instructions and of drawing up tables, showing the war equipment of all units, is a labor of very considerable magnitude. In the Imperial army, for the United Kingdom alone, this work has occupied the undivided attention of five or six officers for nearly twenty years, while the duty of keeping the arrangements, now thoroughly decentralized, up to date, entails continuous work upon all officers of the army, both staff and regimental.

"A great portion of the work thus accomplished is available for the guidance of Canadian officers, and the problem to be solved is, on the whole, simpler for the Dominion. But the conclusion is unavoidable that the number of officers available for this duty in militia headquarters, and in the several military districts, is now, and apparently always has been, far too small to cope successfully with the task.

"So far as I can judge, the preparation of a suitable mobilization scheme would require the undivided attention of at least two general staff officers and one administrative staff officer at headquarters, and of one administrative officer in each military district. When the scheme is completed, it is probable that the services of two of the officers at headquarters could be dispensed with, but for the proper maintenance of mobilization arrangements, the remaining additional officers must be permanently maintained. The staff at present maintained, at headquarters and in the commands appears to me absurdly inadequate in numbers to deal successfully with the difficult problems which require its attention."

TOLSTOI'S FUNERAL.

Peasants Pay Tribute to Memory of Their Benefactor.

Tula, Russia, Nov. 23.—The special train bearing the body of Tolstoi from Astapovo arrived at the Zaseika station at eight o'clock yesterday morning. The funeral party was met by throngs of mourning peasants. Tolstoi's sons bore the casket on their shoulders over the two miles separating the station from the novelist's home at Yasnaya Poliana. Peasants marched at the head of the procession, carrying white banners, inscribed, "Nikolaivitch, the memory of your goodness will never fade from the hearts of us orphaned peasants."

Following the peasants were two choirs, chanting funeral memorial hymns. The coffin was placed in the hearse. The countess and others of the family followed in the hearse.

Just before sunset the casket was carried to the grave, about which the family and close friends of the dead man knelt. The choirs sang the hymn, "Everlasting Memory," but there was no other ceremony.

Montreal, Nov. 23.—The International Railway, built by Thomas Malcolm from Campbellton, N.B., to St. Leonard's, on the St. John River, where it connects with the Grand Trunk Pacific and the C.P.R., and which is destined, so it is said, to form a part of the Intercolonial, is now completed.

Speaking of the Grand Trunk Pacific, which is now completed from Moncton to the Quebec line, save about 50 miles, Mr. Malcolm says it is the finest road on the continent, and that an engine able to haul twenty cars on the C.P.R. will be able to haul seventy-five cars on the G.T.P. He is of the opinion that the whole line from Moncton to Point Levis will be completed by midsummer.

John Armstrong Dead.

Toronto, Nov. 23.—John Armstrong, secretary of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, died very suddenly yesterday morning. He had been seriously ill for several weeks with an acute form of jaundice and was able to go to the office for treatment, but his condition became so precarious, hopeless, he was brought back to Toronto a few days ago. The end came at the Western Hospital, where he had lain in a semi-unconscious condition since Sunday evening.

Mr. Armstrong was appointed to the Government position a little over four years ago. While he was primarily a literary representative, he devoted towards the Conservative side in politics and figured as a platform speaker in numerous campaigns.

Nat Taggart Who Suicided.

Brantford, Nov. 23.—An attendant from the Institution asylum visited the police station yesterday in an endeavor to establish the identity of the unknown man, found hanging in a clump of trees near Whiteman's Creek on Saturday. It was decided that the remains were those of Robert Taggart, who escaped from the asylum last summer, but that attendants declared positively they were not, and added that Taggart was not such a fool.

Thus far the case has baffled the police, and no inquest is being held on Friday night. Coroner Ashton declared yesterday that the remains had been in the tree for five, if not ten, months.

Chatham, Nov. 23.—At the annual meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association, W. F. Poole was elected president. The matter of traveling auctioneers occupying stores on the main streets for short periods was discussed, and a scheme will be inaugurated to keep all of the stores in the main portion of the business section rented in order to keep them out. The question of early closing was also discussed, and an effort will be made to elect a council next year which will support a general early closing movement.

ROSLIN.

After being an invalid for the past few months, Mr. Byron Fitchett, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Fitchett, of Roslin, passed away at his late home on Saturday evening. Deceased was afflicted with consumption, but was only severely ill for about three hours. Mr. Fitchett had lived here until a few years ago, when he moved to Belleville, where he was employed as a conductor in British Columbia, when he had to give up work, and returned home here about a year ago.

He was a member of the English church, Roslin, where the funeral service was held on Monday, Nov. 21, conducted by the rector, Rev. J. Lyon. Besides the parents, one sister, Miss Annie, and two brothers, Alex. and Harry, survive. The funeral was largely attended, and the floral tributes were numerous and beautiful.

First Shot Fired In Campaign For Local Option in Belleville

Joint Meeting of The W. C. T. U. And Y. W. C. T. U. Held In Baptist Church Last Evening--Delegates Make Interesting Report On Provincial Convention--Vigorous Address By Rev. Dr. Bishop

"Saloons cannot live without boys. Have you any to spare?" This question, posted prominently in front of the audience, was the central thought of the meeting in the Baptist Church last evening in the interests of the temperance cause. It was a joint meeting of the W.C.T.U. and the Y. W.C.T.U. of the city called for the purpose of hearing the news from the 33rd annual Provincial Convention of the W.C.T.U., held in Owen Sound Nov. 1 to 4.

Much interest centered in this convention because Owen Sound has been the battle ground for some fierce fighting between the temperance and the liquor forces in the last five years, and very encouraging reports have been brought back of the increased prosperity of the city, of the increase in property values, and of the brisk demand for building lots—all of which is attributed to the abolition of the public bar, and the turning to better uses of the money formerly spent in liquors.

Miss Ethel Ketcheson and Miss Edna Farley were the two young ladies chosen to report this convention, and by the clear and intelligent summary they gave it is evident that both had their eyes and ears open all the time. A general summary was given of the work of the temperance women in the Province, showing that the work is well planned and faithfully executed. It is broad in its scope, embracing the children in the schools, the sailors on the lakes and rivers, the lumbermen and miners in their camps, and taking through Sabbath and city duties of our provincial life to the Provincial Legislature itself.

There are now 2,095 wearers of the white ribbon in Ontario, some of whom have votes, and many of whom have not. But the advice given them at the convention was to "keep on kicking, whether you have a vote or not." They were all urged to carry a pledge book at all times, and to remember that the letter "C" in their short title stands for "Christian" and that christianity must be the basis of their ultimate success.

But over and over again it was emphasized upon the workers that they must guard and protect the children that more workers were needed in the schools; that more books should be kept in the school libraries on temperance, hygiene, purity, self-control, etc., and that more attention should be paid to teaching these subjects; that children should be protected from liquors in such forms as candies, jellycake, cakes, etc., or from such drinks as near beers, etc., which were apt to weaken an appetite for the real drink—decadence of the home," and the protection of the child from pernicious influences must start and centralize in the home.

Rev. Dr. Bishop gave a splendid fifteen minute address on the subject of local option. He said the world has grown weary of the crime and shame and degradation associated with the liquor traffic; that the Ministerial Association of this city shares in this, and is a unit in the belief that something should be done right here in Belleville, and that it should be done as quickly as possible. Several meetings of the ministers have been held to discuss the subject, and it has been decided to plan for a local option vote in Belleville in January, 1912, which will give the workers a little over a year to make ready.

He said he would not enter the ranks of the prophets and endeavor to predict the result of the vote in Belleville, but he personally could not be identified with people who fought, even if they did not win, rather than with people who sat still and did nothing.

For the encouragement of the workers he reminded them of what had already been accomplished—that some years ago there were over 6,500 licenses in Ontario, whereas now, with an increased population, there are, in round numbers, 1,500 licenses; and at the present rate of cutting of licenses it cannot be many years before the Province will be rid of the traffic; that now over one half of the whole Province is under local option by-laws, and that about 100 more municipalities are preparing to vote on the question next January; that the work is substantial and permanent, very few places ever repealing the law, and it cannot be long before the majority under local option will be so large that the Provincial Legislature will be compelled to enact a provincial law, and so clean out the last remnants of the bar trade.

He asserted his conviction that the fight in Belleville would be won if the workers went into it heartily, and trusting in Divine power for the victory against this stronghold of the evil one.

Mrs. John Williams occupied the chair, and associated with her on the platform were Mrs. (Rev.) Seymour and Mrs. (Rev.) Mayhew, Rev. Dr. Bishop and Rev. Mr. Smith, the new pastor of the church.

During the progress of the meeting Miss Marion Brain recited "The Angel of the Track" and Miss Smith and Miss Wanda Riggs sang solos, all of which were warmly applauded.

USED VILE LANGUAGE.

Last night about 10.30 a young man named Wm. Robinson, who claims Nova Scotia as his home, was arrested on Front Street on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. While being conveyed to the police station Robinson used vile language to Sergt. Harman and Officer Donovan, who had him in charge. This morning the Magistrate imposed a fine of $10 and costs or 20 days in jail. Not having the money Robinson went up to Ketcheson's castle.

Good Form

Women who are polite in practically all other places sometimes are positively rude at card tables. It would perhaps help them to be self controlled and civil when the game is going against them to remember that, after all, it is only a game and, though they lose, their defeat is only temporary.

However different one may be in fact when one is losing, and few persons are as interested when the cards are against them, it is a matter of good breeding to pretend as much enjoyment as when success is on her side. It is not politic to be snappy and dull just because one is losing. Such conduct makes the winning couple extremely uncomfortable.

Courtesy, at all times desirable, at cards should be regarded as imperative. To comment unfavorably upon the playing of a hand is the height of ill manners and need not be excused on the ground of instructing the ignorant. A woman who might sincerely wish to play a better game does not care to be criticised and drilled in public, and the cue giving information is a self appointed teacher who is not desired.

At a bridge luncheon recently the players at one table were amused to hear at the completion of every hand a lecture by one of the guests. The women who talked played well—all admitted that—but the afternoon was not a class in card playing. It was a social occasion where each woman was supposed to stand upon the merits of her game. The woman who did the talking was not disagreeable, nor did she select one person for her victim. Impartially she instructed the whole table, with the result that when she had gone at the end of the afternoon those remaining later declared that she had almost spoiled their game.

The correct thing for her to have done was to remain quiet, so master how poor the playing of others might be. If she were asked any questions as to what to do she might have answered briefly and courteously, but she should have remembered that the afternoon was one of relaxation and amusement, not of instruction.

The woman who loses her temper with her partner commits an unpardonable breach of good manners. No is it enough to control the tongue when at such times. Manner as well must be considered, and one who cannot regard these dictates of good breeding should never play cards.

A.

Automobile Etiquette.

It looks unconventional for a young girl to go automobiling with several young men unless they are relatives for somehow it is suggestive of a "party" tendency on her part, and for the one girl in a group of men is never quite as delicately treated by the world as is the maid who has some body of her own sex in her company. Therefore, all things considered, for a chaperon is a useful personage, and if she is a good deal older than the rest of the party everybody is likely to behave in the best possible manner.

Proper dress for motoring depends upon the excursion itself, whether taken in town or in the country or if the trip is to be long or short. For wear in town this coquettish little bonnet with wide strings and side rosettes or flowers sometimes accompany the distinct dinner frocks, for the spin may come after dinner in a restaurant; but over the gown must go a rajah or pongee coat cut with kimono sleeves and flattened across the waist with two huge buttons of gilt or white en-

BOYHOOD AND ALCOHOL

There are some things too awful to contemplate—one is the giving of alcohol in the guise of medicine to boys. We believe Scott's Emulsion is the only preparation of Cod Liver Oil that contains absolutely no alcohol, drug or harmful ingredient of any sort. ALL DRUGGISTS broidery. The long chiffon veil is a necessity for a smart look, and of course there are all sorts of gimcracks designed especially for motor wear—bracelets, watches, brooches, hatpins, etc. The country party, especially if there is to be a long spin, is less elegant, costs, goods, gloves and veils all looking on a great extent as if designed purely for usefulness.

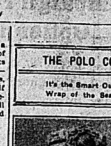
Invitations to Children's Parties.

Good form requires that all invitations of both girls and boys shall be issued in the name of their parents or of one of the guardians with whom they live. The very obvious reason for this is that did one of the minors give invitations it might be done without the knowledge of elders.

Rarely do birthday parties need invitations other than formal notes to be written by the mother. It is not to parents of the others that the communications are addressed, but to the young people themselves, in some something after this fashion:



My Dear Mary—Will you not give Anna and me the pleasure of your presence at a birthday party we are giving for her on Thursday, the 23rd? We are asking some of her young friends to be here about 8 o'clock and hope you will be among them.

A Social Duty.

To send a box of candy, a book or a box of flowers after having made a short visit is a tactful act which costs little either in time or money. Only a visiting card bearing no writing may be inclosed.

THE POLO COAT.

It's the Smart Outing Wrap of the Season.

WHY NOT THIS?

Tibet Headdress Might Be Adapted to American Styles.

THE PAGOD, HEADDRESS WORN IN TIBET.

Take of the pigtails and this headdress worn by the upper class women of Tibet might adorn the pretty head of America's upper tendom. Indeed, it is not as many of the hats of the day that are considered "perfect dears."

And as for expense, it lines right up with the most exclusive winter models in the polo being practically fifteen hundred of our dollars.

This costly piece of Tibetan headgear is fashioned with the weaver's hair and is ornamented with many turquoises, corals and small pearls. The decorations can be easily removed. It is worn only by women who are pretty ladies and who are not married Nopless. In other words, it is an "classy" as Georgette or Cartier French models. American millinery artists please take notice of the "lines" and profit thereby when genius takes another eccentric chapeau flight.

A FRENCH SKIRT MODEL.

Skirts are much more generally becoming than the cold grays of the silver fox, squirrel or chinchilla. The white furs are always pretty, but often trying in the extreme.

The touch of black which has been so much exploited lately is to continue in the winter modes. The flat pump bow, with even a jabot of lace beneath, is a becoming finish for the Dutch collar or the high standing collar. A black tie gives a smart touch to colored frocks, and a crisp little black tie with dangling jet-earrings are a big black bat makes a dazzling picture.

Skirts are tight; they are short; jackets are short and none too full as to cut, and corsages have little or no waste material to complain of. Here are some of the salient features of the new models.

The skirt that is trimmed with flat plaited flounces is a favorite one of the season, and illustrated, this one is made of striped voile, and the trimming consists of the material cut on the cross.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes from 32 to 38 inches waist measure. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Dept., Cir. and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage, which insures more prompt delivery.

THE PAGOD, HEADDRESS WORN IN TIBET.

THE NEW POLO COAT.

When is a polo coat not a polo coat? That is the question which may be answered in the same breath—when you see it worn by smart girls and women as an outing wrap, for motoring, on the tennis court as a blanket for the feminine champion as she stands to receive the congratulations of her friends after the game these cold autumn days, on the field of conquest or at football games.

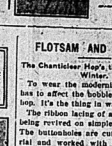
The coat will be worn on cold and stormy days by swagger girls during the winter, and, in short, it's mighty useful all round wrap, but where it gets its name nobody knows.

The material of the polo coat is not unlike a heavy eiderdown fabric, and a sandy brown shade is the approved color of Dame Fashion.

The coat is long, loose and double breasted and fastened with a double row of large buttons. There are a wide belt of the material drawn through straps and a collar that buttons up tightly about the throat, or it may be turned down at will. These coats range in price from $40 to $50, according to finish and material.

Where "Cranford" Was Written.

To lovers of that English classic "Cranford" this picture of the home in Manchester, England, where Mrs. Gaskell wrote her inimitable story will doubtless be of interest.



The centenary of Mrs. Gaskell's birth was recently celebrated at Knutsford, Cheshire, the English village which furnished the author with character studies for "Cranford," in which she reproduced to the life the everyday existence of the "maiden ladies and widows of limited means" who formed the social life of the village.

The Chanticleer Hop's the Walk of the Winter.

To wear the modernised skirts one has to affect the bobble or chanticleer hop. It's the thing in walks.

The ribbon lacing of a decade ago is being revived on simple house gowns. The buttonholes are cut in the material and worked with heavy buttonhole twist, or if broad ribbon is used the opening may be bound with silk or velvet. These are newer than crochet rings covered with heavy twist. A soft, pliable ribbon is used, much wider than the buttonhole, so that it falls into folds. The ends are drawn to a point with a gold or silver ornament.

If one could summarize the fashions in a haphazard way they would read as follows: Tight skirts at the hems and all others; overdrapery on everything except a morning coat suit; fur in every form is used—one's purse is the only limit; coats are short, wraps are not; hats are both small and large —there is a wide choice.

The long waisted petticoat is much liked for little children. This one can be made with a skirt or flounce or embroidery or of plain material finished to suit the fancy. The body portion consists of front and backs, and the skirt or flounce is straight and gathered at its upper edge.

SARTORIAL NOTES.

Hats of the Season Queer but Picturesque Looking.

Hats this year are queer looking of the head, reminding one of Quaker bonnets, etc. But worn with a certain cachet there is an undeniable charm about them.

Like dresses, hats are beginning to be known by names. At a recent millinery opening there were models em-

There is a disposition again to use small buttons as an ornamental way, and the return of the old time "sailor bonnet" is among the winter possibilities.

SCIENCE CURES THE KIDNEYS

THROUGH "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

The Famous Medicine Made of Fruit Juices

After careful consideration, it has been determined that "Fruit-a-tives" is a thoroughly scientific remedy. It is based on scientific facts and it cures in a scientific manner.

Its fact "Fruit-a-tives" is known to be the most scientific remedy ever discovered for Kidney and Bladder Troubles. Mr. Placey thinks so, and his experience proves it:

Riverton, P.Q., March 17th.

I suffered for many years with Kidney Trouble and Pain in the Back. I took well known kidney remedy and kidney pill, but nothing gave me relief. I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives" and this fruit medicine cured me when every other remedy failed. I used three boxes of "Fruit-a-tives." From the first, "Fruit-a-tives" gave me relief and I am now well—no pain—no suffering and every symptom of Kidney disease gone.

Going Motoring.

Have you seen the new knitted hoods with border and ties that are brought round the neck, cross in front and tie low at back? They are cose shape like the caps of our forefathers.

Another quaint motor cap of velvet folds with brocade or cretonne border is lighter and ornamented on each side with a huge velvet colored button mold, is pushed like the caps of colonial days.

A close fitting motor bonnet for cold weather is of fine cashmere with one of the brim turned back on the folled crown to a depth of five inches and finished on edge with small silk rosettes.

The Wrong Seat.

An amusing incident occurred recently as the passenger steamer Orinoco left the landing-stage for South America and the usual intermediate ports. Just before the steamer sailed a clergyman came hurriedly up the gangway, and took a seat in the smoke-room. Presently the steam whistle sounded, and the clergyman turned to a fellow-passenger and remarked, "This is all right for New Brighton, I presume." Being informed that the ship was sailing to the West Coast of South America he left in very sudden exit, and galloped down the gangway to the amusement of the spectators.

Proof Against Wasp Stings.

A Scottish naturalist in a paper on the habits of wasps tells how a wasp robbed will stand at the side of a hanging sugar nest and deliberately bite it in pieces in order to get at the larvæ, apparently undisturbed by the swarm of angry insects. The boldest of these things instantly set to fight the intruder, but they never show fierceness bear to watch the demolition.

How He Popped.

He (at party)—Ah, Miss Bright, you are the star of the evening. Am I not Flatterer! You are the first to tell me that.—In that case, then, I am the conqueror of a new star I am entitled to give it my name. When shall it be?

So perfect an imitator is dry air that it takes 10,000 volts of electricity to leap a gap or an inch.

RIO JANEIRO BOMBARDED

MRS. STEWART AT SEAT OF TROUBLE

Belleville Lady, at Parral Mexico, But Is Safe And Sound

EXAGGERATED REPORTS

Telegram Received, In This City Yesterday By Mr. John A. Mackie

Mr. John A. Mackie yesterday afternoon received the following telegram:—

PARRAL, Mexico.—Peace restored. Everything appears to be all right. All well.—W. W. Stewart.

It was indeed a source of gratification to Mr. Mackie and other members of the family to receive such a message. Mrs. Stewart, the wonder, married Miss Ethel Mackie, of this city, and for some time they have been residing at Parral, Mex., he being general manager of the light and power company in that city. Yesterday's papers contained alarming news from Parrall, owing to the revolutionary uprising in Mexico. It was to the effect that the Mayor of the place and chief of police had been assassinated, and that business men were fleeing from the city and leaving all behind them. It now appears that the Government is in control of all places where there has been trouble and that the revolutionists have taken to the woods. That point has been restored there will be welcome news to many. The many friends of Mrs. Stewart in this city will be pleased to learn that no harm has befallen her or those of her household.

HURT HERE, MAY LOSE HIS LIFE

Mr. W. G. Brown, a fireman of the Grand Trunk Railway here, this afternoon sustained injuries of such a nature that his recovery is doubtful. It appears that the victim was passing between disconnected cars at the station yards, to get to his own train, when the cars were moved together and he was struck in the pelvis, below the abdomen. As quickly as possible the ambulance was called to the station and Brown removed to the hospital for treatment. He resides in Belleville.

LE NEVE IS NOT COMING

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 24.—Miss Le-neve has cancelled her passage to America and says her duties as executrix of the Crippen estate will prevent her making her expected trip to America. It is not thought the estate amounts to more than eight thousand dollars.

BANK CLERKS TO JOIN THE LABOR MOVEMENT NOW

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—Residents of four homes in Earlscourt, a suburb, were driven out in their night clothes when their homes were destroyed at four o'clock this morning.

Circulars are being sent all over Canada by Charles Waddell, of the Canadian General Electric Co. here, inviting all bank clerks to join in an association for their benefit, protection and social advancement. It is expected the question of low salaries will be one of the first dealt with by the new organization.

FLEET MUTINIES IN HARBOR AND OPENS FIRE ON SHOW CITY

Pitched Battle Between Fortifications and Warships Ensues--Many Killed And Wounded--English Warships off to Scene.

(Intelligencer Special.)

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 24.—The captain of the new Brazilian Dreadnought, Minas Geress, was killed, together with several other officers, and for a time a warm bombardment of this show city of the southern seas was kept up when part of the Brazilian fleet in the harbor mutinied, following a dispute about wages. There was a pitched battle between the fortifications of the city and the fleet in the harbor, considerable damage being done by both sides, the casualties heavy. The British fleet has been ordered here to protect English and Canadian interests. The leaders of the mutiny are now under arrest.

MUTINEERS IN CONTROL.

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng. Nov. 24—A private cable this afternoon asserts that the mutineers have turned the tide and are again in possess on of the entire fleet in the harbor. Vigorous fighting with many casualties is going on between the land fortifications and the ships.

President Fonceesa has assumed charge of the situation, but efforts to parley the mutineers are unavailing. They claim freedom from the tyrannical rule of petty officers as well as higher pay. Nearly twenty-five millions of Canadian money is invested in Brazil, mostly in Sao Paulo tramways, controlled largely by William Mackenzie.

BEATEN AND STARVED ON AN OYSTER DREDGE

Artist's Son Is Snatched in Boston and Is A Physical Wreck from Cruel Treatment

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Physically a wreck from nearly three months of cruel treatment, Peter Ocear Jepson, 17-years old, of Boston, Mass., who made his way with difficulty to a local hotel yesterday, relates a tale of privation and suffering melodramatic in detail.

Shanghaied in an alley near the Y. M. C. A. building on the night of September 15, Jepson, whose father is an artist and draftsman at 15 Norway street, Boston, declares he was chloroformed and thrust aboard a fishing smack out of that port. Later, he says, he was sold for $20 to the skipper of an oyster dredger in Chesapeake Bay.

Blows and kicks, scanty food and threats of death were meted out to Jepson daily and he declares that he at 2 o'clock in the morning fly cries and yells of groups of armed and mounted men, who came forth from the ruins of the ancient church of Santa Rosa, situated at the extreme end of the city, where they had been hiding.

Inspiring Addresses On Missionary Work Follow Fine Banquet

Colonel E. W. Halford of New York and Messrs H. K. Caskey and M. F. Davidson of Toronto Address Large Audience Here—Most Notable Gathering In History of Laymen's Missionary Movement In Belleville.

"Thy kingdom come."

"Will Canada evangelize her share of the world?"

"Not how much of my money will I give to God; but how much of God's money will I keep for myself?"

"We can do it if we will; we can do it and we will."

The business of the whole church is to preach the Gospel to the whole world."

"Love never asks how much must I do, but how much can I do?"

"They conquer who believe they can. According to your faith be it unto you."

Anywhere, anytime, anything for the Son of God and the sont of men."

"God's plan calls for men. Ye that are going, go quickly."

"The light that shines farthest shines brightest nearest home. Consecration to God means service to man."

"This is the only generation we can reach."

"Send me anywhere provided it be forward."

"Life is most worth living to him whose work is most worth while."

"The more religion we export the more we shall possess. Love grows by expression."

"System not spasm is God's method. We need religion in business, business in religion."

"Will Canada evangelize her share of the world?"

These were the mottoes which adorned the walls of the City Hall last evening on the occasion of a banquet which took place under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. It was the most notable gathering in the history of the movement in Belleville. About 150 of the prominent members of the various Protestant churches of the city were present, also a number of outsiders. An excellent spread was provided by the ladies of Bridge St. Methodist church.

The gathering was presided over by Mr. D. Y. Sinclair, who certainly was the right man in the right place. The public meeting following the banquet was addressed by Colonel E. W. Halford, of New York, and Messrs. H. K. Caskey and M. F. Davidson, K.C., of Toronto. The addresses of these distinguished men were well timed, interesting and instructive.

Mr. Sinclair said it was a pleasure for him to preside over such a gathering. We were honored in having Colonel Halford, Mr. Davidson and Mr. Caskey amongst us to give addresses along the lines of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which, movement was accomplishing much good.

TRYING TO CATCH MEXICAN LEADER

But Government Traps Fail To Land The Wily Madero

HIS RANCH RAIDED

But Insurgent Chieftain Had Decamped--Madero Defiant Still.

Laredo, Texas, Nov. 24.—Mexican soldiers late yesterday raided the San Karluga ranch of Francisco I. Madero, leader of the uprising in Mexico, on the chance of surrounding Madero and capturing several thousand horses believed to be on the estate. They seized 250 horses, but Madero was not found.

Reports have had it that Madero was headed for the San Enrique property in the State of Coahuila. Furthermore, it was believed by the Mexican authorities that Madero had placed 2,000 horses there, with which he intended to mount a force of cavalry.

In addition it was reported that an armed band of revolutionists was encamped Tuesday night in Morris, Texas, headed toward the ranch. All these rumors led to the movement yesterday, which the Mexican authorities say has effectually checked the plan of Madero to muster a force of mounted men to operate in the interior.

Fighting at Chihuahua.

El Paso, Nov. 24.—Latest reports are that Chihuahua is in great danger, it being estimated that between 8,000 and 10,000 revolutionists are gathered between the city and the plant of the American Smelting & Refining Co. All responsible citizens are armed and expecting to be attacked at any moment. Crowds of defenders occupy the tops of all the high churches and large buildings affording them the city.

The first authentic accounts of the fighting at Gomez Palacio in Chihuahua were received here yesterday when El Eco, a Spanish daily, published at Torre on Tuesday, was brought to El Paso by a passenger from Mexico. A translation of the report follows:

Gomez, Palacio, Mexico, Nov. 22—Last night several rumors were circulated to the effect that no one gave credence, but all were greatly surprised at 2 o'clock in the morning by cries and yells of groups of armed and mounted men, who came forth from the ruins of the ancient church of Santa Rosa, situated at the extreme end of the city, where they had been hiding.

Given Consular Messages Censored.

Mexico, Nov. 24.—The press is still denied telegraph facilities, and the censorship established is extended to consular messages. The United States embassy withholds reports for three days. The war department announces that all reports that there have been disorders are now tranquil, and that the government is in control everywhere, except in Guadalupe City, where the rebels are active. Troops are now proceeding to this point.

Proclaimed Himself President.

Ciudad, Fortidelo Diaz, Mexico, Nov. 24.—Francisco I. Madero has proclaimed himself "President of the Provisional Government of Mexico," and commands his followers not to commit overt acts against the people or do damage to property of foreigners.

Revolutionary Agent at Washington.

Washington, Nov. 24.—Gustavo A. Madero, brother of leader of the revolution in Mexico, arrived in Washington yesterday. He comes as the confidential agent of the revolutionary party, but so far has not called on the State Department.

The War Department yesterday instructed Gen. Hoyt, commander of the department of Texas, to respond to requests from U. S. marshals for the assistance of troops in preventing violations of neutrality.

HENRI BOURASSA HAS UNDERTAKEN A MIGHTY JOB

Quebec, Nov. 24.—It is said that one of the objects of Henri Bourassa's trip to Europe is to go and plead before the Pope himself the alleged rights of the French-speaking populations of Canada which are considered violated by the appointment of Mgr. Gauthier to the archiepiscopal seat at Ottawa, and to induce the holy see to put a stop to Mgr. Falloon's hostility to the learning of the French language in the public schools of Ontario.

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—The Deputy Minister of Marine has received news from Captain Bernier and his steamer Arctic. They were from Albert Harbor in August and all are well.

ALD. ACKERMAN FOR MAYOR, 1911.

"Mother, Save the Gizzard, For Your Son Is Coming Home."—Our own popular sheet music. Specimen copies to professionals.

A story from Cleveland says that turkeys are plentiful but not fat. Families who intend to dine alone on Thanksgiving Day can stand it, but who wants to serve a scrawny turkey before company?

Fresh Japanese alarm is reported from San Francisco, where a white burglar was discovered in Japanese quarters. The alarm was given, and fifteen Japanese succeeded in downing the white man. Oh, that terrible jiu jitsu!

So far as we know, no other aspirant, outside of Ald. Ackerman, has appeared in the limelight as a candidate for Mayor, although nominations are only about a month off. A popular way of placing an intelligent, clean man in the Mayor's chair is by acclamation.

It is really high time that these disturbing Suffragettes were either recognized as dangerous lunatics or habitual criminals and sentenced to places of confinement for a term of years. It appeals to these Suffragettes to make "martyrs" of themselves when the term of imprisonment is only a few months, but if the term were lengthened to a number of years—well, it would be different.

Consul-General at Ottawa declined to attend Earl Grey's levee at Ottawa because the Mayor and Sheriff were given precedence over them. Well, isn't this the limit? One would imagine that these commercial agents were among the highest in the world's corps of diplomats. As a matter of fact, they are only plain, ordinary men, who at Ottawa are mingling in better society than they ever did in their lives before. The Ottawa appointment meant a whole lot to most of them. So they're on their high horse. It is to laugh!

The other day the Rev. Dr. Shearer made grave charges against the character of the city of Winnipeg. The authorities of the western metropolis immediately decided to investigate, and subpoena Dr. Shearer as a witness. Now comes word that the esteemed clergyman cannot be found, and, according to the Toronto News, "the assistants state that Winnipeg will have some trouble in finding him." What sort of funny work is this anyway? Surely, Dr. Shearer is not in hiding, but it would seem as though the boot had suddenly been placed on the other foot.

NON SUPPORT CASE GOES OVER FOR A WEEK

Before Magistrate Mason this morning Mrs. Underdunk was charged with and pleaded guilty to being intoxicated. A fine of $2 was imposed.

In the case of George Bennett, a painter, who was charged with non-support of his wife, an adjournment of one week was made. In the meantime it is anticipated that the matter will be amicably settled between the parties and no further trouble ensue. If settled in the time, the charge will no doubt be dropped.

TOWN TOPICS

Bazaar and Playlet Excellent Attractions

St. Thomas' Parish Hall Scene of Splendid Entertainment--Performance Given By Clever Amateurs--Large Audience Present

"Poor Pillicoddy!" He was truly to be pitied. His marriage to a woman, the death of whose first husband had not been clearly established, and the sudden and unexpected return to another earth in a individual bearing, a similar name whose wife had taken up temporary quarters at Pillicoddy's, being a friend of the poor man's wife, all served to furnish ludicrous situations enough in the play "Poor Pillicoddy," to keep the audience which filled St. Thomas' Parish Hall last evening in perpetual laughter from the rise of the curtain until its fall.

The playlet was given in connection with the annual bazaar of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, which opened yesterday afternoon.

The performance was a trifle late in starting, but when it did start it went with a swing, and the audience was fully repaid for the wait. There were five characters in the playlet and the parts were all well taken. Bob Garman, as "Pillicoddy," was a scream. He kept the audience in a roar all the time he was on the stage.

Mrs. Beamish, as Anastasia, his wife, is an amateur stewed to the emotional talent and won much praise for her clever work last evening.

Mrs. Wilmot Sarah, the maid, was good, as she always is. She acted with consummate skill a part which easily could have been overdone.

Miss Ruby Milburn and Mr. Fred Wallbridge, in their respective roles, also contributed much toward the success of the piece. Miss Milburn possesses a pretty voice, appropriate costumes and the stage equipment added much to the effect of the play, which was much appreciated by the crowded house. It will be repeated to-night and is well worth seeing.

Of the bazaar itself too much cannot be said. There was an excellent display of useful and fancy articles and ready purchasers were found. Daintily arranged booths, of varied colors, presided over by pretty, well-gowned misses and matrons, transformed the little hall into quite a fairyland.

Following were the different booths and those in charge:—

Pink and white candy booth, Mrs. Sneyd, Mrs. Wallbridge, the Misses Wallbridge, Miss Phillips and Miss Allen; green booth of useful articles, Miss Nixon and Miss Parker; apron booth of royal blue, Mrs. Blackburn, Mrs. Lockwood, Miss Corby, Miss Thompson and Miss Ida Vole; Christmas booth of dolls, red, green and white, Mrs. Rogers; home-made delicacies, Mrs. Mastern and Miss Cook; Christmas tree, Miss McDonald; lavender and white booth, St. Agnes School.

Mrs. McDonald, assisted by Mrs. Milburn and Mrs. McCracken, had charge of the refreshments.

The decorating committee was composed of Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Wallbridge, Mrs. Stewart and Miss La Voie.

The officers, to whom much of the credit for the success of the affair is due, are: Mrs. George Stewart, president; Mrs. Wallbridge, vice-president; Mrs. Beamish, treasurer, and Mrs. J. R. Bell, secretary.

The dramatic entertainment is under the direction of Miss Carroll and reflects great credit on that lady.

The bazaar will be repeated this afternoon and evening.

MAYOR MARSH SAYS HE'S NOT WORRYING

Tenders For Sewer Opened at Special Meeting of Committee--If Pavement Is To Be Laid Net Year, Sewer Must Be Laid Now, Says He,

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—I am not worrying about what the citizens of Belleville are thinking of me, and my acts generally during the two years term of office, because I believe I have their complete confidence, but in justice to Ald. Lott and Ald. Thompson, whose names appear in your editorial column as being the only members of the Public Utilities Committee who, with myself, opened the tenders for the Front Street sewer, it is only right that the public should KNOW that these tenders were opened at a special meeting of that Committee at which the following gentlemen were present:

Ald. Lott, chairman.
Ald. Robinson.
Ald. Thompson.
Ald. Wallace.
Ald. Fairfield.
Mayor Marsh.
Henry Lindsay, City Clerk (Ahem).
Where your CREDITABLE information comes from I don't know, but the FACTS might have been ascertained at any time without any difficulty. The committee was given power by the Council to act, the lowest tender was accepted, the work is being started promptly and will be rushed to completion, traffic will not be interrupted at all if possible. I, with the Engineer, will be on guard daily, and I believe that Mr. Manley's statement that the sewer from Victoria Avenue to Bridge Street will be completed by December 15th will be fulfilled.

If the pavement is to be laid next year on Front Street this sewer must be laid NOW. Gas and water mains and connections are also being looked after with this object in view, as that is when the pavement is laid, it will be indeed a PERMANENT pavement.

It is not necessary, therefore, for me to say that material is not yet ordered for the pavement in question.

L. W. MARSH,
Mayor.

Laurier is Doomed

Putting aside the other considerations, which may be very interesting, the fact remains that as a matter of actual politics the Laurier Government will be beaten in the coming general elections. There are two reasons for this.

First, there is the fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has stayed in power by holding Quebec. Here are the figures which prove this. They relate to the situation following the election of 1908:

Liberals from Quebec	54
Liberals from constituencies in New Brunswick, Ontario and Saskatchewan which are strongly French-Canadian	7
Liberals from the rest of Canada	74
Conservatives from Quebec	11
Conservatives from the rest of Canada	75

Thus out of his 135 votes in the House of Commons Sir Wilfrid Laurier draws 61 from Quebec and its outposts, leaving him only 74 elsewhere; while in English-speaking Canada Hon. Mr. Borden commands 75 votes, or an actual majority.

Secondly, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has gained a remarkably large number of his seats in English-speaking Canada on the strength of his mastery of Quebec, and on that alone. Ever since 1896 in every general election the Liberals have approached the situation somewhat in this manner:—"We are bound to win in any event. Laurier will sweep Quebec, no matter what happens. He will have a majority of 40 from that province. He can nearly break even in the rest of Canada and have an overwhelming majority. What's the use of fighting? You in this particular constituency had better be on the winning side. If you do, the Government will give you public works. If you don't, it won't."

How Liberals Bribed Constituencies

Here are specific proofs of this—very few out of a great many:—

On October 9, 1908, the Herald, Prince Albert, Sask., said:—"Prince Albert cannot afford to elect a man who will sit on the Opposition side of the House of Commons at Ottawa. And as everyone knows that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be returned to power, electors of this constituency who look to their own interests will support Mr. Ruttan. Cutting off one's nose to spite his face would be a mild act of misdirection compared with voting against Ruttan and shelving the Hudson Bay Railroad."

The Mercury, of Minnedosa, Man., on October 22, 1908, said:—"For the next five years a common member on the Laurier side of the House will be of more use to Marquette than a member of Borden's Cabinet-in-waiting spouting hot air from a bench in the Opposition."

The Richmond County (N.S.) Bulletin, previous to the election of 1908, after enumerating a long list of public works which had been undertaken in the constituency, repeated the assurance that the Laurier Government was sure to be returned, and said:—"Then the people of Richmond realize what it means to be in Opposition. The vast works at Red Islands require to be developed largely by Government assistance."

Mr. R. B. Macdonald, M.P., in his election address in 1908, said that anyone questioned the fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier would be returned, and continued:

"Mrs. Macdonald is the representative of that party. . . . This country has realized the unwise course and unfortunate position of past years, to-day recognizes the necessity of having a representative supporting that Government, and will show its appreciation of the splendid work done by Mr. Macdonald by electing him as their representative."

The Chronicle, of Macleod (Alta.), said on October 22, 1908:—

"The Liberal party is going back with a big majority. . . . With these facts clearly impressed upon us what in the name of common sense can we want with John Herron at Ottawa? . . . The constituency of Macleod, we consider, has the greatest natural resources of any constituency in the west. It requires enormous development in the next four years. It requires a member at Ottawa in sympathy with the Government and in whom the Government can place implicit confidence. In plain English, it requires A. B. Macdonald there where he can have daily interviews with Sir Wilfrid, Sir Frederick Oliver and the rest, and lay the great and urgent needs of the West before them."

The Advertiser, of Owen Sound, Ont., on October 23, 1908, said:—

"The chances are wholly in favor of the Laurier Government being sustained at the polls, and it is only natural that the petitions made by a more considerate class than those represented by Mr. Oliver and the rest, should be granted. The petitions made by a more considerate class than those represented by an Opposition supporter who is always handicapped by the fact that he is one of the enemy."

The Chronicle, of Dunnville, Ont., on October 23, 1908, reported Robert Gardiner, president of the Dunnville Reform Association, as saying that

"Whatever benefits or expenditure of public money that Haldimand received had been secured while our representative was on the Government side." And he added that it was conceded by all that Laurier Government would be returned.

Robert Holmes, Liberal candidate for West Huron in 1908, in his nomination speech, said that the Laurier Government was sure to be sustained, and West Huron would make a serious mistake in not sending a supporter to Parliament. When he was defeated he threatened to see that no money was spent in the constituency.

The Star-Journal, of St. Catharines, Ont., in the 1908 campaign, urged that the Laurier Government was certain to be sustained:—

"That St. Catharines and Lincoln need many things in the gift of the Dominion Government, and that they cannot secure them if Mr. Lancaster is sent back to Ottawa as a representative, is patent to every elector."

LIKE TAKING CANDY FROM A BABY WAS THIS TRICK

Swindlers Take $3,000 From John Neimeier of Buffalo—Placed His Money in A Box With Like Amount and Shifted Boxes on Him.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 24.—John Neimeier, 70 years old, who lives at No. 463 Humboldt parkway, was out in the park near his home ten days ago feeding the squirrels, when he was accosted by two well-dressed men, who engaged him in conversation, explaining that they were anxious to buy property in that neighborhood.

The old man said he had some property and that he had saved money in the savings bank. The strangers made an engagement to meet him in a reading room at the Genesee Library, at Franklin and Edward streets.

Mr. Neimeier was there on time. So were the strangers. They were still willing to buy real estate, but were even more anxious to discuss a lottery scheme merely come to their notice. The real estate proposition could wait. The other scheme was a gold mine, they explained. They had some tickets for an alleged drawing to take place in Washington within a few days.

All that the old man had to do was to put up $3,000 to convince his new friends that he was a man of substance. They would put up a like amount and the old man could hold the $6,000 in a sealed box, and when they met again in two days he would draw down a proportion of the winnings and his original stake.

That looked good to the old man, so he hurried to a savings bank and drew a check for $3,000, payable to himself. When he returned to the strangers they were enthusiastic that he had so little business acumen as to expect them to take an unverified check as an evidence of good faith. Anyone could draw a check, they explained, but only a man with money could produce the real goods.

That settled the old man and he went away and induced his son-in-law, Philip Koerber, of No. 196 Hickory street, to have the check cashed, explaining that he intended to close a deal in real estate. He returned with the cash to the Grosvenor library yesterday afternoon and found his friends waiting. They all adjourned to lodgings a few doors away at No. 353 Franklin street, and there they showed the old man a tin box, put $3,000 of their own into it, with his $3,000 locked it, sealed it and gave it into his keeping. He was told to go home and return in two days, when news of the drawing would be to hand, and they would divide winnings of $10,000.

Neimeier went home and about five o'clock in the afternoon became curious to linger the money once more, so he broke open the box, despite his promise not to do so. He found seven time-tables, a page torn from a newspaper and several pieces of blotting paper.

As quickly as a man of 70 could move Neimeier repaired to the Franklin street lodgings, to find the strangers gone, bag and baggage. One of the old man ran to police station No. 3 and gasped out the story of his wrong. The old man was so excited and in a measure unintelligible that the police took little stock in his story. Later produced some proof of his claim and the police showed him the rogues' gallery that he could and pick out the men who had swindled him. There appears to be small chance that he will ever see his $3,000 again.

COCAINE EVIL A GREAT ONE

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—The cocaine evil, in Montreal, has become such a conspicuous one that the Anti-Alcoholic League has taken the matter up and, at a mass meeting, at Monument National, last night, Archbishop Bruchesi denounced the habit as dangerous to the community, and Judge Lafontaine criticised the lax enforcement of the drug license law in the sale of cocaine. The police have been clearing up Chinatown, which is the heart of the vice, and some twenty-five arrests have been made of those responsible for the sale of the drug. Its worst feature is that victims are daily manufactured and children are frequently given the drug for nothing in order that they acquire the habit. When they become proper victims they patronize the sale for all they can get money to buy the drug. The certain cure, most of them are victims of the habit, put up the drug in 25-cent boxes, which they peddle on the street. A rigorous search is being made to stamp out the vice.

PLEBISCITE ON THE NAVAL QUESTION HINTED NOW

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—A report which comes, it is said, almost directly from Hon. Mr. Brodeur, Minister of Militia, says that the Solicitor of the Canadian people is to be taken on the naval question.

According to the rumor the following five questions are to be asked:

"1—Do you favor having no navy at all and not contribution to Imperial navy?"

"2—Do you favor the continuance of the present Naval Act?"

"3—Do you favor a navy subject to control by the British Admiralty and not subject to the control of the Canadian Government?

"4—Do you favor the present Naval Act being amended so that our navy in case of war will pass automatically under the control of the British Admiralty?

"5—Do you favor presenting two Dreadnoughts or their equivalent in cash at once to the Imperial Government?"

PAINFULLY INJURED

AT GRIFFIN'S.

The pic-eating contest held at Griffin's last night was a distinct success in spite of the decidedly wintry conditions. The antics of the pieeaters elicited screams of laughter from the large audience present. Pleased beyond expectation at the genuine success of the contest, the management announces that in the future a new and novel contest will be held each Wednesday night. Commencing to-night, and for the balance of this week another high-class vaudeville bill will be offered, headed by the Dundas-Fred and Edna in a funny comedy sketch entitled "The Sunbeam and the Rube," in which they introduce singing, dancing and comedy roller skating. Something out of the ordinary is introduced by Manuel in character songs and impersonations. For further particulars regarding next week's contest see the display ad. on page 7.

The ...Veiled Lady...

"Send Harold to me then, you young witch," the old man cried, for his eye was suspiciously moist. "God, the looks like her mother." And to the world-worn old man floated back softly the chime of wedding bells as Cleon's pretty mother once walked out of a Yorkshire church on his arm. "I was a proper lad then. Ah, times have changed. But I've got Rosie. The good Lord has her mother. The old man's voice was still husky when he saw his master stay. Harold. "Sit down, my son. I want to talk to you about this Yarbrough lad. What sort is he, anyway?"

"Father," said the young fellow impulsively, he saved Rose's life on the plains; and he's the best fellow I ever met. The old man lifted his dreaming eyes. They were far away in the green fields of England, and he could almost hear that merry clash of the wedding bells of auld lang syne.

"See here, Harold, I want to go home at once. Bring him to me."

It was not so strange that Vinton Maxwell, (who dreaded now the care of the gloomy Gordon,) said to his blustering Anglican friend, "Harold take your party and go back home. Mr. Burnsford and the lawless Arizonans might throw by the press on private life. Three shots of Poor Beverly Seaton have appalled him. I can't imagine that he would be happy to see your stupid picture labelled 'A Lady Pirate,' and thrown out to the happy possessor of two cents, on a press guaranteed to print ninety thousand an hour. I've got six months' leave of absence and then resign. I mean resign—that Seaton Hall more than pays its way and that a bed of most valuable iron ore has been discovered there. You could get a great price for those holes; but there's a silent trust, a trust of honor, Harold, on one half of the estate until—until matters change." And Maxwell, as he bit his lip and walked to the window, for the choking tears would come when he thought of Beverly Seaton, alone, crazed, world-weary, and heart-sick, for that last awful hour at the Brunswick. The Virginia Light infantry man was game to the last;

"So do you now go on homeward, I will go on with you as far as New York, and then close up our army account, leave the service honorably, and come over for a Yorkshire welcome."

"By Heaven, You'll have it Vinton," cried the undemonstrative Englishman, warmed up in his shell, for once. "You can use your talent and skill to brighten up our slow going boys at home."

"There's one thing," said Maxwell, and his prairie-browned face lit up with a deeper color, "I do not like Rose Hall in among your people on any plane that would make me fight up hill. I want what you know me. An American citizen first and last. When Rose takes my name she will be the sweetest daughter of the Red, White and Blue."

There was a flash of the old army pride in Maxwell's eyes as he said: "I would not give up my birthright to be prince or peer. Our women may have titles, but our men know their priceless heritage."

"By Jove, Vinton," said the tall Englishman, as he thought his hand, "I'm with you shoulder to shoulder. But," he said pleasantly, "you won't need the chip on your shoulder in our country." And the flash of the blue eyes, recalling the English lads at "Alma" and "Inkermann" faded away into the normal "blue china" glare.

Four weeks later Vinton Maxwell and Harold Durnsford saw the Persia churn the misty pastures from the Narrows to the last glimpse of Robert Durnsford showed him clasping to his bosom his two treasures,—his acquaried daughter and their umbrella. His cylinder had was in a Bond-street leather case, weighing sixty pounds, with three brass padlocks.

"By God, Vinton, let us hasten down and get a peep at your iron mine, for this parting makes me homesick." Harold Durnsford here prevented the future paralysis of the optic nerve of his future brother-in-law, who thought he could still see the happy face of the Yorkshire Rose, smiling through her diamond tears and whispering, "You'll soon come to us, Vinton."

"Ah, very neat, very," was the last remark of Robert Durnsford as he heard a cough, the Nestor of this social tableau.

"You win the double event, d'ye see Rosie?" and the old gentleman re-rolled his umbrella, strapped on a binocular, and began the religious studying of "Fire Island." In his boiled lobster colored Murray, he was a true British tourist.

"Sooner you two lads go, sooner we'll see you back. Have you all you want, Harold?" said the old financier.

"Quite, thanks. Over old pater, I've more than I deserve. I have you, and Rosie and lots of tin. I'll kill a few big horned deer for the sideboard at Seaton Hall, and we'll show Maxwell a run in the Yorkshire lanes by and by, that will make him forget his fog-hatred South Indians."

"Mr. Vinton ever scolds, said Maxwell with assumed gravity.

"Ah, by Jove, I dare say not," cried Harold, as Maxwell gave Rosie a last embrace; and silently repented, calling the steward, "Bring the day in the dug-out. For the little woman's sake I was full.

"Jolly little girl is she," said Harold as he gazed on the natives of New Jersey, hovering around, a Scythian horde. Maxwell looked at him in cold disdain. "I mean," said Harold as he ran to speak so of that angel. The lover forgot that the "all-seeing" was the angel's brother. "I mean for Harold's sake I never "an angel" with incipient silvery hairs, and sister of some other pachyderm.

Five weeks later Colonel Lamar, Maxwell and Durnsford were seated around the time blackened mahogany of Seaton Hall. The cut glass which had replaced the sighing faces of hundreds of lazy Virginians, had had groaned in successive generations over its luscious surface. "Tell me something of the old family," said Harold Durnsford, as he razed on the row dismantled hall of state. Maxwell, who, following Colonel Lamar, lingered to a window, from which the Ladies' Walk was visible. A white figure glissened at the end of the long line of silver birches and aspens. In a quiver of light, a tall soldier said, as he pointed to the silent avenue:

"There's a ghost some flashes. Over Seaton's ashes.

As he lies sleeping
With his head around."

"Mr. Durnsford," the old Colonel said in a low voice, "I lie there, by Beverly's last wish, in the family cemetery. We intermarried with the Seatons, sah," he said, with that soft intonation of the Virginian, "this house and property would have been the Seaton-Lamar's for all time. It will soon go to one. I left a gold bottle of Madiera, put away when Beverly was born. Drink it with me now gentlemen." And the last Lamar of Seaton added to the new regime, as Maxwell gazed, glass in hand, down the silent avenue.

As Between Man and Man.

"In order that I may conduct your case intelligently, my friend," said the sawyer who had been appointed by the court to defend the penniless prisoner, "it will be necessary for you to take me into your confidence. You will have to tell me whether or not you committed the offense charged against you."

"Well, now, it's this way, boss," answered the prisoner. "S'posin' you and a chanst to make a little easy money yourself. S'posin' you was in a store an' saw a customer drop a dollar bill on the floor an' you knowed he was rich an' wouldn't never miss it, an' you had an awful thirst on you in' nothin' to squench it with. I put it right up to you, boss. Wouldn't you sail in' had gone out an' then wouldn't you pick up that there dollar an' put it in your pocket an' say nothin' about it?"

The lawyer reflected a moment.

"My friend," he said, scratching his jaw thoughtfully, "I guess you'd better plead guilty and throw yourself on the mercy of the court."—Chicago Tribune.

A Sly Suggestion.

They had reached the outer portals of the hotel, and they were going through the process of parting very lingeringly.

"When I said good night to you this evening," gurgled Mr. Youngsow, "do you think it would be proper for me to place one reverent kiss upon your fair hand?"

"Well," she sighed softly as she laid her head quietly on his shoulder, "I should consider it decidedly out of place."—Lippincotts.

A Hands Off Policy.

"That nephew of yours is a little wild, I'll admit," said Uncle Jerry's neighbor, trying to comfort him, "but he'll reform as he grows older. Leave him to time and nature."

"Time and nature!" snapped Uncle Jerry. "It's time and nature that makes bologer cheese what it is."—Success Magazine.

THE PRESENT INSTANT.

Science Defines It as the Hundredth Part of a Second.

A congress of European astronomers decided that the present time—that is, the present moment—of any particular instant—consists of the hundredth part of a second. This has been settled on because the men of science have not thought that it represented the tiniest fraction of time which could be appreciated by the human brain. Ten thousandth part of a second is actually used in physical science, especially in certain important astronomical problems.

For scientific purposes, however, the official present moment dashes from the future to the past in the hundredth part of a second. This cannot be seen as remarkable when it is recalled that speed records for both horses and men runners are officially calculated in fractions as small as one-fifth of a second.

But in astronomy it is needed to have the hundredth part of a second, for in that moment light can travel 2,000 miles. So time, which is, after all, only a figure of speech and is a mystery that no human brain can understand or fathom, must be considered relatively to one's sensations. It is time to pull an aching tooth is really much longer to the sufferer than the whole night spent in sound sleep. It is more of the person's actual life. It depends more food for mind taken one bite at a time than the plain hours of quiet rest.

Time, then, for all men is relative to their personal sensations. Yet time is never wasted. Even a star, which is a starlight to travel, in some cases thousands of years. It takes time for sound to travel and time for the sluggish brain to work actual results out of long distances.

So that time is not only theoretical; it is as real as coal and wood. Yet this reality disappears when we attempt to time back to ages before the existence of the sun and the stars. For purposes of measurement we have agreed upon a small enough to use as a standard of value, but scientific men have progressed so far in knowledge that the second is too long a period for them to consider as a fixed quantity. Therefore they have chosen the hundredth of a second as the standard for the present instant, which is to be considered as the actual moment at any one instant.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Spoiled His Act.

A musical artist announced to his friends that he had a feature for his act that was calculated to make the audience shudder. He had a right to tice. Several days later he was asked to divulge his plans.

"Oh, it's all off, on," was the answer.

"Well, if it was such a wonderful thing what was it?" was the general inquiry.

"I had planned to have a real skeleton dance. The corset bone was to slip a rib tuned up so that I could play music on it like a xylophone."

"Great idea! Why'd you give it up?"

"The musical hoard a sigh of disappointment.

"I tried it," he answered, "but somebody told me the skeleton of a well known man and I couldn't hit the ribs."—Youngstown Telegram.

A Closed Discussion.

They had argued long and furiously over the question, "Can a man marry his widow's niece?" and the highly talented lawyers in the corner had grown eloquent over the marriage laws of every state in the Union, every country in the world, ancient and modern, polished, and had cited the affinity tables of Leviticus and even the legislation of Lycurgus down to that of Brigham Young, when a young man quietly announced his intense desire to be informed where the deuce a man was when his wife was a widow?

Then the disconsolate lawyers and fourteen excited controversialists ordered iced water.—New York Times.

A Fair Sized Trout.

The gentleman was telling across a large estate when he came upon a man fishing. "What sort of fish do you catch here?" he said.

"Mostly trout," replied the man.

"And what is the largest caught?"

"About ten or twelve, sir."

"What is about the heaviest you have caught?" continued the gentleman.

"Well, I don't know the weight, but the water sunk two or three feet when I pulled it out!"

CONSUMPTIVES SYMPTONS

REMOVED BY VINOL—A GENUINE CASE REPORTED FROM NEWARK, O.

Newark, O.—About two years ago my wife was in very poor health. For three months she suffered from a bad cough which settled on her lungs. She was rundown in body and head and had all the symptoms of consumption. I began taking Vinol and before the first bottle was gone I noticed an improvement in health—before she had finished her third bottle her cough was all gone and she was well.

AN ARCTIC KNIGHT

Story of an Exploring Party

By EDWIN S. ERHART

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Arters ceased biting his nails and rested a long, lean chin in the hollows of his hands.

"I could tell you something that would surprise you," he said, gazing at me across the table.

I stared at him expectantly.

"What?" I monosyllabled.

Arters glowered meditatively, but showed no disposition to answer.

The girl on the cot flung a pitifully thin arm over her head and moaned and murmured in her sleep.

"Well, what?" I reiterated sharply. The long trip that day across the monotonous, never ending white plain had done little toward improving my temper.

Arters arose to his great height, squared his broad shoulders and plodded around the table.

"I am God!" he whispered in my ear.

I saw that I had to do with a mad man.

"This is a strange world," continued Arters, a ruminant note in his voice. "Here we are come, you and I, to this forsaken country in a quest for a lost woman explorer and all for a miserable pittance doled out to us by a Chicago newspaper. He brushed an impatient hand across his eyes. "My memory isn't all that it should be," he confessed. "I should have remembered who I was—and that this trip would have been unnecessary."

Arters cast a furtive glance toward the cot in the distance. "She is an angel," he murmured querulously, "or at least she was. The girl we came searching for? I can't seem to remember somehow."

"Bosh," I answered—and my companion was satisfied.

It seemed years since the Meteor had assigned us, staff reporters at the time, to the hazardous task of finding Ruth Proctor, the intrepid girl explorer, who had set out two years before to find the north pole and was now supposed to be somewhere in the vicinity of the nineties degree.

The Meteor had no use to clip its exchanges. We, the words of Arters, to the contrary, fairly reveled in money, and the essentials of the trip were all forthcoming and were of the best. Besides Arters and Hope, was a marvel of technical construction—a plane of this very purpose and for our enterprising journal.

Miss Proctor, the young society woman explorer, had forsworn New York and the calm amusements of it in order to do something really worth while, had been conspicuous in the limelight on the eve of her departure and for twelve months thereafter. Now if she were heard at all in the papers it was formerly enthusing over her nerve and starting out day after day on more than a passing paragraph. Then she had failir to be niched with that of her fiancee, Lieutenant Andre, the fame of—failure.

But the Meteor kept an impatient eye northward, and when the Proctor expedition came home without her Arters and I were given the word to go in search of the girl.

Arters was the Benjamin J. Arters of much and scrambling on the part of ambitious dailies that lusted for his exclusive articles. He was a writer keen of brain and pen and one of the highest salaried fact getters in the profession of sundays and cheap journals. No college degree journalist was Arters, but a reporter.

Smith, the managing editor, had said to me, "You are to accompany Arters—not as second. If anything, a position on the staff, understand, but because I had been one of the adventurers in that first rush to the Yukon and knew my north.

Hope, with his good luck, the ice drift allowing us at the last to come within a quarter mile of the silent island of Ruth Proctor's long stay.

Of course it was deserted. The log hook was gone. There had no way of telling whether the crew had ventured to the trail after the original first rush toward the pole or perished of cold.

With four Eskimos, dogs and sledges we began the tail of our trip. Our route in all probability was the same as that of Ruth Proctor's party.

Exercise was a great boon. Our men seemed perfectly contented, but one morning we crawled out of our sleeping bags to find them gone. Arters had taken with them our fastest dogs, two sledges and a large supply of our provisions. Wisely we decided not to pursue.

Fate must have planned our expedition with an eye for the melodramatic. At any rate, when we found the fur clad and maid explorer she was alone, seemingly deserted by everybody, and half crazed and sick. She had food, but in quantities that would be fatal she had been slowly starving herself to death. She was suffering toward the pole! I fell in love with her straightway, and I guess Arters did.

Ruth Proctor was a willful thing despite her ugly, shape destroying skins, and the hunger and fever fiend, Monday, the Queer Lady Fate had much more pathetically beautiful. Denied her stern resolve to find the pole and the attractions of her, she was a most feminine person.

We nursed back the girl, now that the incentive for keeping up was partially removed, grew sanity in, and after nine days on the back track we came across a deserted shanty that had been a vantage point on our northward trip and pressed to stay there until she was some recovered. We knew something of her struggle now as we had found her alone. Her mind was gone temporarily.

I was worried, and had been for some time, about Arters. His gaunt face had metamorphosed into a pinched, weird caricature of his former leanness, and if I spoke to him suddenly he started obviously and fidgeted an answer. Occasionally he broke out into a babble of meaningless sounds, apropos of nothing, over in our arctic world. He would sometimes catch himself at the and dash shamefacedly.

Arters was now again back in the rickety chair across the table from me, mumbling incoherently and with his great knotted hands clinching and unclinching spasmodically.

This deserted shack, erected by some forgotten voyager who, Providence knows, how, had got timber enough together for that same purpose, was the home of our first food cache. We had now eaten down to almost the last of our pemmican. Tomorrow we would dig up our treasure, enough at last as until we reached not too distant civilization.

Arters suddenly ceased his mad jumble of words. He pillowed his head on his arms and slept. I yawned, and, despite my resolve to stay awake against my mad comrade, the rhythmic breathing of the two sleepers lulled me to an unconscious condition.

I was awakened by a gentle shake of the arm. The frightened eyes of Ruth Proctor stared into mine. All illness seemed to have vanished from her. "He is dead," she gasped and pointed an eloquent finger at the still form opposite me.

An investigative hand touching the iced flesh of him testified to the truth of this.

With infinite tact Miss Proctor came over and placed a soft little hand in my own. "It will be little bother to you," she said simply. "The snow shrines has left me. What—what shall we do with"— The tears sprang from the black depths of her eyes, and she turned her head away, unable to complete the sentence.

"We must leave him here," I answered. "We have only one sled, you know. Later I will return for him."

"No, I can't," she trembled, and the face in her arms and abandoned herself to grief.

It devolved upon me to still the wail in my own heart and be practical.

"Then," I whispered, so close to her that I felt her fragrant breath brush my face as she raised pathetic eyes to me, "What is done cannot be undone."

In what would be the morning in the United States I went forth and dug for our scarce food supply and—dug in vain! Some vandal had plundered it during our absence.

With a heavy heart I returned to the shack. The girl stared interrogatively at my empty hands.

"Looted," I ventured briefly. What good for me to put off the truth? Inevitably she would have to know.

"I am sorry for your sake," she answered, and again an inexplicable look came into her eyes.

"We must go at once," I warned. "We have enough provisions for about 300 days."

After a meager meal I hitched the dogs to Arters' sled long since been laid at rest and went back for the girl, who was donning her heavy arctic coat and mittens. A noise caused me to leap to the door of the hut just in time to see my brother, mad, fiendish streaks of gray, speeding across the snow in pursuit of that rara avis, an arctic hare.

Yelping excitedly, they refused to respond to my cries—in fact, it is doubtful if they heard me. With a heavy heart I remembered that everything was lashed to the sledge.

I turned despairingly. The dogs were gone. They might return; more likely they would not. The arctic hare—more wolf than dog—is an unknown quantity.

In the open door, as I raised my eyes, I saw the girl. I knew from the pallor of her face that she had seen all, but I attempted a brave smile.

"They will return," I spoke reassuringly.

"Perhaps," she said softly. "I know them and their ways, you must remember." She smiled at me bravely.

Suddenly my arms were about her. I know not how it happened.

"My love," I said passionately, "must we die here just when we have found each other?" At last I had fathomed the secret in the eyes of her.

"Dearest," she said, looking up at last from my shoulder, "you will never know how as I do. Search again for your supplies. I have a belief—I can't tell why—that you will find them."

I looked. Sure enough, they were not two feet from where I had hunted.

Luck now clayed us with her favors. That night the dogs came whining to the door, and—oh, marvel!—the sledge, though overturned, was with them.

"I told you," complained, "some good came out of it, for I am sure had the dogs not run away I would not have had the courage to seek."

And the lips of her came close—closer!

The trip was done in safety. The world explorer was given over to my ship and no longer, however, did—thanks to a venturing, gold hunting comrade, my wife.

CHANCES AT BRIDGE.

Interesting Combinations Worked Out by a Mathematician.

The first man to deal seriously with mathematical problems was Pascal, the famous French mathematician. Pascal Moivre, who supplied all of Hoyle's figures in Hoyle's celebrated treatise on whist. Sir Isaac Newton is reported to have said that Pascal Moivre was a far greater mathematician than himself was, but De Moivre's figures were all calculated on whist and not on bridge. Quite recently however, R. F. Foster, a no mean authority on mathematics and games of chance, has been experimenting on the doctrine of chances at bridge and has arrived at the following very interesting conclusions.

When you hold thirteen cards it is quite obvious that your partner must hold thirteen of the remaining thirty-nine, but it appears that the thirteen cards in your partner's hand may be grouped in 8,122,425,444 different ways.

When you hold one honor your partner will hold one or more of the four remaining honors ten times out of twenty-five.

He will hold two or more of the four remaining honors ten times out of twenty-five.

She Was Inquisitive.

"We are all more or less scientific," one woman declared, "for Mrs. Curie was recently awarded the Albert medal of the Royal Society of Arts for the discovery of radium." "Any boy who wants to know what makes the wheel go round is a natural philosopher or some new force, inquisitiveness is an essential to scientific research." As a matter of fact, I will be inquisitive, and on more than one occasion she ran downstairs to find out by inquiries and her father's house and by personal studies in making experiments. Instead of finding a playful boy who was the greatest happiness in watching her pretty head at work. Ultimately she went to Paris and there met Professor Curie, and together they made the great discovery of radium.—London Standard.

New Supply of Cedar.

Some time ago it was feared that cedar had become so scarce that a German chemist had discovered a process for its treatment, whereby a substitute was obtained for the cedar wood of lead pencils. "The chemist's discovery," says the London Globe, "is not likely to rob out as production, as more cedar than ever is now in sight of the discovery in Germany. East Africa of a magnificent forest of cedar trees. Already several consignments of cedar logs have reached Hamburg, and it is said that the future of the cedar pencil industry is assured."

German Red Tape.

His widow, who is destitute, has now sent in a claim to Frau Koelpin, the widow, demanding 8 shillings, reported to be the cost of the accident on removing the blood stains from the railway carriage. The 8 shillings from Frau Koelpin that if she does not pay she will be prosecuted against.—London Chronicle.

Ravages of White Ants.

African white ants have caused the ruin of a castle in Japan by hollowing out the supporting pillars and have done serious damage to the foundations of some of the fortresses. It is feared by the military authorities that unless a way to exterminate the ants is found the forts along the Kii and Awaji rivers may be destroyed, and also the temples and other ancient buildings of Kioto.

B'o-od-Poisoning From Cut Finger.

SERIOUS CONDITION RELIEVED BY ZAM-BUK.

Mr. Jas. Davey, of The Elbice Avenue, Winnipeg, says: "A few months since I had a bad cut poisoned finger through the tinsel, use of Christmas trees. The deep gash across the knuckle on the first joint of the right hand, by opening it, lobs or can one evening. I suffered at first from intense pain, and pain, but had no idea it would become a serious wound. However, in about two days I had a bad attack of blood-poisoning, and arm to the elbow had became inflamed, and the fingers was also discolored, showing signs of blood-poisoning. The pain was dreadful and I was forced to call in a doctor to attend me.

"The wound on the knuckle had been poisoned deeply, and the dust and dirt about the furrances and boilers. I then decided to start Zam-Buk treatment, and having first bathed the finger, I applied the healing balm. It soothed the pain almost instantly, and by the next day there was a great improvement. In a few days through perseverance with Zam-Buk, a complete cure had been brought about.

Sores of all similar cases could be quoted, and the surest precaution is to keep Zam-Buk handy in the house, so that it is immediately a cut or burn or bruise is received.

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, eczema, blood-poison, rodent sore, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions, and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse imitations and substitutes.

HOFFMAN'S GREAT PAINTING.

A Picture That May Not Be Reproduced on Postcards.

Visitors to Dresden invariably lay in a supply of picture postcards representing some of the art treasures of the famous Zwinger museum, but there is one they are never able to purchase. This is Hoffman's "Christ before the Temple," sometimes called "Christ Among the Doctors."

This picture is everywhere known, for Hoffman's "Christ" has been reproduced in stained glass windows in many American churches. It represents the boy Jesus conversing with the philosophers.

The prohibition of the picture's reproduction on postcards was established by the painter himself. He permits the sale of larger copies, however, and to these, when requested, he attaches his signature for a mark, about 25 cents. Occasionally he receives for his signature he gives to the poor of Dresden. As he demands upon him to sign the copies of his great work e e many, the gain to person of unfortunate financial condition is great.

Hoffman is still living in Dresden, but he is an elderly man and is not seen soon in the streets of the city. He dwells in the fame of the picture.

"Christ in the Temple" is probably the most valuable of the modern canvases in the Zwinger museum. Indeed there is perhaps only one other picture in the gallery that is more valuable. That is, of course, Raphael's "Sistine Madonna."—Exchange.

QUIET GAME OF CHESS.

How It Is Played Every Night at Uncle Bill's.

The stranger in town stood back and watched the chess game at Uncle Bill McCurry's cottage hotel, and his soul was filled with wonder.

Uncle Bill and Postmaster Raymond were playing their night game of chess, and nobody but the stranger paid any attention, because they saw it every night.

"Check," said Uncle Bill. The colonel scowled.

"You took that move back," he asserted indignantly. "I saw it with a knight and then you shoved it back and moved your bishop."

"I didn't," said Uncle Bill. "I had my hand on the knight all the time."

"You did not," shouted Uncle Bill. "What d'ye mean by that? You sneaked that one up there. You know you did."

"I didn't," stormed the colonel. "It was there all the time."

"Cheat!" shouted Uncle Bill. "You're a cheat and a low, sneaking crook. Anyway, you're checkmated." The colonel peered at the board savagely.

Then the game ended right with one hand and slyly shoved his queen with the other.

Uncle Bill shifted his castle with his left hand and placed a knight and seven squares away.

"Check!" he said. Then the colonel rose, his knees knocking over the chessboard. Uncle Bill rose simultaneously and scattered black and yellow chessmen all over the hotel office with one wild sweep of his arm. The game was separated and stormed out opposite doors, each making bloodcurdling threats.

"You needn't bother," said one of the loafers as the stranger left the interface as the stranger left the interface stared after them. "They do that every night. They have to have a new set last Sunday night."—Galveston News.

Blondin Makes Denial Now

Didn't Make Speeches In Favor of Nationalist Programme--Beland Decribes Way In Which Vote Was Split in Recent Election

Ottawa, Nov. 24.—When the debate on the address was resumed yesterday afternoon, Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, continued his criticism of the campaign in Drummond and Arthabaska. In fact the entire session was devoted to a discussion of the methods employed by both parties in the recent byelection, and charge followed upon counter-charge by Conservatives and Liberals until the amendment of F. D. Monk (Jacques Cartier), upon which the discussion mainly rose, was lost to view.

Mr. Brodeur read more reports of speeches by Nationalists in the campaign, and said he sought to show the influence of these speeches upon the election. They had carried on an incendiary campaign against British connection and Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He quoted from a statement of Tancred Marcil, who said he had lived in a parish where the English had desecrated a church and had their bones from its sacred vessels. He quoted from a father speech in which Marcil described Earl Grey as a creature of the late Cecil Rhodes. The Minister of Marine defended the Governor-General. It was a shame that this sort of campaign was being carried on, and he asserted, it did not represent the feeling of the Province of Quebec.

Contrariwise, a different campaign was being conducted in Ontario where Sir Wilfrid Laurier was declared to be anti-British.

Continuing, amid Liberal and Conservative cheers, Mr. Brodeur read the advice tendered to the electors of Drummond and Arthabaska, R. L. Borden advised them to vote according to their conscience, which satisfied the Minister, as it showed that Mr. Borden did not appreciate the anti-British appeals that had been made. Not so, he maintained, in the case of Hon. George E. Foster, Hon. Robert Rogers and others, who had advised Conservatives to vote against Laurier and the navy. This implied direct support to the Nationalist candidate, so accomplish the embarrassment of the Government.

Dealing with the amendment of Mr. Monk, the Minister declared that the creation of a navy did not change our relations with the Mother Country, any more than when Canada provided the land forces for Halifax and Esquimalt, when Great Britain withdrew her troops from North America. Mr. Monk proposed was not in accordance with historical record, as was instanced when Canada took over the fisheries protective service, and even the important question of confederation was not submitted to the people. The navy policy was an affirmation of Canadian autonomy.

P. E. Blondin (Champlain), one of the Quebec Conservatives, who had been pilloried by Government speakers for alleged appeals to racial prejudice during the campaign, said I wish to declare from my seat in this House and before the country that, during the whole of the Drummond and Arthabaska campaign, the Conservative members who took part in it were true and faithful to our King and our country, in conformity with the principles of the Liberal-Conservative party.

He took neither credit nor discredit for the result of the byelection, because, before the campaign opened, the people were against the navy bill. He had heard Government workers remark that things were going bad because of the damned navy bill." He denied that he said Quebec had nothing to do with other provinces although something in that sense might have been uttered. Liberal speakers had sought to make the people believe that other provinces would retaliate, if they dared express their free will, that the people of other provinces were narrow and fanatical.

Dr. H. S. Beland (Liberal, Beauce), said he had not intended to take part in the debate, but was obliged to do so in view of the remarks of the previous speaker. If Mr. Blondin did not make the statement attributed to him, Dr. Eugene Paquet (L'Islet) must have made them, for they were the only two speakers on that occasion at Victoriaville. He was sure that the House and country realized that disloyal language had been used by the supporters of Mr. Gilbert.

Then Dr. Beland proceeded to give to the House a story of the Drummond-Arthabaska campaign, as he saw it. Mr. Gilbert, he said, presented himself to the electors as a Liberal, who would support Sir Wilfrid Laurier on all questions but that of the navy.

Armand-Lavergne had said at several meetings that the only way to please Sir Wilfrid Laurier was to vote for Gilbert, because, when the Nationalist candidate was elected, he would be able to go to Earl Grey and Mr. Borden and say: "See, the people have declared themselves against the naval policy. We must repeal the bill." Even the Nationalists had appealed to the instincts of the electors and had tried to frighten fathers and mothers by the bogey of conscription.

Nantel (Conservative, Terrebonne) spoke in French. He said they had told the electors that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not a god, nor yet a saviour, but just a plain man, with a love for liberty and nationality, given him by English lords, and that they were perfectly entitled to rebuke him when he made a mistake. The people of Drummond-Arthabaska had heeded that advice, he said, and the victory was the result.

J. P. Turcotte (Quebec County), also speaking in French, explained that the incident of the election had no real significance.

Mr. Pelletier moved the adjournment of the debate.

NEW POINT RAISED.

Hope For Federenke' Exists In His Counsel's Discovery.

Winnipeg, Nov. 24.—The argument on the Federenko writ of habeas corpus was resumed yesterday morning before Judge Robson, retained in a complete hung sprung, when counsel for the defence pointed out that in the evidence of requisition of the Russian Government it was stated that the crime was a political one. It was the regulation that under Canadian law obtaining at the time, all trouble between civilians and police came under the head of political crime. Special treatement is devised for the Government, and there are special provisions made for arrest and trial in such cases.

Judge Robson considered the point of importance, and read from the words on the seal attached to the documents in translation, and pending this adjourned court until to-day.

Joe Nick killed the Gordon woman, and attempted to conceal his crime by throwing the body in a burning log in the woods. At 10 years, the near-point is about three inches; at 35, about seven inches; at 44, about 11 inches, or ordinary reading distance. The power of accommodation gradually declines, until at about the age of 70 it disappears. For this reason convex lenses are required at about 45 to do the work of the lens in accommodation.

An eye shorter than normal requires greater exercise of the ciliary muscle to give a focus. Such an eye is hyperopic, and requires convex lenses. The opposite condition is found in myopia, where the eye is longer than normal, and requires concave lenses. In astigmatism there is an unequal curvature of the cornea. THROUGH A WINDOW.

Last evening a large pane of glass was broken in a window of an up-town fish store. Upon investigation, it was ascertained that a dog had been left in the store and evidently objecting to being made a prisoner, effected his escape through the pane of glass. Inspiring Addresses On Missionary Work

Follow Fine Banquet

ell called upon the following gentlemen, as representatives of the various churches, to give in a few words the report of, what their respective churches were doing toward this movement:

Rev. Walter Alford stated that Christ Church (Anglican) had progressed and increased their missionary giving about 30 per cent. owing to the movement.

Rev. R. Tompleton, representing John Street Presbyterian Church, said that that church had in the past year increased in its giving by at least 50 or 40 per cent.

Rev. H. B. Kenny, pastor of the Tabernacle (Methodist) church, said it was the intention of forming an association in that church.

Rev. Dr. Wallace stated that the Baptist church had materially increased in its giving towards missions.

Mr. John Elliott, representing St. Thomas' Church, said the increase in giving for missions in that church this year was 50 to 60 per cent.

Mr. B. Mallory stated that St. Andrew's Church was doing its share in contributing to missions.

Mr. A. E. Bailey said that Hillcrest Church would do its share in forwarding funds for the movement.

Mr. A. M. Hubly stated that the increase in mission giving in Emmanuel Reformed Church had increased by 100 per cent.

Mr. C. M. Reid said the Laymen's Missionary Movement was going well in Bridge Street Church. The offering this year was $5.47 per member.

MR. H. K. CASKEY.

Mr. H. K. Caskey, of Toronto, Canadian Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, was called up on and gave an address. He congratulated the churches of this city up on the excellent service they were rendering in missionary work. The address Mr. Caskey was touched upon by the speaker, who said the Northwest was being populated fast and we must look to it that that portion of the Dominion is well cared for spiritually. We had a great responsibility resting upon us, but would no doubt be equal to it. Heroic work on missionary lines was also needed in New Ontario among the lumbering and mining camps, as well as in the far off fields.

Colonel Halford, upon being called on, was cordially received, and in his opening remarks referred to the fact that he was at home in a Canadian audience. Being a native of a part of that country between which and Canada there was only an imaginary line, he was glad that Canada was proud of it. (loud applause). In speaking of the Laymen's Missionary Movement he said that he would like to this steady and persistent work, a christian army of christians of all denominations could and were uniting. A vital and vitalising religion was necessary, if we have it we live, if we are following it to-day. We belong to each other and to Him who is the living Word. This great missionary movement will go on and forward until the last review comes when we will with the evangelical for Christ. He brought them greetings from the west and told them of what were of a most encouraging nature. This movement is going forward there and was accomplishing much good. The gospel truth was being realized and the coming of the King was assured. Paganism was being weighed and taste death until the whole world shall have bowed at the feet of the Saviour of mankind. In conclusion he enjoined upon all not to fall short in the fullest devotion of this service to Almighty God. (Loud applause.)

Mr. Davidson, K.C., gave a most practical address on the keynote of which was that in this great movement men from every rank of life, men of faith, men of action, and men of deeds are needed. We want men who are giving out to others and such men will have their names emblazoned on the scroll of fame. This laymen's Missionary Movement was a mighty force which is moving onward.

A GREAT BLESSING.

It is a movement which has created a brotherly and fraternal feeling. It has proved a great blessing to those who are engaged in it, and it has tended to unite the world with christian workers. That the movement was accomplishing great good there was not the shadow of a doubt. It is not a retrograde but a forward movement and it must go forward. What does christianist mean? It means, if we belong at all, sacrifice. We have to look out and go out, and by doing this we are doing good to others and making others better and it will make us better and more religious. We have something to do with the building of Canada, as we have a chance to do so now, as the great Northwest is fast populating. There is one secret in life and that is we can make our own future, so see to it that that future is for the upbuilding of character. No man can find his life without losing it. We must lose ourselves in Christ in order to realise that life is worth living. This is the secret that is causing success to link the Laymen's Missionary Movement. This is a call from the Master. We should transmit life everywhere, and especially in countries where the spiritual life is dormant. Will we answer the call to duty? Three stands one who has called for 1000 years, for sacrifice and work in His cause. Will His work be finished or left undone. Let Jesus Christ finish his work and let us be instruments in helping to finish that grand and noble work. (Loud applause.)

At the conclusion of the address Mr. J. Elliott moved, seconded by Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, the following resolution, which was carried by a standing vote:—

We, the laymen of the evangelical churches of the city of Belleville, united, resolve

That we rejoice in the progress being made in mission work in Canada and throughout the world, and hear with much satisfaction of increased giving of money and service throughout Canada and elsewhere.

And, further, while we feel that a fair advance has been made in Belleville, bringing the total offerings up to nearly $3.00 per church member, that we do not consider this a satisfactory showing for what Belleville can and ought to do. Therefore, resolved that we unite in endeavoring to bring our church contributions to missions over five dollars per member, and use our best efforts to produce this result.

Col. Ponton, in an appropriate but brief address, referred to the pleasure it was to listen to the speakers of the evening and moved a vote of thanks to the speakers which was seconded by Mr. S. Burrows.

The vote was carried unanimously and fittingly responded to by Colonel Halford.

The singing of the doxology and the pronouncing of the benediction by the Rev. R. H. Truman brought the meeting to a close.

In The Wide World Of Woman.

Which Will It Be?

One of These Women to Be Mistress of Executive Mansion at Albany.

© 1910, by American Press Association.

MISS. STINSON—MRS. DIX.

No matter whether a Republican or a Democrat is elected governor of New York state, the executive mansion at Albany is sure to have a charming and accomplished chatelaine.

Mrs. Stinson, wife of the Republican candidate, is a highly intellectual woman. One of her grandfathers was a valedictorian at Yale, and her fathers and brothers are all Yale men. She is also a great-great-granddaughter of Roger Sherman, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and is therefore a member of the National Society of Colonial Dames.

Mrs. Stinson is a fine horsewoman. She is devoted to charity work. Until recently she was an active member of the charity organization of New York city and at present is vice president of Lincoln hospital, to which institution she gives much of her time during the winter.

Mrs. Dix, wife of the Democratic candidate, who was Miss Gertrude Thomson of Thomson, N. Y., which town was named in honor of Luton Thomson, Mrs. Dix's father, is a handsome woman, who is always governed in the most French complexions. Like Mrs. Taft, she is a great globe trotter, having traveled extensively abroad in her motor.

Doubtless Mrs. Dix will admit that she has still a hankering for Pine Needles, bits of furniture that were the pride of the farmhouses back in the days when Burgoyne's army was encamped so close to the front door of Pine Needles that one can step from the drive on to what is left of the old Revolutionary earthworks.

Should Mrs. Dix become mistress of the Albany mansion the social life will be very gay, for she has a bevy of charming nieces to help her entertain.

Things That Kerosene Will Do.

Kerosene is an unpleasantly odor ous commodity, but it has many uses that the housekeeper should know of. Here are some of them:

A little kerosene rubbed over the nickel on the kitchen range will clean it better than any metal polish and leave no scratches.

Tar kerosene with your silver polish. The silver will be much much easier.

Apply kerosene to a burn if the skin is not broken; it will take the fire out and give relief.

Try cleaning finger marks or other dirt spots on paint with a little kerosene. It will remove the dirt and not injure the paint like soap.

Use a little kerosene on a clean cloth to wipe off the top of the mop boards. It will not disfigure the wall paper like soap and water.

Add a few drops of kerosene to the water in which you wash your windows. It will make them look clear and bright.

If your sink gets rusty wipe it over with kerosene.

Clean the shoe under the store with kerosene and note the result.

Bernhardt Laughs at Doctors.

Sarah Bernhardt, the great actress, says she preserves her youthfulness by doing just exactly the opposite of what her doctor tells her to do. When asked how she preserved her strength and youthful appearance she said: "Probably it is because I am always working. I go to bed no diet. I eat just what I like—just what I feel I want to eat. And, yes, there sit; I sleep a great deal—and, ever so much! I don't usually get up early. I take all the sleep I want. I am never ill. I always feel fit, and if ever a doctor tells me to do anything I never do it. Today I was busy all the morning with my secretary. One hundred and forty-eight letters I read and answered—yes, 148. I thought I should never finish. Oh, what a temper I was in—a real temper! It's a happy thing you didn't see me this morning."

FRIBBLES OF FASHION.

Armide Laces and Bandings For Dress Trimmings.

For dress yokes Armide laces have superseded those of Irish and dotted nets. It is a thin lace with dainty floral designs wandering in an aimless fashion over the surface.

In new portumes there is a variety called "swirl" that is charming as to color, but expensive, $6.50 an ounce bottle. Going some?

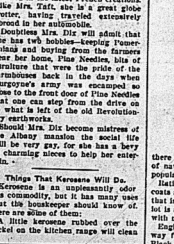
there are no less than twelve shades of navy blue alone, which shows the popularity of this color.



Batiste is a fabric much used for coats and suits. It has a boucle effect that is most pleasing. Crowfoot chevlot is a good material that is meeting with much favor

English worsteds are in price all the way from 50 cents per yard to $3.50. Black and white effects are smart.

Jacquard poplin comes in evening as well as in street colors and is a delightful material, $1.75 a yard.

Seal leather bags with clasps formed of mother of pearl plaques studded with silver nail heads are among the newest bags.

Reefer coats suit the small boys so well that they are always favorite garments. The model illustrated is very smart and very simple. The fronts are faced, the collar is made of velvet, and the coat is rolled over to form lapels, but if liked the neck can be made high. (PATTERN CHOLLET.

UP TO DATE STYLES.

Brocade Trims Taller Modes This Season.

Many of the smartest tailor modes show introductions of brocade even on the severest models. Some of these brocades in design and mellowness indicate that they have been extracted from heirloom chests.

Never has velvet of every sort, color and description enjoyed such a vogue. Not only are there coats and frocks of it, but it is used on cloth gowns of all kinds, on evening costumes and on hats.

The shoemaker has followed the fashionable trend, and velvet boots and pumps are essential possessions of the modish maid and matron.

A new idea in motor millinery is the coque feather bonnet in the style of those covered with pheasant's plumage, but more fluffy in appearance, as the feathers are not laid flat.

One of the newest evening wraps is of satin, just gathered at the side seams to give a full effect. A wide embroidered band is simulated a stole crosses the shoulders at the back and is continued down the front.

The illustration shows a charmingly girlish waist which is just as smart and attractive as it can be. As seen in the small cut, the waist is extremely good style when made with poke and long sleeves.

VANITY'S VISIONS.

The Favorite Cut For Evening Gowns is a U Shaped Bodice.

The favorite cut of the simple dinner gown, for hotel or restaurant has an exaggerated Dutch yoke. A square yoke is generally becoming, while the V shape is somewhat smarter, the V a front, unless cut quite low and filled in with chiffon, being seldom worn unveiled. A variant is of square lecolletage with a deep but narrow V the back is smart.

Often the distinctive touch of the evening gown is the one rose worn on the corsage.

There is a new sackcloth material in imitation of coarse packing canvas that is expensive and very smart for suits. It is a mixture of silk and wool.

Scarfs are growing in favor for day wear with tailor costumes the supple satin scarf is worn.

Articles of old furniture are sometimes made to appear like new by washing them with lime water and then applying a coat of oil.

Henry rope cords are used as a finish to dressy capes, whether of broadcloth or satin.

The skirt made with a circular flounce is in high favor. It is pretty and graceful and suits the fashionable materials perfectly. The skirt illustrated may be used for suitings and for silks and lightweight woolens.

WHAT YOU'LL WEAR.

Boots That the Smart Girls Are Just "Crazy" About.

One of the smartest boots brought out for many a day is high cut, made of brown suede calf with fourteen brown pearl buttons. The facing has neat perforations, there is a medium short fore part, and the heel is the modish two inch Spanish one. It costs $10.

Another new boot about which the girls are "crazy" is all of patent leather, and this, too, has fourteen pearl buttons, black ones. The top is slanting and the arch very high to carry a two inch Spanish heel. Like most of the handsome boots of the season, the side is trimmed very close and the toe cap and facing are perforated. The price is $9.50.

Silk suede is a new material that is causing late fever for beadin gowns. It is a supple fabric and pretty and artistic manipulation.

There are delightful velvet scarfs fashioned from black chiffon velvet lined with white satin.

The skirt that is made with seams at the sides only is one of the very newest and smartest. This one is trimmed with buttons, but such finish is entirely optional. The model is suitable for all materials heavy enough to be made in so severe a style.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

The new waists to be worn with tailored suits as well as the waists of costumes are of chiffon or marquisette and lace. The Irish Tyrolier silk is a material much used for the separate blouse.

The jumper or magyar style is one of the most favored for waists, and these waists have a peasant sleeve, with some kind of a cuff, either of lace or embroidery.

The new straight plaited skirt that is joined to a smoothly fitted upper portion is greatly in vogue. There is absolutely no fullness in this model over the hips, but the flounce provides a becoming flare. The wool crape material makes the model illustrated, with effective trimming of buttons and loops.

WHITE SLAVE SHE ALLEGES

Girl Tells a Pittsburg Jury She Was Hawked About The Country.

IN MANY CITIES

Woman She Accuses Has Fled To Russia-Two Men on Trial.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 21.—Rachel Weiner, a good-looking girl eighteen years old, took the stand to-day in the criminal court as the chief witness against Jesse Bluestone, who was once in the Legislature, and Samuel Moonsein, a dance-hall owner, who are being prosecuted on a white slave charge. Sadie Golden, the woman principal in the case, has fled to Russia to avoid warrants for her arrest.

The Weiner girl says she was decoyed from her Pittsburg home by the Golden woman, who hawked her about the country seeking a price. After she had been missing some weeks her brother last summer tracked her to Chicago and brought her home, and on the strength of her story Bluestone and Moonsein were arrested.

The evidence the girl gave to-day was such that the judge cleared the courtroom of all spectators. The girl said she had been taken from Pittsburg to Boston, where she remained some time, and was then taken to Buffalo, and thence to Chicago.

"From Boston," she said, "Sadie Golden took me to Buffalo and placed me in a resort on Oak street. And all the time I was there I sent money to the men in Pittsburg. Sadie Golden seemed well acquainted in Buffalo, and I had a fight with her there because I wanted to go home."

The prosecution evidently has something in mind concerning the Buffalo episode which has not yet developed, for the questions assent the girl's stay there were most searching. It is said witnesses from Buffalo may be produced by the prosecution to-morrow.

KILLED MAN IN MISTAKE

Lumber Camp The Scene of A Terrible Tragedy Yesterday

MURDERER CAUGHT

Declares He Was Mixed up in A Famous Crime In 1878.

(Intelligencer Special.)

BLIND RIVER, Ont., Nov. 25.—William Carroll, aged 60, height six feet two inches, who says he was mixed up in the famous Biddulph murder in 1878, is under arrest here charged with murder by Joseph Taillon, of Three Rivers, with an axe in Waldie Bros.' lumber camp near here Tuesday night. He was brought in here by fellow lumbermen and tied up with a rope. They secured him after a terrible struggle. Carroll says he killed Taillon in mistake for another man whom he accused of stealing his clothes.

LINDSAY DOWN IN THE DUMPS

Promoter Has Not Left Address And They Cannot Write

HOLE IS THEIR YET

But Citizens of Lindsay Don't Know What To Do With a Hole in The Ground.

LINDSAY, On., Nov. 21.—Lindsay's loot and shoe and glove factory and tannery bubble, to employ 375 hands has "gone bust," and the fairy tale is everybody's mouth.

As yet no trace has been found of the gentlemanly, boarding young man who with his optimism took the town by storm, and left behind him obligations of $15,000 or more.

The story that Thomas criminated several Lindsay people is not true. It may have tried to sell stock, but it did not go. The hole in the ground is still to be seen, the office furniture is still intact, and the laborers are still awaiting the return of Thomas to pay them their wages.

No fiction reads better than the story of the event of the Cleveland man to Lindsay and the factory proposition. The popular saying is: "Has anybody here seen Thomas?" and the answer is in the negative.

BOWS TO WILL OF JACK TARS

Brazil Knuckles Down To Demands of Her Sailors.

COUNTRY HUMILIATED

Government Brought To Time At Mouth of Its Own Guns.

(Intelligence Special.)

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 25.—While the mutinous sailors surrendered unconditionally, they certainly didn't do it 'till they had brought President Fonseca and his government to time at the mouths of their own guns. At emergency sessions this morning Congress and Senate knuckled down almost unanimously to the demands of the crews of the warships. During the night the city was in a state of siege, with occasional shells from the Dreadnoughts dropping in.

The answer came at high noon to-day when the crews of two of the biggest warships turned upon their superiors. It is reported that the captain of the battleship Minas Ceraes was killed.

Following the fighting the mutineers made a formal demand for increased pay and the abolition of corporal punishment, and then withdrew to the outer harbor.

The battleship San Paulo and Minas Ceraes, both powerful Dreadnoughts, were built in England for Brazil. They were in London at the time of the Portuguese uprising, the newly-elected Brazilian President, Marshal Hermes Fonseca, being on board one of them. It was these foreign warships which first offered a refuge to Manuel and his mother.

STOPS ENGINE JUST IN TIME

(Intelligencer Special.)

RACINE, Wis., Nov. 25.—With his train going forty miles an hour toward Chicago, carrying three hundred passengers, Engineer Michael Crowley of the C. G. W. Ry. expired suddenly and was running into an open switch when his fireman noticed that something was wrong and stopped the train just in time to prevent a terrible catastrophe.

BARGE A SHORE AT COBURG PORT, BELLEVILLE O. K.

COBOURG, Nov. 21.—The steam barge Jung, with the barge Sligo in tow, bound from Belleville to Toronto loaded with crushed stone, put back during yesterday's storm to Cobourg for shelter. The tow barge missed the pier, let go her anchor, and went on the beach just west of the harbor last night. The Cobourg lifeboat crew with Capt. Rooney in command, went out to her, but the crew of the barge decided to remain on her. The lifeboat crew kept watch during the night, as a heavy sea was rolling, and went out again to the Sligo this morning.

STAY AT BELLEVILLE REPAIRED.

KINGSTON, Nov. 24.—The steamer Belleville cleared from the dry-dock this morning, after completing repairs necessitated from running ashore at Grafton, near Cobourg, a couple of weeks ago. The damage done was heavy, ten frames being broken and five plates store in. The Belleville will go to Sorel into winter quarters.

MELBA ENTHUSIASTIC OVER CANADA'S WEST

Tells How She Sang In Towns That Didn't Exist A Few Years Ago.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Full of enthusiasm over her trip through Canada, Mme. Melba is here for a few days, pausing for a rest in her concert tour.

"There are some wonderful new towns in Canada," said Mme. Melba. "I went west as far as Edmonton. Think of a place that is only between four and six years old and which was able to give an audience of 2,000 people!"

"Your experience has not been like a one night stand tour?" was suggested.

"No, I have made the tour very comfortable. I have had a private car and have enjoyed it. But I must tell you Western Canada is the most colossal place I ever saw in my life. The last time I went through it, five years ago, it was so different. So many places have sprung up that even didn't exist then."

Melba plans on making a big opera venture in Australia. "The idea is a bobby of mine," she says, "and I confess I am doing it more for kudos than for whatever money there may be in it. I am an Australian. All the chorus will be Australian singers. Much of the orchestra I shall take from Europe. I shall do about sixteen operas in as many weeks."

READY FOR BIG GAME

(Intelligencer Special.)

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 25.—This city is preparing for the biggest day in its history to-morrow when it is expected nearly ten thousand people will view the Tigers-Varsity battle for the rugby championship of Canada. The field will undoubtedly be very muddy, which fact hurts the Toronto players' chances. Independent experts from Ottawa and Montreal are betting strong on the Tigers. In addition to this, those who can see the game there will be the scouts of other rugby teams, and the excitement which will follow, will prove fair trouble, and it is suggested that a battalion of special constables be sworn in.

SUFFRAGETTES GET SENTENCE THEY DESERVE

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 25.—"You disorderly women have been treated much too leniently in the past," said Sir Albert Derutzen, police magistrate, this morning, when sentencing twenty "Suffragette" each to two months hard labor for smashing windows in Government offices. Some with tears and some with laughter, the women were marched off to prison while their comrades raised the cry: "See the martyred heroines go."

"THE ETERNAL FEMININE"

Writer Says She Must Retain Qualities Which Makes Her Charm.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—"The Death of the Eternal Feminine," is the name of a startling article contributed to the current issue of La Revege by M. Jean Finot, a well-known writer on Philosophy and Sociology.

M. Finot speculates on the effect on women when they step into the arena where men are struggling, and asks if it is possible, under such conditions, for her to keep her place on the pedestal where man has placed her, or will she lose her feminine qualities and her charm. M. Finot answers his own question and says she will be compelled to retain those qualities, which make her charm because love has to remain triumphant and the race must continue.

BODY FOUND ON TRACK

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—The body of an unknown man terribly mangled by a train, with the head thrown twenty feet from the body, was found on the Grand Trunk tracks in the eastern end of the city at daylight. The man was apparently an Englishman about forty years of age, fair complexioned and well dressed.

WHAT KICK HAS HE?

Husband—You never kiss me except when you want money.

Wife—Well, isn't that often enough?

ACTRESS SETS STYLE IN EVENING GOWNS

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Simplicity is the word! Impossible! So it would seem from there are such gowns, and such are worn in the evening that.

Miss Helen Ware, an actress, has set the example for many fashionable ladies by appearing on the stage in gowns but'l along the simplest lines. And they are proving popular, for many of the frills and ribbons are being set to one side by well dressed women.

GIRLS' CHANCES OF MATRIMONY ON EARTH

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—A local paper publishes some interesting marriage statistics which, though dealing with France alone, would seem to apply to other industrial countries as well. Thousands girls all over the world, are working girls nowadays.

Of a thousand girls of marriageable age, very few stay at home to prepare for matrimony by learning to keep house, but having no "dot" to offer to their husbands, only 237 got married. Of a thousand stenographers, bookkeepers, saleswomen, etc., 600 got married. Of 600 female cooks, housekeepers and servant girls 400 married before their thirtieth year. Of 500 chorus girls dancers and little actresses 200 married ar.stocratically, while 165 became wives of other well-to-do men. Only 4 per cent. of female artists, sculptors, newspaper women and authoresses got married, and none of them married money to any considerable extent.

MURDERSIA WOMAN FOR SAKE OF ROSE

Young Man Sets Out On the Career of a "Distinguished Criminal."

FIRST CRIME HIS LAST

VIENNA, Nov. 21.—A young man of 20, refused a rose by a surrendered from whom he had demanded the flower, shot her dead on the spot in the street in a suburb of Vienna. At his trial yesterday t was related that he cause of cred penalty a commission of doctors pronounced him to be insane.

The young man met the unfortunate, who was only 15 years of age, in the street with a child and wearing a bunch of roses. On her refusal to give him one he took the revolver from his pocket and shot her four times.

ONTARIO PHYSICIANS.

(Intelligencer Special.)

The plant was purchased by the town in 1900, since then the commissioners have handed over to the town $50,158.32, while $27,348.37 has been written off for depreciation, and $14,001.73 spent in repairs. The net surplus of profits accruing during that period are $11,402.82. The capital a count today stands at $179,508, and the debenture debt or liabilities is $115,000.48.

London Daily Mail: Sir Robert Baden-Powell, replying to a correspondent who asked his views on smoking among boys, wrote: No boy ever smoked because he liked it; it is horrid at first. A boy learns to smoke because he thinks it a very "swagger" thing to do; it makes him—so he thinks—look like a man, when in reality he only looks like a little ass. I think most fellows see that now, and you very seldom see any but a regular "slopper" smoking nowadays. Boys who want to run well and do well in games, as well as at their work, are not quite such fools as to suck such filthy cigarettes which they know are poison, and do a lot of harm to their heart and wind.

MILK IS STOLEN FROM DOORS IN BELLEVILLE

A milk vendor of the city this morning, in conversation with a representative of The Intelligencer, stated that it was not necessary to refer to Kingston as a town in this city. The milk vendor in question stated that upon several occasion of late bottles of milk have been taken from the doors of residences on Alexander and streets adjoining, and in some cases the empty bottles have been returned. The milk is left at the places at an early hour in the morning and in many cases before the occupants are up. If the parties are detected they will no doubt be severely dealt with.

WILLIAM G. BROWN DIES FROM HIS INJURIES

When the accident befell William G. Brown in the G. T. R. yard here yesterday afternoon it was thought that the injuries sustained by the unfortunate man were of such a nature that death would ensue. Such proved to be the case. At 10.15 last night the unfortunate man passed away at the hospital. He was conscious until a few minutes before death ensued. The deceased was terribly injured in the lower part of the abdomen, a large hole being made in the body by what is thought to have been a draw-pin. The accident occurred as was detailed in last evening's issue.

Mr. Brown was a young man, being less than 26 years of age. His former home, was at Mount Forest, where members of his family reside. He had been about two years in the employ of the division of the Grand Trunk Railway as a fireman and was about to go out upon his engine when the lamentable accident overtook him. Although only known here for a comparatively short time, the deceased by his jovial manner had made many friends, and his untimely death is sincerely regretted by his fellow employees. Eighteen months ago he was married to Miss Wm. Dicks, of this city, and a most remarkable coincidence is "the fact that five years ago, on the 18th of this month, Mr. Brown's wife instantly killed at a spot near where her husband was fatally injured yesterday. This second affliction is a severe blow to Mrs. Brown, who will receive the sincere sympathy of many friends. She is again left a widow, with four young children. Mr. Brown had made application to the Belleville Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers.

After death ensued the remains were taken to Tickell & Son's undertaking establishment and prepared for burial. They were subsequently conveyed to the family residence, Station Road.

LOSES HIS WATCH

J. B. Brant Got In From Rochester Without His Time Piece.

J. B. Brant, who arrived in the city on Wednesday evening from Rochester, N.Y., reported to the police that some time last night he was relieved of a gold filled watch and chain. The party is unable to state just when the theft occurred, or where he was when he lost it. The police are making every effort to find the watch, but the prospects of recovering it are by no means bright.

OPPOSES PLAN TO HOLD UP REAL ESTATE MEN

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—Daniel Stroud, Esq., of Montreal, the owner of a valuable city block on Front Street, and a gentleman of very great intelligence and business experience, has written me a letter, from which I extract the following: "Replying, would state that I agree with you that it would not be right to make Front Street property owners pay a direct tax of forty per cent. and then their proportion of the remaining sixty per cent. general tax for the paving of Front Street."

In reply to Mayor Marsh, Mr. Stroud has in a letter stated: "When you propose to improve the city by paving only the main thoroughfare, the ONLY FAIR way, in my opinion, would be for the Council to make the cost a general tax. Looking at the matter from a merely business standpoint, while the paving of Front Street would be a great improvement, it will not mean more business to the merchants. Nor will it make Front Street property any more valuable. It is quality the people who will derive most benefit from the paving are the residents of Bellefville who do their shopping on Front Street, the farmers and others who use the roadway. The Council is composed of gentlemen who have but one month to serve in their official capacity. It is not within the bounds of human belief to think that these gentlemen would so far forget their duties to their constituents that they would attempt to force on the property owners a measure so repugnant to their views that nine-tenths of the property owners between the bridges have petitioned against the adoption of the course provided by the by-law. The Mayor has no more power to order a public improvement to be made than a nasty working at a dollar per day.

Yours truly,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.

VICE IN WINNIPEG, CHIEF OF POLICE TESTIFIES

WINNIPEG, Nov. 24.—Chief of Police McRae, who has borne the chief brunt of the attack against conditions in Winnipeg regarding the social evil and the existence of a segregated area, told apparently all he knew about the matter on the witness-stand this afternoon at the investigation being held by Mr. Justice Dubuc. The investigation is apparently chiefly concerned in learning just who is responsible for present conditions, and the exact circumstances under which the one or two Chief McRae Parlour streets was allowed to come into existence. Chief McRae frankly tells the story of the days of the Police Commission, showing that he acted under orders and on an explicit understanding. The abolition of the Police Commission, showing that he acted under orders and on an explicit understanding. The abolition of the Police Commission, showing that he acted under orders and on an explicit understanding. The abolition of the Police Commission, showing that he acted under orders and on an explicit understanding. The abolition of the Police Commission, which resulted in the starting of the colony in April, 1909, was influenced by a communication from Police Magistrate Hon. J. Mayne Daly, in which he stated that the records of his court showed immorality to be increasing in the city at an alarming rate since the closing of the Thomas street colony in 1904, especially among young girls of fourteen to seventeen, and among women not previously immoral. He had also ascertained that vice and crime were increasing terribly, and he felt that something must be done. He recommended to the Commission that the Chief of Police be given a free hand to act as he saw fit. The Commission then gave the Chief his instructions, as a result of which he had an interview with Minnie Woods, a leader among the demi-monde, as to a suitable location for a restricted district. Several locations were suggested, but he finally informed Minnie Woods that he thought Rachel street district the best.

They were not allowed to have music in the houses, and nothing distinctive to show the character of the house. Women were allowed to come up town, but must behave themselves and dress quietly. The whole district was under the control and supervision of the morality officers, who had a constable in charge. He had never visited the district personally, and never had been in one of the houses. While acting under the instructions of the Police Commission, the system had his approval. He held that the law must be enforced to the best ability of the police.

Liberal Party is Sick

Listen to the confession of a Liberal M.L.A., Mr. Godfrey Langlois, in his paper, Le Pays:

"Our party has met with a crushing defeat; and we must have the courage to show it. All will admit that our party is not what it was formerly, for the Liberals have certainly weakened during the past few years. A great number of partizans have raided the depository of the Government, spoilers have wrung from the ministry everything in their power for their own personal account, instead of remaining at their post as good soldiers of duty and progress. . . . As a matter of fact our party is gravely sick. It the minds of a great number of people. Discouragement has given place to mistrustfulness. Instead of the grand principles of a former day, we find keen appetites and personal aspirations impregnating the present entourage of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. There are too many people, in fact, who are trying to get rich at the expense of the country. There are too many advocates in Parliament who wish to don the ermine. Our Liberal newspapers instead of being allies of the Government, have been playing the role of servile domestics, and power has been used for the material satisfaction and advantages which it brings.

"We are both disabled and disorganised. In Montreal, for instance, the Liberals have no centre for carrying purposes, no centre for political action, and no cohesion in the ranks. As a matter of fact, there is nothing left except general dissatisfaction. We frequently hear of an election committee, but all this is a myth; for since fifteen years it is centred in the pocket of Senator Dandurand."

In short, whoever is Premier of Canada after the next general election Sir Wilfrid Laurier will not be.

To-Night's Meetings

According to announcements, three different meetings are to be held in the Council Chamber of the City Hall this evening at 8 o'clock. As all the gatherings are to be more or less of a public nature, it is not quite clear how this can be done satisfactorily. We assume, however, that the differ ences will find some way out of the difficulty which will be satisfactory to all concerned. As the aim of all the meetings is to promote the best interests of the city we trust that there will be no unpleasant clash when the hour of eight arrives.

The meetings called are those of the Board of Trade, the Property Owners' Association and one for the expression of views on the proposal of the C. N. R. to use five piers in the construction of its bridge across the Moira. It seems to us that the subject to be dealt with by the last named meeting is the most urgent one that the citizens of Belleville are called upon to deal with at the present time Other matters can afford to wait until this is disposed of. The Railway Commissioners will be here on Tuesday to ascertain the temper of the people on the matter, and it is necessary that every effort be given clearly to understand that the people are unalterably opposed to the construction of five piers in connection with the proposed C. N. R. bridge, and that it be pointed out to them that three piers at the most will suffice. Citizens having views on this matter should be at the City Hall this evening and give expression to them.

It is unnecessary to prolong the meeting dealing with this subject. It can very well be disposed of in half an hour or so, and it might be advisable for all who desire to attend it to be at the City Hall, say, at 7.30. The meeting could be proceeded with at that hour and probably be wound up by the time the chamber was needed by one of the other bodies.

HE CONDEMNS DIVORCE EIVL

Will Soon Be Same as Free Love In The United States.

PREACHER'S WARNING

Appalling Increase of Divorcees Who Are Welcomed In Best Society.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—"Every time the anarchists or some well-known writer advocates free love as the proper and permanent condition of society a terrible hue and cry arises from all the decent people of the land, yet, in the present tremendous growth of the divorce habit, is not the nation rushing toward it about as fast as it could come by popular consent?"

So said Rev. Frederick Lynch of the Pilgrim Church, Medison avenue, in a sermon on "Divorce and Free Love." He went on to say:

"There is the long run, where is the real difference between divorce being granted for the mere asking, (as it is practically to-day) and married men and women living together without marriage? Where is the difference between a marriage that may be entered into for only a year or so (as many magazine writers have urged to-day), and the French union lilce?

"Surely, these thoughts must come to every devout woman as the following catalogue, which was handed to Crippen half an hour before he stepped on the scaffold:

"My loving thoughts and prayers are with you. God bless you, darling. . . . (signed) "WIFE."

The story has been published that Dr. Crippen planned an attempt to commit suicide on Tuesday. The warders' suspicions, the story says, were aroused by Crippen's unusual behavior, and it was found that his spectacles were missing. On investigation the frames were found in the cell, the glasses removed and broken. It was believed the doctor intended to open a vein in his body. There is no corroboration of this report.

LENEVE PENS A LAST WORD

Tells Crippen Her Thoughts And Prayers Are With Him.

GOES TO COUNTRY

Untimately She Will Go Where She Can Sink Her Identity.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Ethel Clare Le Neve spent the whole time of the day of the execution of Crippen in bed at her home in London.

When she was asked about the truth of the report that she was going to the United States, she answered:

"Friends in America want me to go there, but I don't know what I shall do yet. As executrix of Dr. Crippen's estate I must remain here until his affairs are settled. The settlement may take weeks or even months. The will has to be proved, the effects disposed of and the debts paid.

"I shall probably go to the country for a few weeks, until the legal preliminaries are completed. I am not fit to do anything this week.

"Ultimately I shall go where I can sink my identity and be alone with my sorrow. I loved Dr. Crippen and still believe him innocent.

"In America I am afraid I should not have the peace I want.

Late on Tuesday night Miss Le Neve visited Pentonville prison and saw the governor, who informed her that Crippen had made no confession.

Afterwards she sent the following telegram, which was handed to Crippen half an hour before he stepped on the scaffold:

"Ethel Clare Le Neve, darling, . . . (signed) "WIFE."

Society Ostracise Them?

No. They mingle in the 'best' (God save the mark) society in New York, and receive their friends in their French castle.

"I see nothing but free love if the increase in present increasing two and a half times as fast as our population. One can see the incredible increase in twenty years when he remembers that in 1880 the percentage was only 38 per 100,000 population, whereas in 1900 it was 73."

The ...Veiled Lady...

"Ah, see here, Colonel," said Durnford, "I'm awfully sorry. You must pardon me." The old cafeteria stood in the light of the wax candles, pale and stately.

"Im aware of youah courtesy, suh," he answered as he bowed gravely, and lifted his glass. "Gentlemen, Miss Rose, I propose that the happy lady of Seaton Hall.' I may not be hyere, Mr. Durnford," said Colonel Lomax, "when your sister come, but looking out on these dear old hills, where I got the wound that Sheridan's men gave me, pray tell her that all I asked of the good God in my old days was to live and die at Seaton Hall. If I can't speak when she does come, the Shanadu' roses on the old man's grave, must give her my last message,—my message of peace and love."

Durnsford took his hand silently. "Colonel, I'll tell my darling sister this, and she will kiss you as we know you."

"Thank you, suh," said the old veteran, as he said huskily, "I'm going to finish some of these maps and trainings of that grand lass mine. We'll make the Pennsylvania Yanks open their eyes." The old gentleman had helped to open their eyes very widely at Gettysburg. Around the table, the two young men sat, as the descendant of the Cavaliers vanished.

"He's a rare old man," said Maxwell. "He shall ride here until the signal, 'Taps, lights out,' comes for him. Jeb Stuart never led a braver rider."

"Right you are," said Durnsford. Now, Maxwell, one word. You have a fortune here in the matchless deposit of ore. Let's his away Lome and see the dear old dad. I suppose you won't mind seeing Rose?" Maxwell with a blush set his face, drank to Robert Durnsford.

"See here," said Vinton, "two weeks will do me to push the accounting and the resignation business, at Washington. You can run to New York. I've some business with Bellis-ar, of the French Legation." For in his pocket Maxwell granted a letter from that distinguished thief.

"I understand that you are an enemy of the late Mr. Beverly Seaton, and are friendly with a friend of Captain John Gordon, U. S. A. I wish to see you soon on a private matter; for I shall take a steamer for George shortly. I am tired of a land where on the altar of profession, one offers up the church to the knowing cook. Ah, what glorious possibilities of a national future, if you only had the cuisine Francaise."

"I am sorry to lose you from the corps of Engineers, Maxwell," said Adjutant General Humphreys, if chief, as he favorably endorsed Maxwell's resignation with a sigh. "Will you not let me hold this back a few days? Think it over. Civil life has its vicissitudes, you know."

"I thank you General, but I wish you would forward it at once to the Secretary of War." Captain Maxwell answered, "I have been left a valuable estate in Virginia. A true friend, a loving friend. I shall go abroad and—see the great world. After my marriage," and the young captain actually blushed, "I shall return to develop a valuable iron mine on my Virginia property. I can thus give good employment to the suffering blacks of the old regime, who still linger helplessly around the plantation."

"But your military future!" the General added.

"Ah, General, our country has no definite policy. No well-defined classes. There is no permanence, save in our federal judiciary. Our citizens pop up a dozen, (socially, politically, financially,) like 'Jack in the box,' even the regular army and navy, may be swept away by some economical congress. We fear no foreign foe. We are waging a brutal war of final extermination against our savage Indians, foiled by rum and organized land thievery, they are worn outs of the frontier, manage to throw the army, which has no quarrel to avenge so laurels to gain) against a demorate foe, forced to the will by grave personal duplicity and bad faith. The Indians never have broken a fair treaty; we have never kept one—save Fort Harner said after forty years' experience, 'The only honest Americans the Indians are ashamed to look at an Indian. We have given them only vice, disease and rum, and greet them with the ax hand of the thief, or the murderous volleys of decay soldiers, unwillingly pushed into disgraceful battles. In a future civil war I should take no part. I am a Northern States Rights man, in the Indian campaigns my blood has boiled to think that we only reiterate their tribal wrongs."

"General," said the young soldier, "people may sneer at Christian sentiment, but our brethren of the church alone, seem to be the crowning disgrace of the closing century of American independance. We paid for slavery's hideous curse with national blood and tears. The thunder voice of God may demand blood for blood. Is it right, that our brother? Forty years ago the black-toiled price, with the outstretched arms, cried to us softly, unpitiedly, 'Help us, help us from the Missouri to the Great Cascades of the Columbia,' and the Rocky Mts. Crook, Terry and, Gibbon, will tell the same that, [illegible] a brave army, backed by its artillery and, would not leave the service, if there could be any imputation on our courage. I have fought for the nation's integrity. Duty and self-respect keep me from seeing my innocent brothers of the army and their brave soldiers, butchered by a degenerate, [illegible] race for their lands, and defending their helpless babes and women. Sitting Bull and Crazy Horse today, in their distant fastness on Powder River, are as clearly heroes of Liberty as the gallant farmers who fought the British soldiers from the ledges of Bunker Hill, even as Washington, Maxwell, you are right," said the retired old general, "Let me have the pleasure of seeing your sweet English Rose, when you bring her back to us. So, my boy, and God bless you," cried the veteran, as he warmly said adieu.

Behind the Bluff on Big Horn Hall loomed and despoiled savages were earthworks, and at Fort Abraham Lincoln, in far Dakota, gallant General Custer was now mustering the Seventh Cavalry for its awful day of doom.

While Vinton Maxwell, (not without a sigh) doffed his uniform at the Ebbitt next day, he gazed at the accounts of his resignation with puckered brow. A knock interrupted him.

"Show the gentleman up," said the new civilian. He held the card of Pierre Orton. "That woman again. The masked Venus. The wrecker of hearts, and lives," said Maxwell, who was personally as he thought of lovely Rose Durnsford, "I'll see her." And the fair angel, all save the same right to tint mystic name, woman.

"Now you gave me a couple of hour:" said Orton, briskly, as he made him-self known. "Time to get a first to the mail." Maxwell's eyes were most as he finished reading the sad epistle. "I'll wait, sure were. "Let Orton tell you all. When you my goodness in Marguerite, spare her the knowledge of how low a one's basement girl can sink, in life's abyss of shame. Let her think me dead—one [illegible] burden of sorrow enough."

"How does Gordon look?" Maxwell said, turning to the detective, who was keenly eyeing the picture of Beverly Seaton on the mantelpiece.

"He looks like a restless ghost; only the words of his friend, Captain, that man is burning out his heart and soul. I drive, knew a saddle case, and had hoped to find a solved clear up the whole mystery."

"Well," said Maxwell in bewilderment.

"Why Alfred Braxton, that man," said he, handing Maxwell the picture of the dead, Beverly Seaton. "But he too had blood on snow. He shot down his fellow. I was his second, when he killed Shakespeare at Nice, over the handsome shoulevil. Where is he?" continued Orton, who had not noticed Maxwell's growing astonishment.

"See here Orton, tell me the whole story from the time you met him in St. Louis. That man was my friend. Beverly Seaton, and he died by his own hand at the Brunswick hotel."

Orton sprang to his feet. "Fool, fool," he cried. "Thank God, I can now believe in Jack Gordon's innocence of Egbert Neill's murder. I see it all. The woman Braxton shot down was Gordon's wife,—and—

LANSDOWNE RESOLUTION.

It Carries In House of Lords Without a Division.

London, Nov. 25.—In the House of Lords Lord Lansdowne's reform resolutions carried without a division. The previous day's debate was in favor of the Opposition, but yesterday Lord Chancellor Lorebura and Archbishop Morley contributed excellent speeches.

Lord Lorburn said that all the Lansdowne paraphernalia for joint sittings, a referendum, etc., would only be brought into existence when the Liberals were in power.

The Upper Chamber then adjourned until Monday, when dissolution of Parliament will take place. Thus the Government's veto bill has been ignored by the House of Lords.

A noticeable feature of the debate has been the number of Liberal Peers who supported Lord Lansdowne's scheme and opposed the Government's veto bill.

In the lower chamber Right Hon. John Morley forcefully described the reform proposals as a schoolboy's sketch and expressed his amazement at the levity wherewith the Conservatives had committed themselves to vast, unknown changes.

There will be a flood of oratory today, the Liberalites speaking at Hull and Lord Lansdowne at Glasgow. Most of the Irish bench men will also be on the platform.

Right Hon. John Burns, speaking at Battersea, declared that neither Lansdowne's message nor Rosebery's blending would prevent the people bending the Lords to their will.

Divides the Waters.

Situated exactly at the highest point of the divide of the Rocky mountains, on the Crow's Nest dirision of the Canadian Pacific railway, in British Columbia, is a hotel. When it rains in the mountains the water which falls on the eastern slope of the hotel roof trickles away to join a tiny rivulet, which in due time mingles its waters with the Atlantic. The water falling just beyond the ridgepole, on the other side of the roof, flows westerly and ultimately into the Pacific.

Power for Kingston.

Kingston, Nov. 25—Ald. Elliott had a conference with Hon. Adam Beck on which the latter said that the only chance for Kingston to get power from the Hydro-Electric Commission, would be to secure the co-operation of the nearby towns and villages. Mr. Beck suggested that the municipalities east and west of Kingston submit a referendum to the people, to see if they were in favor of giving the council authority to make a contract with the Hydro-Electric Commission.

The City Council will act on Ald. Elliott's report.

The initial financial expenditures for the purpose, it is announced. Through yesterday's announcement it is made plain that the enterprise is not a charity, but is to be made self-supporting and yield a fair return on the investment. Its purpose, rather, is to enable persons in moderate circumstances to own their own homes at a minimum cost, while obtaining buildings of better construction than the average individual could erect, and amid surroundings and under restrictions that will make the little city an ideal residence place. Why No Referendum? He Asks

Mr. Borden Brings Up Failure to Consult People on Navy--Oppositions Stand On Question Unaltered In Spite of Fact That Others Have Stolen Flank

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—Shortly before recess yesterday afternoon R. L. Borden made a spirited attack upon the Government, following the lines so far laid down in the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne. What Mr. Borden's speech on Monday, made a significant reference to United States influence on the Railway Commission.

Taking advantage of the opportunity afforded by the introduction of the amendment of F. D. Monk (Conservative, Jacques Cartier), regretting that the Government gives no indication whatever to consult the people upon its naval policy, Mr. Borden spoke for the second time during the debate. Departing for a moment from the issue presented in the Monk amendment, Mr. Borden proceeded to answer a few of the criticisms raised by Hugh Guthrie (South Wellington) on Wednesday, who had declared that Canadian imports from Great Britain last year amounted to $227,000,000, whereas the Government returns showed that this trade aggregated but $95,000,000.

Dealing with the controversy raised by Mr. Guthrie over the alleged ownership of public lands in the western provinces, the leader of the opposition said that the crown owns all lands included in the public domain, and the real issue was one of administration, not ownership. Mr. Guthrie had spoken of the value of these lands, and declared that they were only a matter of expense to the Federal Government. "That does not seem to be very much in harmony with the proposal of the Government of Canada to build the Hudson Bay Railway out of the proceeds of these lands," he argued.

Proceeding, Mr. Borden indicated that Mr. Bennet had mistakenly quoted the resolution of the last session of Parliament, introduced by Conservatives, in its original form, in which Mr. Bennet said that last year the policy of the Conservative party was in favor of a stated, emergency contribution, and now it was changed to the resolution of 1909, to which that party had assented. The resolution amended in that very particular finally said that that policy of direct or periodical contributions to the Imperial Treasury for naval and military purposes would not, as far as Canada is concerned, be the most satisfactory solution of the question of defence.

Answering some remarks by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries Mr. Borden disclaimed any statement by him that Canada should send war ships to Great Britain, but should not provide for the maintenance and equipment of the naval stations at Halifax and Esquimalt. Last session he had called the attention of Mr. Brodeur and Sir Frederick Borden to the unsatisfactory condition of the stations.

Comparing the statements made by the Government in the recent campaign with those which appeared in the Montreal press, in which the Government argued that the establishing of a Canadian navy was a step towards independence, Mr. Borden did not characterize as being of a very high order.

Explaining sympathy with the subject Mr. Monk had in sight, Mr. Borden submitted the following amendment to that of Mr. Monk: the terms of which he thought would express the views dealt with more satisfactory import:

"We beg to assure Your Excellency of the unalterable attachment and devotion of the people of Canada to the British crown and of their desire and intention to fulfill all just responsibilities devolving upon this country as one of the nations of the Empire. We desire, however, to express our regret that Your Excellency's gracious speech gives no indication whatever of any intention on the part of Your Excellency's advisers to consult the people upon the naval policy of Canada."

Dr. Eugene Paquet (Conservative, L'Islet), who continued the debate, took exception to the statement made by the Government, that the cost of the Dominion Line steamers, $1,000,000. He claimed it would in a very few years exceed double that amount.

Z. A. Rivet (Rouville), Dr. Thos. Chisholm, H. H. Miller and F. L. Fowler also spoke on the address.

F. D. Monk introduced his bill respecting co-operative credit societies. He explained that last session he and Lloyd Harris (Brantford) had two bills before the House regarding co-operation. The bills had received considerable attention and moreover committee threw out the bill regarding co-operative societies and reported favorably the credit societies bill. Therefore he had brought it on again.

PLANS PAROLE BOARD

Hon. W. J. Hanna's Newest Scheme For Central Prison.

Duties of Board Will be to Investigate the Cases In Ontario's Reformatory and Make Recommendations to the Department of Justice—Hon. Mr. Aylesworth Approves of the Idea.

Toronto, Nov. 25.—A parole board is to be constituted in connection with the new Central Prison at Guelph, and while the personnel of the board has been decided upon by the Provincial Secretary, he prefers not to make the names public until they have been consulted and have consented to act.

"The work will involve some time and attention, and does not carry with it remuneration beyond repayment of out-of-pocket expenses. The board, however, is most important to our whole prison scheme," said Hon. Mr. Hanna.

"I was glad to find, as I expected I would, that the Hon. Mr. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, heartily approves of the board. Its duties will be to investigate the cases, on the ground, themselves, and to make such recommendations as they may see fit to the Department of Justice at Ottawa. Its duties do not involve in any sense a transfer of the function of the Department of Justice to the parole board, but simply leaves the Department to act on recommendations that the board may make. Should these recommendations be made only after the most careful consideration that I expect will be given them, they will generally, no doubt, be adopted at Ottawa."

MEXICO IS MORE QUIET

Official Advices Say Only One Trouble Centre Is Active.

Revolutionists In Chihuahua Are Still Attacking Villages of Province, Declares Consul Diebold of Laredo, Texas — Francisco Madero Is Wounded at Guerrero—Was Seen to Fall From His Horse.

Laredo, Texas, Nov. 25.—Mexican Consul Miguel E. Diebold, with headquarters in this city, received official advices yesterday which say that quiet has been restored at all points in Mexico throughout the country. The exception cited is what is known as the Guerrero district, in the State of Chihuahua. In that section 200 revolutionists are still making attacks on small villages.

The officials asserts that they are not "revolutionists," but bandits, who are using the uprising as a pretext to rob and pillage.

Gen. Lauro Villar, stationed in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, received official advices yesterday from all points in Mexico to his jurisdiction, extending from Matamoras to Colombia, 30 miles above Laredo on the Mexican side of the river. They say everything is quiet, along the border, and in the interior of Mexico.

The Mexican Government still maintains a cordon of troops along the border. On the American side of the line troops are on guard from Brownsville to Del Rio, and, according to information, this stretch of territory has been quiet all day.

Madero Wounded.

Eagle Pass, Texas, Nov. 25.—The Mexican commander in Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, last evening informed Customs Collector R. W. Dowe that Francisco I. Madero, claimant of the Presidency of Mexico, was badly wounded in a fight yesterday at Guerrero between his forces and 200 rebrales and cavalry, commanded by Col. Morales and Lieut. Nicanor Valdez.

The Mexican commander said his information came directly from a trustworthy citizen of Guerrero, who arrived during the day. According to the report, Madero was leading his forces when federal troops engaged them. Then engagement was fierce though brief.

Madero was seen to fall from his horse, and was carried to the rear as his force fell back. The federal troops are reported to have followed up their advantage, scattering the rebels, who took to the hills and fled. The nature of Madero's wounds are unknown.

Madero's Appeal.

New York, Nov. 25.—A manifesto written by and signed by Francisco I. Madero, who said that it was right to rise against the Government of President Diaz, was made public here last night by friends and partisans of Madero, who said that it was received in this city yesterday. The manifesto is in Spanish, and is dated at San Luis Potosi, Mexico, Oct. 5, 1910. A footnote to its says it is for private circulation up to Oct. 15, and thereafter it is to be circulated broadcast.

"In their unrelenting struggle for the triumph of the ideals of liberty and justice, people are compelled, at certain historical moments, to make the greatest sacrifices," is the way it begins.

"Our beloved fatherland has reached such a stage," it continues, "As despotism, such as we Mexicans have not been accustomed to bear since we secured our independence, oppresses us to such a degree that it has become intolerable.

"It implies that a feeling of unrest has pervaded the republic because of this system of Government, and because of the efforts of Diaz to saddle upon the nation a successor of his own choice. This is believed, decided many Mexicans to undertake the struggle for a recovery of popular sovereignty and this task to establish national party was organized for the purpose, it is stated, of electing as the President Francisco Madero, Governor of the State of Coahuila, and Vice-President, and the manifesto declares that Porfirio Diaz, realizing the conditions, had Madero imprisoned before the elections. The elections took place, it is stated, but the people being excluded from the meetings by violence, prisoner were filled with independent citizens and shameful frauds occurred.

Car Turned Turtle.

Elmira, N.Y., Nov. 25.—Robert J. Bonnel, principal of school No. 3 and one of Elmira's prominent educators, was almost instantly killed and two others were slightly injured in a street car bearing a load of spectators to the football game yesterday afternoon on a curve just outside of the football field, yesterday afternoon. The turtful turtle and struck a telephone pole, throwing Mr. Bonnel to one end of the car, where his head was crushed by a broken timber. There were 22 people in the car at the time, but all of the others escaped with slight bruises and cuts.

Lost Overboard.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Nov. 25.—V. Rogers, a young English deck hand on the steamer Colgate, was drowned lost at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning. He fell from the bow of the steamer Rogers was firing a fender, and, losing his balance, fell over the rail, losing his grip. Captain Zealand says that he first man he ever lost during an experience of 22 years on the lakes.

London, Nov. 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Among the last admitted members of the Royal College of Surgeons, King, are E. Boyd, from Toronto, and Miss Ida Mulock, from the University College Hospital, and London Hospital!

Murdered by Burglars.

Trenton, N.J., Nov. 25.—Peter A. J. Armstrong, the 80-year-old pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Dutch Neck, ten miles east of here, and his wife, were murdered Wednesday night at their home by burglars.

To Test the Feeling.

Montreal, Nov. 25.—It is now stated that the pro-navy demonstration in St. Johns on Saturday next is to be another test is to be made in this province of the feeling of Canadians on the navy question.

The story goes in political circles that Recorder Dupuis will be retired on account of his age, and that Aime Decarie, M.P., for St. Johns, Iberville, will be appointed in his place, and that one more county will be asked in the near future to pronounce itself upon the wisdom of the Minister's naval policy, the gathering in St. Johns on Saturday next to be the prelude of the campaign.

The Government supporters claim that Mr. Bourassa will be absent, and that without his orators, as all speakers of Drummond and Arthabaska cannot be repeated, (!!!)

It is also said that other judicial appointments may be made in the near future, although it is thought that the electorate just now will prevent members of Parliament in any great number from resigning the genuine before the general election. But it is said that C. A. Wilson, M.P., for Laval may be appointed to the position held by the late Judge Pelletier. Mr. Wilson, Government candidate in Laval will be Mr. David, editor of Le Soleil, a very fine speech the night of the Laurier demonstration in the Monument Nationale.

SIDNEY CROSSING.

The funeral services of the late John Carr were conducted by Rev. E. B. Cook, pastor of Sidney Circuit, on Saturday, 19th inst., at his home in the second concession of Sidney. Mr. Carr had been in poor health for some time, but death came as a surprise. He had risen quite early on Thursday morning feeling somewhat than usual, and was sitting by the fire while his wife was busy about the house preparing breakfast. Mrs. Carr was placing something on the table, with her back to her husband, when she heard a crash and turned to see him lying on his face on the floor. She summoned help at once, but he was dead, the general belief of the opinion that he was dead before he struck the floor, as in falling he struck his head on a door but it did not bleed. The deceased was well and favorably known, having lived here for nearly sixty years. He came from England nearly sixty-five years ago when the country was new, and by hard work and economy purchased a farm, where he has resided for nearly forty years. Besides a widow, several brothers and a sister are left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and brother. He was a Methodist in religion and a Conservative in politics.

SPORT.

Hanging up in front of one of the down town shops yesterday morning we saw a fine deer, evidently the trophies of the trusty rifle of the proprietor. One was a full-grown deer and a fine specimen, but the other was a fawn no longer than a goat. We may be over-sensitive about such things, but even if we did shoot such a little inoffensive thing by accident, we'd never bring it home to brag about it. It strikes us that there may be just as much sport in killing a deer as a man and also as there would be in beating a baby with a club.

SHRUBB DEFEATS LONGBOAT

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 25.—Alfred Shrubb, the English champion record distance runner, to night defeated Tom Longboat, the Onondaga Indian, in a 15-mile race in Mechanic's Hall, by three quarters of a lap. Shrubb's time was one hour, 26 minutes 8 35 seconds. Shrubb really ran more than 15 miles owing to a mix-up in the count-up during the final mile.

Both finished in splendid form, and each had a sprint left. Longboat made the mistake of allowing his opponent to pile up a lead of slightly more than two laps early in the race. Shrubb won by three quarters of a lap.

HOCKEY

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 24.—Considerable interest has been aroused in local hockey circles over the prospect of Brockville placing a team in the National Hockey Association, and the fans are on tip toe hoping to see the scheme eventually materialize. It is felt that with an absence of the prior article here during the past four position has been heard, for Peterboro will not have a professional team."

Such outstanding this statement from the Times-Peterboro did wire and asked to be included in the schedule. However since the Times-Peterboro are begging for Peterboro and the league will go along quite well without them.—Port Hope Guide.

FOOTBALL

"Trick plays are all right," quoth Chancer Elliott, of Montreal, "when your back line is well protected, but with a heavy forward line charging through continually, there is not a great deal of room for trick work. I doubt if Varsity will get away with any of the fancy stuff they pulled off against Ottawa last year."

Captain Dan Gilmour of McGill has a due respect for the prowess of the Toronto colleges, and is not so sanguine of the Tigers' success on Saturday as other local followers of the game. Gilmour thinks that the superior condition of the Varsity players, and the results of the strict collegiate training regime will assert their results in the gruelling week-end contest.

There are many people pessimistic after the defeat given the Argonauts. Varsity will not have it all smooth sailing when they board the Tigers in their den on Saturday. They attest with great gusto that the only time that the champions met a team that had them outweighted to any considerable extent this year (McGill) their light line was ripped up like so much tissue paper at certain stages of the game. They affirmed that the same thing will happen Hamilton. Another matter that gives them reason for apprehension is the undoubted advantage possessed by the Tigers in having the scene of the conflict in their own backyard. The Tigers are dangerous anywhere, but doubly so when performing at home, taking their performances against the Argonauts as a criterion. They crag up big scores against the outsiders at Hamilton, but lost twice in Toronto by a single point. But the clinching argument is to the effect that former games have been upset in all the big athletic events of the year, notably when Johnson beat Jeffries and Philadelphia's 100 yard relay champs. Cobalt. There was no "come back" then, and they say there will be none for Varsity in Hamilton. And to all this the office boy remarks expressively, "Bird seed!"

THE RING.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—Joe Woodman, manager of Sam Langford, is in receipt of a letter from Hugh McIntosh, the Australian boxing promoter, in which McIntosh offers to give Jack Johnson $15,000 as expenses for his annual 2nd; last night it was the property of a bakim (physician), had brought it back. The horse had been tethered in line with others, with men, women and children sleeping in the open about them.

"How did you manage it?" asked the doctor.

"The sahib will give the necessary order," he said, "I will show him."

The entire scene was reproduced, even to the night watchman asleep in a corner. Noiselessly the Afghan crawled toward the tent, treating snakelike through the prostrate forms to where it was standing at the end of the row. Softly talking to attract the animal's attention without causing alarm, he gently raised himself with arm extended.

In his open palm were some lumps of gur (native sugar), beloved of horses, and while the Arab was enjoying these the man was caressing him with the other hand, whence suspended a watering bridle taken from his wallet. Quickly this was adjusted, and then, stroking soothingly, the robber passed his hand over the animal's back and down the hind quarters. Swiftly the heel ropes were unhitched, then the head gear relaxed, and with a bound he was astride and away, his right hand backward flung, shouting triumphantly as he passed, "Thus was it done!"

The joke was that he never came back! A double restitution would have been too much of a wrench.

Greatly Overrated.

STEALING A HORSE.
A Bold Afghan Robber Who Had a Sense of Humor.
An East Indian officer, writing of life in Peshawar in the early seventies of the last century, relates the following:
The medical officer of my regiment was informed one night that a valuable and favorite Arab steed of his had been stolen. Over the border, gone forever, he never expected to see his horse again, but next day, much to his surprise, there came to him a bearded man riding bare backed the stolen steed.
He confessed that he had taken the animal, but, instead of a theft it was the property of a hakim (physician), had brought it back. The horse had been tethered in line with others, with men, women and children sleeping in the open about them.
"How did you manage it?" asked the doctor.
"The sahib will give the necessary order," he said, "I will show him."
The entire scene was reproduced, even to the night watchman asleep in a corner. FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.
What Brides Are Wearing—Beads of Wood and Glass Adorn Gowns.
Beaded trimmings are novelties of the season and are masses of color more or less wholly of beads of glass, wood, rubber, silver, gilt, copper or porcelain.
French brides have taken to wearing bridal dresses of mulines or tulle in combination with brussels lace flounces, and voluminous enveloping veils are also of the mulines or tulle.
Princess and empire gowns will be worn during the late autumn and winter under long coats of fur.
A charming new frock on the princess order is fashioned from Japanese blue messaline, trimmed round the bottom and across side with black silk cord and Russian braid. A flame colored silk sash scarf artistically introduced on the left side of the blouse imparts a smart touch of color.
Some of the latest French veils in both black and white show delicate spider web designs at intervals.
A striking flat straw toilette also has a large crown of white kid finished with a very narrow band and tiny bow of the kid with a trim of black velvet. At the side white kid and black satin with the edges sewed together form a bow.
The simple shirt waist that is tucked at the front is always a becoming one to the small boy. This model combines that feature with a box plaited back and will be found appropriate for all shirting materials. The sleeves are made in regulation shirt style, and the turnover collar is separate.

WHAT
WILSON'S INVALIDS PORT IS
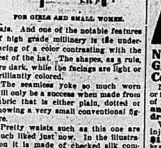
Wilson's Invalids' Port is a standard preparation—prepared according to the British and French Pharmacopoeias. It consists of a delicate, pleasant-tasting Oporto wine, containing an exact and constant quantity of the principles of Cinchona Bark—these principles are present in such a form as to obviate the distressing results frequently following the administration of ordinary Cinchona extracts.
The following analysis prove that it is a tonic preparation of a superior character.



The Canadian Lancet and Practitioner, Author and Proprietor, Toronto.
I thereby Certify that I have analyzed Wilson's Invalids' Port Wine, and find it contains the active principles of Calisaya Bark, in their integrity, in proportion to act as a tonic and excitant, and is a very valuable tonic and fortifier.
MILTON L. HERSEY.

Prof. L. Wender I certify that Wilson's Invalids' Port is a wine of Porto, France, of good quality, agreeable taste, and flavor, and that the extract of Cinchona which it contains makes it a powerful tonic.

Extraordinary Heroism Displayed By Priests and Firemen.

(Intelligencer Special.)

NEWARK, N.J., Nov. 26.— From twenty to twenty-five persons, nearly all girls, were trapped in a burning box factory and most of their lives here this morning. About thirty were injured. There were many instances of extraordinary heroism among the firemen and citizens in attempting the rescue of the unfortunates. Among the heroes were priests from an adjacent seminary, who climbed into the burning structure and gave absolution to the dying.

The Government is sending out an embassy under a flag of truce to assure complete amnesty this afternoon.

CRIPPEN IN LAST LETTER, PROTESTS HIS INNOCENCE

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Lloyd's News to-day publishes a three-column letter from Dr. Crippen, which the paper received through Miss Leneve. In his letter Crippen re-affirms most solemnly that he was wrongly convicted, and expresses the belief that facts are yet to come out which will prove his innocence. The letter states the evidence as to identification of remains found in the cellar of the Hilldrop Crescent house. He says the conviction was a judicial error created by the prejudice which had been built up in the public mind by the sensational story of the Crippen flight and capture.

The letter winds up with a warm tribute to Miss Leneve, "who," it says, "has proved herself a true woman. My last prayer will be that God may protect her and allow her to join me in eternity."

O. S. Hicks, teacher of the Adult Bible class of Bellevue street Methodist church was surprised by the members of the class who gathered at his home last night to say good-bye, and presented him with an address and remembrance. Board of Trade Strongly Opposes Construction Of a Five Pier Bridge

Appoints Committee To Act In Conjunction With Property Owners Association—Need of Eldorado Branch of G. T. Emphazied--Local Board Joins Ontario Association--will Make Effort To Have Assay Office Kept Here--Fine Addressby Mr. Johnson on Hydro Electric Power.

At the Board of Trade meeting held last evening, matters of vital importance to the city were brought forward and discussed, and some were laid over for further consideration, owing to lack of time to present them. In addition to members of the Board many citizens were present, and later in the evening the members of the Property Owners' Association joined the meeting to take part in the discussion of the proposed C. N. R. bridge over the river. Among others the following were in attendance at the meeting: Ald. Robinson, Ald. Parks, Messrs. W. B. Deacon, W. N. Ponton, C. J. Johnson, M.P.P., C. M. Reid, J. Elliott, J. J. Blair, London, P. Wims, J. McGurn, J. H. Anderson, E. B. Terwilliger, J. H. Sneyd, J. McKinley, ex-Mayor Graham, W. J. Deacon, H. Taylor, W. C. Reid, W. S. Cook, J. Barber, J. A. Kerr, A. McFee, A. P. Allen and J. P. Smith.

Mr. W. B. Deacon, president, occupied the chair, and stated that the Board had many matters of importance which would be brought up and discussed. We should see that the very best men that can be secured for the City Council next year are induced to become members of same body. This was necessary owing to the fact that the C. N. R. was coming into the city and other important matters would be up before the incoming Council, it was therefore essential that we should have in the Council the best citizens possible.

A number of communications were read, the majority of which were referred to the Executive Council of the Board.

Messrs. H. W. Earle, T. Hurley, J. Peck and C. J. Mills were elected members of the Board.

A report from the Treasurer showed there were 73 members and the finance al statement showed a balance on hand of $69.

PUBLICITY MATTERS.

Mr. J. Elliott was called upon and stated that he was of the old country the past season. He gave a delightful account of the trip from Montreal to Glasgow. While in Glasgow he called upon a number of prominent cheese buyers and was pleased to state that Canadian cheese is a prominent product in that country. Liverpool and London were also visited. On the latter he visited the office which has been established by the Ontario Government, and he paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Dyke, Mr. Whitney and his Government for establishing such an office. In connection with Mr. Caverhill, manager of the office, that gentleman advocated that Belleville should be advertised as other places in Ont. Western Cuts of cheese factories, buildings, etc., should be secured and sent there and they would be printed in the Canadian free of charge. Here was an opportunity for Belleville to be advertised in the old country, which he had no doubt would prove beneficial.

A communication was read from the proprietors of the Canadian Life and Resources, offering to supply 5 pages in their publication, illustrated, for $203. This would be a special Christmas number.

Ald. Robinson stated that other places in this locality, namely Kingston, Peterboro and Lindsay, had been written up in this publication. He was informed that about 1,500 copies of this publication are sent to England. Mr. Wright, who visited the city in the interest of the publication, had agreed to give Belleville two pages illustrated for the sum of $300. The Publicity Committee of the Council endorsed the scheme, but for some reason, the Council turned it down. It was moved to have about forty cuts used, showing the churches, armory, public buildings, banks and some residences of the city.

MR. J. W. JOHNSON.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., said that five years ago one of the city papers issued a similar edition and there were many of the copies now available. He did not think that it would be money well spent, but he was rather in favor of doing something in the line spoken of by Mr. Elliott.

Col. Ponton stated that he had read the write-up of the city which was proposed to be used in the publication referred to, and it was certainly well done, the salient points being well brought out. There had been requests for literature of the city from several sources, and he would be in favor of advertising the city as much as possible.

Mr. Johnson moved, seconded by Mr. London, that the Board take no action in the matter.—Carried.

Mr. J. Elliott moved, seconded by Mr. C. M. Reid, that a committee consisting of the President and the Secretary be appointed to act in conjunction with a committee of the Chrese Board and the incoming City Council with regard to advertising Belleville in Great Britain.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

At this stage of the proceedings the members of the Property Owners' Association joined the Board meeting.

Col. Lazier, being called upon, said the Association had discussed the important matter of the C. N. R. bridge across the river and had engaged counsel to appear before the Railway Commission, which would be in the city on Tuesday next. The Association desired to unite with the Board of Trade in this matter. It would be detrimental to the city to have as many piers placed in the river, as proposed. The City Council had evidently not done anything definite in the matter, so the Association and citizens generally would have to take the matter up and have evidence prepared for presentation to the Commission.

Ald. Robinson said the Council had no desire to be opposed to this committee.

Mr. C. M. Reid said he would like to know what kind of a bridge should be built. The citizens certainly objected to a bridge to be erected which would make matters worse; it was up to the Board of Trade.

Col. Lazier said a bridge could be built without any piers. The question would be the cost.

Mr. J. G. Lindsay said the plans submitted of the bridge were only skeleton plans. A bridge with two piers could be built, but the cost would of course be more.

Ald. Robinson said that the C. N. R. engineer had stated if a less number of piers were placed under the bridge the grade in the city would have to be of necessity higher.

Mr. J. F. Wills spoke in favor of changing the grades, which could be done. We do not object by any means to the railway coming in here, but we must be protected.

Mr. Johnson, M.P.P.—Has the Council received any definite conclusion as to what they as a body will do in this matter?

Ald. Robinson—The Council is endeavoring to guard itself of responsibility in this matter, and place the responsibility on the Commission.

Mr. Johnson stated that some years ago we had trouble with ice and another one owing to piers in the mouth of the river. Are we going to have a bridge placed in that position again without entering our protest? It is worth the while to enter such a protest. We want the railway, but not at too dear a price. We should make our protest to the Commission in such a manner.

Col. Lazier moved, seconded by Mr. Wims, that a committee of three, consisting of Messrs. C. M. Reid, J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., and W. B. Deacon be appointed to act in conjunction with the Property Owners' Association in securing evidence to submit to the Railway Commission when in Belleville next Tuesday.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

President Deacon invited the members of the Property Owners' Association to remain after meeting of the Board of Trade and discuss matters with them.

UNION OF BOARDS.

Col. Ponton reported verbally as to the proposition of the various Boards of Trade in Ontario to unite in a general way upon matters which are of vital interest to the Province at large. He had attended recently a meeting at which this matter was taken up and discussed. It was felt that with a united action much better results would be secured. One important matter was the deepening of the Welland and Murray canals. It is proposed to have a provincial association formed, and Belleville is to have five representatives at a meeting to be held in December.

Mr. Graham moved, seconded by Mr. P. J. Wims, that the Belleville Board of Trade do hereby join the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade, and that Messrs. W. B. Deacon, W. N. Ponton, J. Elliott and J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., or such alternates as the President may appoint, be our representatives at the meeting to be held in December, 1910, and the President be authorized to name a member of the Board to act on the Nominating Committee of the Associated Boards.—Carried.

TIGERS ARE FAVORED IN THE BETTING

Hamilton Having Troubles Of Its Own With Today's Game

THOUSANDS IN TOWN

Police Unable To Cope With Riotous Crowds--Grounds Improving.

(Intelligencer Special.)

HAMILTON, Nov. 26.—From the appearance of things this morning all the excitement over the battle between Toronto and Hamilton is to climaxed this afternoon in the game between Toronto Varsity and the Hamilton Tigers, for the football championship of the Dominion. Business is practically suspended. The only people working strenuously are the poor Hamilton policemen, who surely have their hands full and they generally get the worst of it on a day like this.

Trains from Toronto and other places began arriving last night. Two more regular and special trains poured their passengers into the city stations last night, and many, clothed in coonskin coats and other articles of apparel, braved the cold, frosty atmosphere on Lake Ontario and came upon boats. There are thousands more visitors here than can ever hope to see the game, and whatever is to become of the surplus is a problem for the police to attend to. Students arrived in force early, and began rooting. Barbers' poles and sign-boards were carried off as trophies. It did not take long for Hamilton to realize that a championship rugby game in their midst was not an unmixed blessing.

A slight frost last night put a coating on the muddy field and slightly improved the conditions. Nevertheless, independent observers here are betting on the Tigers, although they and lots of Toronto money against them.

BLACKSTOCK WANTED IN GREAT BRITAIN

Toronto, Nov. 26.—George T. Blackstock, K.C., M.P., left early this a.m. for old country, after having, on Thursday night, received a telegram from the chief Unionist whip, Right Hon. Sir A. Acland Hood, asking that he hurry over to "make a few stumps" in behalf of tariff reform. At first Mr. Blackstock did not decide to go, but addressed meeting in over a dozen England constituencies.

His departure will render it necessary to appoint a new counsel for Oxford County in the case of the "Star" enquiry, which opens at Wood Lick on Monday.

CURRENT EVENTS.

FOR MAYOR—ALD. H. W. AKERMAN.

A Liberal in Canada is an anti-Britisher; a Conservative in Canada is a pro-Britisher.

Mr. Deacon is right. At no time in Belleville's career will it feel the need of a capable Council so much as it will in 1911.

It is rumored that a third paper, independent in politics, may be started in Belleville.—Kingston Standard. Come on in; the water's fine.

Every once in a while one finds a man big enough to kick conventions into the discard, and go out somewhere without dolling up like a sapsac. Refreshing, isn't he!

Heaps of men never know their wives could play poker or eribbage quite as well as 11-10 of the fellows they go down town to play with. Try it; it not only saves carfare but a lot of other things, including sleep.—Buffalo News.

Oddly enough investigation shows that the men who are the proportions of a lath and couldn't possibly get stout, never go to the Maine woods. It's only the Barrel Club who get in range of hunters who wouldn't miss one barn door out of six.

Toronto society paid $5 a head last night for the sake of saying it had seen Bernhardt. The divine Sarah has long since ceased to be divine as a histrionic artist but she was great in her day. Reputation is what counts.

Mr. Deaton wants a membership of three hundred for the Board of Trade! Good! There's no reason why Belleville shouldn't have a Board of Trade numerically as strong as this. But, after all, as in everything else, it's quality which counts. Keep busy!

A Southern visitors expresses her surprise that Canadians do not know how to pronounce "gal," which is supposed to be the negro way of saying "girl." In New England and New Brunswick "girl" is pronounced "gurl"; in Scotland and Ireland and a good part of England it is "ghurl." In the Southern States the "r" is not sounded, but the pronunciation is more like "ghel" or "ghelh" than "gal," which in Canada is pronounced phonetically like the first syllable of "gallon." "Waal" is supposed to be the New Englander's pronunciation of "girl," but he really drawls "wurl," making two syllables of it, but without giving the vowel more than a trace of the "ah" sound.—Toronto Star.

Fatalities at Brantford.

Brantford, Nov. 26.—Mrs. North Heise, who resides with her husband in the Grenadier row, was found unconscious early yesterday, having taken carbolic acid. She died yesterday afternoon, leaving two small children, besides her husband.

James Adams, an Englishman, found unconscious with a fractured skull in the basement of the Imperial Hotel Thursday, expired yesterday. Indications are he received his injuries by a fall on the concrete floor.

Lewis Martin, night yard master of the Grand Trunk, who recently had both legs severed in an accident, was called upon yesterday and presented with a purse of $288, made up by fellow employes and manufacturers.

Revolution a Fake.

New York, Nov. 26.—Arthur E. Bullwell, president of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railway, and the dominating influence in many important Mexican interests, yesterday declared that the Mexican revolution was a pure fake, concocted largely by persons who had interests to serve.

"Inside of ten days you will forget you ever heard of it," he said. "I have telegrams from my agents at Zacatecas, where 500 were supposed to have been killed, saying that nothing of the kind happened. My agent at Torreon says the fall of that place did not occur. From Chihuahua I have a message saying that all is peaceful."

COLONEL LAZIER HEAD OF NEW ASSOCIATION

Real Property Owners Association In Session Last Night Elects Officers—Mr. J. C. Wills, K. C. Secretary—Vigorous Opposition To Construction of Five Piers.

The Real Property Owners' Association met last evening in the police court room, city building, and there was a large attendance. Col. S. S. Lazier occupied the chair.

After the reading of the minutes by the Secretary, Mr. J. F. Wills, K.C., the rules and constitution were read and a large number were submitted to membership by signing the roll.

The election of officers was then proceeded with and resulted as follows:—

President—Col. S. S. Lazier.
First Vice-President—H. H. Corby, Esq., ex-M.P.
Second Vice-President—Mr. F. B. Ingham.
Secretary—Mr. J. F. Wills, K.C.
Treasurer—Mr. J. D. Flint.
Executive Committee—Messrs. Geo. Wallbridge, J. Calder, Jas. Roy, C. J. Bell, Richard Arnold, Wm. J. Hudson, P. J. Wims, J. J. B. Flint, W. B. Riggs and Dr. Clinton.

The five officers are also members of the Executive Committee.

The President drew the attention of the meeting to an important matter, namely, the proposed C. N. R. bridge over the Moira River. The proposition to have five piers under the bridge was not in the best interests of the city, but would prove otherwise. This was a most pressing matter before the Association, and the Association should join with the Board of Trade in endeavoring to have a clear number than five piers built in the river.

Mr. John Robbin, who has been a close observer of the ice jams and floods for many years, said that since the old lumbermen's piers had been removed two years ago there had been no damage from floods or anchor ice.

Counsel was engaged by the Association and evidence is to be secured to be presented to the Railway Commission when it meets here Tuesday morning next.

Col. Lazier, President; Mr. J. F. Wills, K.C., Secretary, and Mr. P. McL. Forin, Treasurer, were appointed a committee to procure necessary evidence.

The Association then adjourned to meet and consult with the Board of Trade in this matter.

Bible Class Banquet
A Delightful Affair

Addresses Delivered By Rev. Dr. Bishop, Judge Deroche, Mr. O'Flynn, Wm. Johnson and Others—Patriotic Songs.

The annual banquet of the Belleville Business Men's Bible Class was held in the Sunday School rooms of Bridge Street Church last evening.

Covers were laid by "Mine Host," the bountiful Wallace, for two hundred, but with so much else going on in the city last night, not quite so many as that were present.

That hand-shake committee were past masters at their happy self-imposed duty. Sprague's orchestra was lively music in abundance, and the class, with its now proverbial characteristic, saw that the dark was kept away from home had most attention paid to them.

As many other Belleville people have doubtless received similar letters, I would suggest that before confiding in Charles Austin's glowing prospects to the extent of parting with their money, that they read this week's Toronto Saturday Night regarding the Colorado-Tale Marble Co.

While some one has said "A fool and his money are easily parted," and while the world's largest fish industry continues to work overtime breeding suckers, the writer would advise Belleville people to fight shy of this very slick Charles Austin game.

Bottled up Loyalty

Words come from Calgary that when America settlers whose children attend the public schools object to the singing of Rule Britannia and similar patriotic songs the singing of those songs is stopped, on instructions from the school inspector. This evidence was given before the Dominion Comission on technical education, and the action of the inspector was condemned by Mr. Armstrong, a member of the commission. It is also understood that these American settlers do not object to the singing of Canadian airs.

It is difficult for full-blooded British-Canadians to be patient in the presence of such exhibitions of nearly-mouthed patriotism. Why should Canadian children in their own country, shd in their own schools, with the Union Jack flying from the flag pole, be forced to refrain from singing the British patriotic songs, even though some of the new arrivals from foreign lands object? Does anyone imagine for a moment that such consideration would be shown for Canadian or British feeling in the land to the south of the Canadian border? Or would any Canadian or British her be silly enough under such circumstances to ask for it?

If western Canada settlers from the States or anywhere else do not like our patriotic songs they do not have to sing them, and they are at liberty to plug up their ears if they dislike hearing them. That we should bottle up our expressions of loyalty to Great Britain because they do not please either the newcomers in the west or the old-comers in Quebec province is surely a joke just as our loyalty would be if we, for the sake of peace, or any other cause, consented to the bottling-up process. That Alberta school inspector should be told one or two important things by his superiors in office.

A Lost Opportunity

The apostle of publicity once again rises to the occasion. The renowned Ald. Robinson, stands pat, whatever else. Failing to get the Council to embark on a scheme of world-wide publicity, he goes to the Board of Trade with his wonderful proposition. "Think of it," says he, "seven pages in ..... for three hundred dollars. And the cuts furnished free gratis. Oh, my! There will be pictures of all the churches, the banking institutions, a number of private residences, etc., etc."

Now, gentlemen, why didn't you recognize a good thing when you saw it? Why is it that Alderman Robinson is the only man in the Council and the Board of Trade who possesses wisdom enough to recognize the blessings to Belleville which would accrue through a write-up in the paper so anxious to run it? Pause for a moment and consider the industrial opportunities which Belleville has lost through the refusal of the City Council and Board of Trade to have its churches, and its banks and private residences illustrated in a publication nine hundred and odd copies of which are subscribed for by the Government and forwarded to the public libraries of Great Britain.

WHY THE KNOWING ONES FAVOR PRESIDENT DIAZ

He Has Been The Only President Who Could Keep Order In Mexico--Vast Sums of Money Invested There--Rebel Leader an Educated Mon.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—The proclamation of Francisco I. Madero, Provisional Government of Mexico, constituted interest here to-day upon the attitude of the State Department toward the Diaz Government and the revolutionists, which now is recognized as at least an organized belligerent party.

Inquiries made at the Department were met with the assertion that officially the United States Government has no "attitude." It is merely the intention of the United States to maintain neutrality and uphold its obligations under the provisions of its treaties with Mexico, it was said. As to "sympathy," however, the position of Secretary Knox can best be inferred from the statement that there is invested in Mexico $700,000,000 of American capital. This money is placed in mines, cattle ranches, plantations and rubber concessions. President Diaz has by the stern arm with which he has ruled his country, greatly fostered these projects.

Up to the time of the present reign, no executive was ever able to keep order among the turbulent people of Mexico long enough to promote the industrial welfare and open the incalculable natural resources. Diaz saw that to do this, foreign capital was necessary. He made it comparatively safe for Americans an attractive and safe proposition, and the State Department has no misgivings that any expedient alone would demand support of Diaz.

Francisco I. Madero is a wealthy Mexican of excellent education, and considered a man of considerable ability, but any disturbance is personal of the executive officials of Mexico would seem to jeopardize American interests in Mexico, say State Department officials. A change would be regarded as a grave fatal blow, particularly as one of the strongest cards played by the Liberal party, which is responsible for the last election, was the alleged coalition between Diaz and the American Government, which is now charged before the Mexican people as treachery on the part of Diaz against Mexican interests.

OATH TAKEN BY REBELS.

EAGLE PASS, Tex., Nov. 25.—Death to all Mexican revolutionists who revert to allegiance to Diaz is threatened in a manifesto in circulation to-day throughout all Northern Mexico, in which Francisco L. Madero is described as "Provisional President." Madero's statement is attached to the oath of the rebels, which has been translated, in part, when the organizing junta of the Liberal party of Mexico determined upon the overthrow of Diaz at a meeting in St. Louis.

Revolutionists are required to swear loyalty to the Liberals to obey the provisions of the oath. The oath:

1—All Mexican citizens we swear to take up arms to overthrow the hateful dictatorship of General Diaz who oppresses us. We will not lay them down until we have obtained a provisional Government such as is guaranteed by the forgoing out of the programme of the Liberal party promulgated by the organizing junta of the same party in St. Louis on July 1, 1906.

2—All patriots who will take upon themselves the responsibility of leading the movement in any part of the Republic must be careful to circulate widely the manifesto inviting the people to overthrow the Government.

3—The prohibition to use anything to do or to treat with persons who could obstruct the revolution, and it shall be severely and immediately sentenced to capital punishment by a council-of-war, which shall be organized for this purpose.

4—The chiefs of the revolutionary movement shall have the power to send out expeditions and to make appointments that they shall deem prudent for the better realization of their projects.

5—Every chief of a group shall be authorized to raise funds from the Government offices and from private persons from whom they may be able to obtain it, be the means what they may.

FEW CHANGES IN PRESBYTERY IN SESSION HERE MARKET PRICES TODAY YESTERDAY

Although the interior of the market building was this morning filled up with the usual display of farm produce for sale, prices were, as usual, rather high.

Butter was quite plentiful and sold at from 23c. to 25c. per pound. The closing up of the cheese factories will make the supply more plentiful.

Fresh eggs were a rather scarce article, and were readily sold at 35c. per dozen, which is a high price for this season of the year.

While dressed poultry was offered for sale in considerable quantities, it commanded good prices. Chickens sold at from 70c. to $1.25 per pair, according to size and quality; ducks at $1.25 to $1.50 per pair; geese, from $1.25 to $1.75, and the few turkeys offered brought upwards of 25c. per pound.

The selling price for potatoes is 75c. per bag. The offering was by no means large.

Apples command a fairly good price selling at from 25c. to 40c. per peck, according to quality and grade.

A small quantity of dressed beef and pork was offered for sale. Hind quarters of beef sold at $7.50 to $8.00, and forequarters at $6.50 to $7.00. Dressed pork brought 9c. per pound. There were no changes to note in the hide market.

MEETING OF THE PRESBYTERY OF KINGSTON

A meeting of the Kingston Presbytery was held in St. Andrew's, in this city, yesterday afternoon, presided over by the Moderator, Rev. Mr. Smith, or Burnhrae. The object of the meeting was to consider a call which had been extended to the Rev. Mr. McConnell, of Roslin, to become pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Vernon, which is in the Ottawa Presbytery.

Rev. Mr. McNabb who is connected with the Ottawa Presbytery, was present and supported the call on behalf of that Presbytery.

Messrs. J. Balcarres and S. Moore of Thurlow, spoke on behalf of the Roslin congregation, which was desirous of having Rev. Mr. McConnell remain upon the charge.

The Presbytery declined to agree to the transfer, and Rev. Mr. McConnell will in the near future remove to Vernon.

The Trial of Jesus. Matt. xxvi:57-68.

Golden Text. Who when He was reviled, reviled not again. I Peter ii:23.

Verse 57—Had the chief priests determined in advance to put Jesus to death, and if so, why? (See v:4.)

Verse 58—If Peter had kept close to his Master, instead of going afar off, and had remained there to witness for Him, what changes would it have probably made in this history?

Verse 59—How do you account for the fact that seventy reputed holy men, the members of the Sanhedrim, should seek false witnesses to encompass the death of a righteous man like Jesus?

What has been the record from that time until now, of ecclesiastical assemblies in their trial of reputed heretics?

Give a reasoned answer to the following: What is a truly good man in the mind of Jesus, he perturbed by or get angry at, or wish to injure another good man who also shows the spirit of Jesus, for teaching different views concerning the Bible, or religion, to what he holds himself?

Verse 61—What did Jesus say, that in any way resembled their accusation that He was able to destroy the Jewish Temple and build it again in three days? (See John ii:19.)

Suppose, or are any other man, had said that he could destroy the temple and build it again in three days to what extent would it be blameworthy?

How much blame is due the man who wilfully misrepresents the statements of a religious teacher for the purpose of condemning him?

Give some examples of the sayings of Jesus, that could be perverted into a meaning that He did not intend. In what way did He left Himself open for such perversion?

Verse 62—Why did Jesus not answer the false witness bad said, and why did He make no answer to the high priest?

Can you give any examples where silence is the best policy, when confronted with a false accusation?

HYDRO-ELECTRIC POWER.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., was next called upon. Said he:

If I were asked to furnish proof of a statement I have often made and which I unhesitatingly believe; that Ontario is the best country in the world, with a future as certain as the revolution of the stars, I would point to the climate, its scenery, its fertile soil and its unbounded wealth in fish, in game, in minerals and in forests. But its greatest asset, its most wonderful potentiality, that which will be worth to the Province more than all else is its water power. The slack water of the Great Lakes, the unsalted seas upon which the products of the continent are water borne to the ocean shipping at Montreal and Quebec, and the navigable water from which light and heat and power will be furnished through the means of electricity to the factory, the farm and the home. We are now familiar with the possibilities of Niagara. The water of the Niagara Gorge is the water of Lakes Superior, Michigan, Huron and Erie in rapid transit to the sea, and which has already borne the ships of commerce on its expansive bosom. The difference between the level of Lake Erie and that of Lake Ontario is the fall which, concentrating the power of these great lakes in the Niagara Gorge, gives the force through gravitation which has made the electric power that is revolutionizing the manufacturing industries of Western Ontario, which have been the result of the N.P.'s., the National Policy and Niagara Power.

Our section of the Province is not within the Niagara Zone, but we have a zone of our own in the never failing water of the River Trent, while in the eastern portion of the Province the streams drop in the bed of the St. Lawrence, as at the Long Sault, furnish power equal to Niagara itself. But this is not all: in the lakes and rivers and bays of Northern Ontario there is a million horse power in the waters running north beyond the height of land, to Hudson's Bay, to the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, within three miles of the junction of the Temiscaming and Northern Ontario Railway with the transcontinental road, I stood on the bridge that crosses the Frederick House River and saw flowing a gorge two hundred feet deep the tumbling, turbulent waters of that great river, pouring on to James' Bay; waters that will ere many years be furnishing light and heat and power to the communities that will exist in that wonderful country.

Nature is fair in her distribution of wealth. Where there is seeming disproportion, she provides compensation. There is Pennsylvania, for example, supplied with wonderful deposits of coal, but Ontario, so well known, does not possess an ounce. Here is the compensation that Ontario possesses in water power, which can accomplish all that coal can perform, and when all the great lakes will still pour over the Niagara Gorge and through the St. Lawrence to the sea, and the height of land will still be receiving the waters of a hundred rivers that rise north of the height of land.

NO ONE NEED LEAVE HERE.

There is land in the Canadian West, good land, fertile land, timber land, but that is all. No man need leave this great Province of Ontario to seek for better opportunities for success than here exist, amid comforts and conditions unsurpassed, I believe unequalled, in all the world.

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission, at the head of which is the Hon. Adam Beck, one of the ablest men in the Province, was created by statute in the year 1906. It is authorized to act for the public in all matters pertaining to hydro-electric and other power undertakings which may be developed or undeveloped, throughout the Province. The Commissioners' greatest achievement has been the transmission of power from Niagara Falls to the municipalities of the western end of the Province by which they secure power, light and heat at a price often less than half of what had been previously paid. The power of the Commission has been exercised in the city of Ottawa, and, in consequence, the cost of electric energy in that City has been cut to half the previous cost.

One hundred miles from Niagara stands the busy town of Berlin in the County of Waterloo. On the 11th day of October, 1910, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, in conjunction with the town, was ready to turn on electric energy in that municipality, generated at the Falls and carried over the Commission's transmission line. Great preparations had been made for the event. The town was decorated, and at night brilliantly illuminated. The people of the surrounding country and of many towns and villages in that prosperous and populous portion of the Province were there en masse. The German types prevailed, as that part of Ontario was settled by an intelligent, progressive and stalwart stock from Germany. These qualities are marked characteristics of the Ontario German Canadian of to-day. He is Canadian and he is British, and a splendid leaven of capacity, stability, strength and purpose in the Province. The Premier, Sir James Whitney, Hon. Adam Beck, other members of the Government, and many members of the Legislature were in town, and the Hon. W. L. McKenzie King was also present. A drive around the town in automobiles viewing its hundred factories, its fine streets and beautiful homes, preceded the public meeting held in the Arena in which were packed 5,000 people. The Mayor, Mr. C. C. Hahn, presided and addresses were delivered by the Premier and Hon. Mr. Beck amid unbounded enthusiasm. Next appeared on the platform a handsome young lady, charmingly dressed, with a broad sash of red, white and blue silk across her breast and over the sash large letters spelling ONTARIO, while on her head was a striking tiara. She handed the Premier something like a button, that was the medium for turning on the Niagara power, to Sir James, he took Mr. Beck's finger, pressed it, the power instantly responded, the place was filled with dazzling light, the young lady was a mere figure-head by those gentlemen.

President Deacon said there were other matters which the Board had intended to discuss, but time would not permit.

The Board then adjourned.

Speaker In Regretful Mood.

Mr. Marcil Explains Discrimination Against Ministers—Little Episode in Speakers' Gallery Will Not Be Repeated Again, Says He.

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—Before the House resumed the debate on the address yesterday, Col. Sam Hughes (Victoria and Haliburton), arose to call the Speaker's attention to the treatment accorded Rev. George Jackson, and Rev. Dr. Henderson, who were excluded from the Speaker's gallery on Thursday.

After Col. Hughes had concluded, Speaker Marcil said that, while not required to answer the question, he would do so in courtesy to the House. He explained that he first saw in the gallery was reserved for Her Excellency and party, the wives of the Cabinet Ministers, and of the Speaker and wife of the leader of the Opposition. To disregard either of these combinations occupying the same seats without motion, the Speaker said that he had, on the request of a member, granted permission to Bishop Strand of Calgary, Archbishop Duhamel, to occupy the front seat in order to follow the proceedings more closely, but at that time the front row was unoccupied. He would say that the incident did not occur again.

Col. Sam Hughes, reminding the House that French blood ran in his veins, declared it was too often. The independence sentiment expressed by Mr. Fowke he condemned, and looked forward to a united British Empire.

Mr. Michael Clark (Liberal, Red Deer) paid a compliment to Mr. Borden's reference to our relations with the United States as being the best monument of international peace. The acceptance of the Government's naval policy in England was responsible, he thought, of appreciation. He quoted Sir George Doughty in support of that contention. Mr. Borden's amendment he characterized as a benevolent inept itude." He thought it was a waste of time. Mr. Marcil was surprised by the amount of energy Unionist Members had shown, and was apparently so "lamb-like." Mr. Monk seemed to have smashed the crockery, but at that time the front row compartments of the Conservative party and got possession of the whole premises. He had not put Mr. Borden out of the driver's seat, but had thanked George E. Foster, as de, and evinced a desire to put Mr. Bourassa in his place. If the Opposition benches had was extreme language, what had become of the talk of an "emergency contribution"?

Mr. Fowke and Martin Burrill also spoke.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday morning presided over the committee to receive the list of members of the various standing committees. There were only two changes, Albert Alford, M.P. for Ottawa, who was not given any committee last session, was made a member of the committees on railways, private bills, standing orders, and agriculture.

L. A. Rivet was substituted for Hon. L. P. Brodeur on the private bills committee; P. E. Blondin of Chambly took the place of Gerald White on the standing orders committee.

Hon. Charles Murphy was added to the printing committee, thereby providing that the man who is the head of the printing department shall be a member of the committee which supervises the printing of Parliament. Mr. Murphy was also added to the public accounts committee, while also Mr. Fraser of Guysboro, Nova Scotia, and Mr. Turriff was made a member of the railway and canals committee.

Mr. Russell of East Toronto is put on the agriculture committee in place of W. A. Smith of Lambton, and Graham White is added to the mines committee in the stead of P. E. Blondin.

THERE seems to be a large crowd of members for the examination of the House of Lords to the Down and Out Club.

Brazilian Government Gives in to Claims of Sailors.

More Pay is Granted and Corporal Punishment is Abolished in Navy if by Terms of Promise Made to Mutinous Sailors By the Parliament—Several Officers and Sailors Were Killed in Revolt.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 26.—The Government of Brazil yesterday yielded to the mutinous navy.

Congress, meeting in extraordinary session, by a decisive majority, ordered the ultimatum presented on Thursday, including general amnesty for the sailors, who, after murdering so many of their superior officers as was necessary to place them in complete control of the guns of the warships upon the capital.

What effect the outcome will have upon discipline in the navy, is a matter of some concern. The immediate effect is to give the sailors increased pay, shorter hours of service and less work through the recruiting of additions to the crews, and to abolish corporal punishment in the fleet.

Following the action of Congress, the mutineers went through the formality of surrendering and before noon yesterday the city had resumed its normal activities and the public excitement had subsided.

During the progress of the revolt, Hon. James Bryce, British ambassador to the United States, was the guest of Baron Rio Branco, the Brazilian foreign minister.

The mutinous battleship Sao Paulo lay on board several British subjects, who accompanied the vessel on its cruise to learn that its construction in England. At the outbreak of the revolt, Sir Wm. H. D. Haggard, British Minister, and Bradley, consul for Brazil, Foreign Office then-any attempt of the loyal torpedo boats to destroy the revolting warships would be attended with danger to British subjects on board.

A bomb let clock on the night of Nov. 22, and Capt. Nunes, commanding the battleship Minas Geraes, came back from dinner on board the French training ship Duguay Trouin, he found a wounded sailor and a volley of shots. It was the crew of his vessel who had revolted, which a brief but two other officers offered resistance to some of the sailors and were killed and many others, including Nunes, wounded. Several sailors were also killed. The rebellious crew meanwhile shouted "Long live Liberty!"

The mutineers then steamed out and broke out on board the other new battleship, commanded by the Minas Geraes, and the scout ship Bahia. All the officers having been landed, a Brazilian sailor of the pink-slip type took Candido took command of the squadron.

Ammunition was provided, provisions were taken on board and a coal depot on the Isle of Vienna was taken. The rebel vessels are now transporting coal destined for the French steamer Allantique and the English steamer Orenoe. The movement was declared to be without political significance.

The mutineers sent a message by radiogram to Congress at Geneva setting forth their claims for an immediate abolition of corporal punishment on board ship, an increase in their pay according to the programme submitted, the granting of amnesty and dismission of the work with which they were charged by reason of the maintenance of Hoompete ships. The statement added that a bombardment of the city and of other ships in the harbor would follow the refusal of the demands.

The Government refrained from replying to the ultimatum of the mutineers, and a moderately severe fire was soon opened by Congress upon the city. This continued at intervals all night. The inhabitants of Rio Janeiro were thrown into confusion by the suddenness of the events.

On the morning of Nov. 23 there was further firing on the city by the mutineers, the shots coming at infrequent intervals. Little damage to the city resulted from the bombardment, however.

PREMIER TOO BUSY.

He Continues to Side-Track Conference With Robbin.

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—Premier Robbin of Manitoba returned to Ottawa yesterday from New York, and left again in the evening for Prescott to meet his wife. He leaves for Winnipeg to-day. During a portion of the afternoon he occupied a seat on the floor of the House of Commons.

Mr. Robbin's visit to Ottawa was to continue the adjournment which he had with Sir Wilfrid Laurier last week regarding the question of the extension of the boundaries of Manitoba. Yesterday's interview was fruitless. Sir Wilfrid Laurier stated that he was too busy at present to give any consideration to the matter.

It will be remembered that last summer the Premier of Manitoba met in Winnipeg that if he and Mr. Robbin were to get together alone they could settle this matter in an hour. Therefore, soon after Sir Wilfrid Laurier returned to Ottawa, Premier Robbin wrote to him and suggested that he should go to Ottawa and hold a conference regarding the boundary question. Sir Wilfrid replied that he would be very glad to have such a conference.

Mr. Robbin accordingly came down to Ottawa last week and saw the Premier, but Sir Wilfrid assured him that he was very busy with the matters to come before Parliament, and that he would have to ask that the conference be postponed until this week. Mr. Robbin went to New York and returned yesterday. Sir Wilfrid stated that he will, too busy and has asked that the conference be delayed until after the new year.

Mr. Robbin says that he will return to Ottawa after the new year.

Clever Trick of Smugglers.

Montreal, Nov. 26.—The United States customs are much exercised over the smuggling of the automobiles of Chinese in automobiles, in fact it is middle August in Canada that too many years it has almost openly been carried on all along the border. A Chinaman wants to go to the States or to China. If the latter, he buys a ticket to a railway, say, on the line from Rouse's Point, disembarks, and pays $25 to be driven across the line. There, his coming being expected, he is met by a car and chauffeur. If he is tried, and sentenced to be deported, not to Canada, but to China—which, when he started for—the expense of Uncle Sam. He pays no travelling expenses, which a prudent administration is prepared to put up.

If he wishes to remain in the United States the procedure is somewhat of a different nature. He is not deported, but dropped in a quiet spot by the car, and then stage plays thrown up and takes him a good bit south. There he is lost to the immigration officials.

Animals Must Be Well Bred.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 26.—Animals imported for breeding purposes by citizens of the United States on and after Jan. 1, 1911, must be accompanied by certificates of their pedigree of national industry that the animals are pure bred or have been pure bred and duly registered in the foreign book of record for that established breed. The Secretary of Agriculture has revised regulations on the subject in accordance with the thoroughly the provisions of the tariff law instructing him to "determine and certify to the Secretary of the Treasury what are recognized pure and pure bred animals, as a basis on which customs officers may determine what animals may be admitted through the customs free of duty for breeding purposes.

Murdered For Revenge.

New Orleans, Nov. 26.—James H. Reid of Scranton, Miss., a civil engineer, according to advices here received yesterday from Mexico City, was killed there by a policeman he had sought by taking the life of an American, to avenge the beating of Antonio Rodrigues by a mob in Texas.

In company with L. D. Adler of Memphis and some other friends, Reid, last Sunday, had just stepped out of a restaurant, when Sebastian Verderel, a policeman, fired two bullets into his body. When Reid fell Verderel exclaimed: "I have killed an American because the gringos burned a Mexican."

Suffragettes Go to Jail.

Racine, Wis., Nov. 26.—The lives of 300 passengers on train No. 6 on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road, bound for Chicago, hung in the balance Thursday, when Michael Corcoran, engineer, was stricken with apoplexy at his post and died while the train was running forty miles an hour.

Murdered Wrong Man.

Blind River, Ont., Nov. 26.—Tied to a tree, William Carroll, a man of giant build, aged 60, was brought to town Thursday night from Waldie & Co.'s camp by some lumbermen and was handed over to the police on a charge of murdering Joseph Tellier by chopping his head open with an axe.

Waldie's camp is located 42 miles north of Blind River. It appears that clothing had been stolen from Carroll in one of the shanties. Carroll suspected Tellier. Tellier was bending over when Carroll entered the shanty. Mistaking the stooping man for Jones, Carroll picked up an axe and struck Tellier. Tellier never said any more of my clothes," struck him.

Carroll has always been eccentric. He says that he was accused of killing "Old Bill Donnelly" on Jan. 22, 1909, but didn't do it.

Would Kill Competition.

London, Ont., Nov. 26.—A stir was caused yesterday when it became known that a syndicate of Martin Beattie that the city should undertake all the rights the London Electric Co. so as to kill off competition, was made the basis of an appeal to the Dominion Government and the Hydro-Electric Commission at Toronto.

As a result of the appeal, it is stated, the Hydro-Electric Commission will not allow the City of London to increase its rate to Niagara power users from 10 to 25 per cent, as the mayor proposed.

The Beattie deal will say nothing as to the situation. The London Water Commissioners are likely, in order to avoid a long and tedious war with the London Electric Co., to compromise the matter of the purchase of the plant.

Confesses to Murder.

Trenton, N.J., Nov. 26.—After a thrilling all-day cross-examination, J. Sears, a half-breed Indian and negro, pleaded guilty to the murder of the Rev. A. L. Armstrong and his wife, colored missionaries, on a reservation. It is said he expected to benefit under Mr. Armstrong's will.

Arbitrators Can't Agree.

Winnipeg, Nov. 26.—Different views are held by each of three arbitrators sitting in the Grain Growers' dispute, after strenuous efforts to come to a unanimous decision, the board has journed yesterday afternoon. The members agreed to each prepare a report and submit these reports at a final meeting to-day, when it is hoped a compromise may be reached.

Cuts His Throat.

Hamilton, Nov. 26.—In a fit of despondency, James Wright, an aged 60 years old, slashed his throat with a razor at his home on Wright avenue, about three o'clock yesterday morning. Wright entered his wife's bedroom and mumbling that he was going to end all his troubles, he drew the razor across his throat. He was taken to the City Hospital.

There Was No Fighting.

El Paso, Texas, Nov. 26.—C. M. Newman of El Paso was another passenger who returned to-day from Juarez. He declared that American officials, including Consul Edwards, issued a public statement requiring the refugees to go stations to deny reports that the had been fighting at Chihuahua.

Chief Must Wear Uniform.

Chatham, Nov. 26.—The police commissioners yesterday insisted that Chief Holmes must wear uniform while on duty, and that the other officers on the staff also do so when they pass him on the street. Forgerson Chief Holmes got his police uniform when he went to work.

"RAFFLES" GETS OVER TWO YEARS WIFE JAILED, TOO

BUFFALO, Nov. 26.—Thomas M. Barnett; 23 years old ("Raffles") and his 18-year-old wife, Florence, both of Toronto, Ont., were arraigned in Criminal Term, to-day pleaded guilty to the charge of burglarizing the homes of several wealthy Buffalonians.

Barnett was sentenced to Auburn for not less than two years and six months, no more than four years and eight months.

Mrs. Barnett's father, who had come to Fort Toronto, Ont., to see her and asked that she be permitted to go to his home with him. Judge Marcus, however, decided that she to have her spend some time in the Erie County Penitentiary and sent her there for an indefinite term.

She wept as she left the court and told to be thankful that she got off.

The couple were apprehended at Baltimore after their getaway from Buffalo. Barnett confessed the number of Raffles and robbed homes while dressed in a full-dress suit.

GAY GOWNS IN PARIS

A Startling Evening Dress—Aigrettes, Plumes, and Imitation Gems on Shoes

The latest play, "The Marionettes," just produced at the Comedie Francaise, in Paris, brought forth an exhibition of delightful frocks by the young beauties of the company, including Miles. Piérat, Robinne and Provost, all well known in the French capital for their charm of face and figure.

Very noticeable was the new line of decollette, quite off, the shoulder, or at least diminishing that effect by means of flesh-colored dressing, extremely low at the back, and V-shaped back and front. The V is a bit startling at first view, it must be admitted, but is most attractive. Mlle. Piérat wore a fascinating toilette with a very flesh-tailed train, the latter being embroidered velvet, fitting closely, while the corsage was of the design described and of flesh-colored net.

Gabrielle Robinne's gowns are simply exquisite for the afternoon scene. Was a sapphire blue velvet, as soft, as silk. The yoke and sleeves were in one piece and were of Venetian lace, flecked with tiny gold dots. The ball gown was of emerald green, embroidered in jet and gold.

Huge aigrettes and bunches of ostrich plumes set well at the back of the coiffure, were worn with all the costumes. Martial and Armand, who created the gowns for Mlle. Robinne, are showing some very smart models of the new skirt, which, by the way, is shorter in front and back than at the sides. Some are simply shorter in a straight line, others are cut up about four inches and rounded in a curve. These gowns show three later effects, while some afternoon and evening dresses have a bit of embroidered net or lace inserted in the open space.

Period toilettes are at present accompanied by the pretty fashion of wearing lace fichus. Striped taffeta silk is the material chiefly used for these, the stripes running across the black velvet sashes are also distinguishing features.

Evening wraps continue to grow in beauty and grandeur. An opera example was seen at the Cafe de Paris recently. It was of rose-pink green trimmed with moths of velvet and chinchilla, with deep brades of mink.

Another, a new Scour model, was of the palest shade of blue, or rose, and the sleeves being in one piece, with the shoulders cut in very deep, delicately war, lengthwise, crosswise, and in points, a fine lace, and a quilted effect. A very deep band of fur finished the wrap at the bottom.

Polish shoes for afternoon wear are to be worn this year, as well as many other ways. The dull-ribbed silk appears to make the feet look small, and shoes are trimmed with paste slides of sparkling small diamonds.

WARD OFF ARMAGEDDON

A German Peace Advocate Pleads for the Limitation of Armament in Europe

Colonel Richard Gaedke, who is without doubt one of the foremost military writers and experts, and whose frank criticisms of the German army has cost him his military rank, has come out with a strong appeal for peace. In an article which is to be published simultaneously in two leading English and German magazines, he says: "The whole of Europe appears to have been turned into a great arsenal, and the best material, intellectual and moral force and brain is in the service of one single idea—the accumulation of armaments. It points out that six millions of men are under arms, and that the cost of services is the midst of peace.

"A quiet but powerful battle is being waged through an incessantly strengthened naval armament between England and Germany," the article continues.

Col. Gaedke considers that the "insurance premium" against war has become excessive, and he couples a threatening height, where it is beginning to be felt as a crushing burden. In conclusion, Col. Gaedke says:—

"A way must be found to restrictions would be a relief against humanity, and would be appreciated at all cases, and will be protested by a few people, a single spark of conscience or common sense will be conveyed, to the people. Therefore, everything depends on the people, that the spirit of hatred or discord between them; and that the spirit of love and peace between them should be supported.

"I believe I have demonstrated that the last and greatest danger to peace is the excess of armaments which keeps the thought of war before the eyes of the peoples, and puts upon their shoulders a burden so heavy that they cannot bear for any length of time, without injury. Therefore, the time has come when the Powers must seriously consider a limitation of armaments.

"A treaty binding agreements between the nations can further in a peaceful manner, the dangers that are unceasingly lying in wait for any treaties are remedies which work gradually for an assured peace among civilized nations."

A TITLED PRISONER

The Countess Tarnovska is a Pitiable Object in a Prison at Venice

Countess Tarnovska, who was condemned at Venice in May last to eight years' imprisonment for instigating Dr. Naumoff, and the lawyer Petukoff to assassinate Count Kamarovsky, her finance, is supplicating for royal pardon as a last desperate resource since her appeal was quashed by the Supreme Court of Cassation.

Dr. Naumoff, the famous lawyer who conducted her defence, says her marvelous courage and self-control have now forsaken her, and it is doubtful if she will survive the rigors of solitary confinement. Hitherto the Countess has been living in the best chamber of the Giudee Prison on the Venetian Canal, paying a fixed rental; ordering all her meals at pleasure from a city restaurant, receiving friends, and indulging freely in fine cigarettes. All this must cease in a few days, when the Countess will novaks will be sent off to a convict prison.

She has become the subject of hard humanitarians. She cannot be induced to sleep elsewhere than on the floor through fear of fleas. Some time past she lived in continual dread of the nocturnal earthquake during the night, and so braved the company of one of the slaves of the prison staff, who now always sleeps in her room.

Apart from the terrible nervous crises which keep her frequently for hours together in a cold, fluid, semi hypnotic state, Tarnovska is exact tempered and submissive to rule. The countess, says Dr. Verchini, dresses neatly, but with the utmost simplicity. She passes most of her leisure practising in the convent chapel, or reading spiritual books. Eighteen months have flown by since she descended for the last time the Ducal Palace, and nearly all her hair has been cut off.

Tarnovska's appetite has deserted her. She is a martyr to headache, and never sleeps more than one hour at a stretch. She often overcome by fainting fits.

It is reported that when they met and conversed, lunged lately after the great trial, Dr. Naumoff and the Countess Tarnovska not only forgave each other, but mutually vowed to marry as soon as the countess's convict days are over.

SOCIALISM CRITICIZED

Anti-Socialist Union Points Out What it Considers a Grave Danger

A grave warning against the dangers of the Socialist theories at the municipal elections was sounded recently by Mr. H. G. Grieswood, the secretary of the Anti-Socialist Union.

"Just as the Socialistic Commune, headed the way for the French Revolution of 1789, so Greswood, "so the supregnation of England borough councils will be followed by a revolution not effectively checked, to a parliamentary revolution later on over here. The obvious moral of the recent victories in Italy, Belgium, Switzerland and Austria is too frequently blind to the advantages which Socialism is making in this country. The result of the elections furnish a practical illustration of Socialistic growth and strength—a fact which the Union has been endeavoring to bring to the public notice from its inception.

"It is the last general election the returns showed that one person in every seven voted for the Socialist issue—that is, confiscation of property, secular education, the repudiation of the National Debt, and other so-called reforms.

"During the municipal elections we have been busy with speakers and literature, and the results are considered done—and there been adequate funds—only a few.

"The elections show once more that our opponents vigilance is essential to combat Socialism in all its varied forms.

FLED FROM BOREDOM.

The Tale of a Princess Interrupted in a Yachting Cruise.

A few seasons back a well known banker chartered splendid yacht for August and invited a large number of her friends for a three weeks' cruise. At first all went well, though the party was not specially well assorted, but after a few days they began to evince signs of being decidedly bored with each other's company.

The banker gradually threw signs of incipient boredom, which became more plainly evident each day, and at last all left the yacht, except a certain Count and his wife, an old and experienced yachtsman.

"What on earth shall I do to amuse these people?" she asked.

The yachtsman looked at the seven sky and calm, blue water and said in his head doubtfully.

"The weather seems pretty settled then so a bit," he said, "but the weather looks quite settled. There is only one thing to be done. For heaven's sake keep down the engines will manage that all right. Then you'll be his probably often done so before. Then you must make for the nearest port for repairs and let your friends take a train home. Some of them, I expect, will find an excuse for bidding you goodby and those who remain with you will get along all right together."

The banker followed her guests advice and arrived at Toulon a day later, where sigh twenty of her guests bid her goodby.—London M. A. P.

THE PRINCE WINKED.

And Miss Alcott Was at the Other End of the Flirtation.

It seems as a matter of fact here is the circumstance on record that Louisa M. Alcott, the saisted author of "Little Women," once played a practical joke on Edward VII. The fact comes out in Mrs. Belle Stowe's book, "Louisa May Alcott, Teacher and Author." Under the title of "Fanny's Visit" she records a passage in the book which contains Miss Alcott's personal account of the incident. She says: "Fanny's visit to the late, king, then Prince of Wales, made his famous wink this conspiracy.

"I went to Boston," Miss Alcott relates, "and I saw the Prince of Wales and over the common, and I stopped to review—a yellow haired laddie, very much like another Fanny would not, and got and wanted to ride. She is very speedy winked his boyish eye at us. Fanny's curls, yellow curls and wild waving looked almost like gold, the poor little prince wanted some fun. We laughed and thought that we had been more distinguished by the wink than by a stately bow. Boys are always jolly companions."

By the way, this incident occurred in 1860, when the Prince of Wales was nineteen and consequently considerably quite a broth of a boy, and when Miss Alcott was thirty. The record it—was twenty-eight.—New York Mail.

The Gold Dust West There.

North America has produced a good producing continent only since the late forties. Even in 1850 the world's yield so far about 200 years. According to the London Chronicle, in the voyage round the world, which Drake made in the privateer Captain Shelvocke found in certain California valleys "a fine black mold which as we found by washing up to the sun, appears as if intermingled with particles of gold, and were a little prejudiced," he adds, "against the country by reason it could not be cleaned and wash the earth from some of it, and the more we did the more we found intermixed with the material, to be further satisfied I brought away some of it, which we lost in our confusion in China."

A NEW REGIME IN COLLEGE

It Started a Tide In the Affairs of Matthew.

BY GUY WETMORE CARRYL.

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

At twenty minutes to 4 on a certain February afternoon the blue eyes of Matthew Bacon opened to their fullest capacity, the heart of Matthew Bacon stood still for an instant and then began to pound with a vehemence which threatened to snap off the buttons of his waistcoat, and Matthew himself drew a deep breath and said aloud to "God!" the sole and seeming insufficient reason for which remarkable phlegmatisfactions was one white violet which had suddenly come to light between reason for which remarkable Dies Lost" in the library of Fuller university.

It was the first year of the coeducational system at Fuller, and students and faculty alike were still in the throes of self adjustment to the new regime.

Professor Bacon, '01, president of the senior class, who in the early days of his college career had trotted over the cinder path at phenomenal speed and at the late the season of his fellows, was among the first to see that he had made a practice of avoiding the society of women, coeducated or his own short comings in a social sense. Now that it was forced upon him it was more than seemed to him that he had brought it of his own free will.

The term was fully a fortnight old before Matthew began to see the practical points of difference. But the bah-bah of conversation, once broken, grows like a weed, and a week later, on his own intense amusement, he found himself walking to the university lecture on literature for the entrance with particular ardor. It was a black algret, worn with silver and perched coquettishly on what Matthew somewhat inadequately described to himself as a "big green hat," in particular ignorance of the fact that there are green and green and that this particular green was a soft dark emerald, which had nothing in common with the blatant grass green of spring herself and was, moreover, most distractingly becoming. But Matthew remarked it not. But there was no doubt in his mind about the face itself. Even his untutored eye could discern that the dark eyes and chestnut hair and the soft rose-leaf complexing lip tilted nose and the sweetest mouth in two pennsylvania were separated from him, in fact, by the width of the class room aisle and metaphorically as far distant as Venus from earth.

Her name, Miss Vance, came directly before his on the roll.

When he discovered by accident one day that the name of Hamilton was due Matthew straightway and hopelessly chose that most inconvenient and circuitous route to college. Once only he saw her on the steps, and then she was talking with another man, and the stupidest man in the whole of Keaton City!

Things went on in this fashion until February, and then Matthew took a resolution. In his mother's censorious words, "Matthew was getting queer." They were a fad of Mrs. Bacon's, but Matthew, as usual, was not to be seen elsewhere in town, and her keenest pleasure was found in the brief hour she spent each morning in the violet house gathering the few hot-house flowers for her table. But she was a woman of perspicacity, was Mrs. Bacon, and when, very red in the face and stammering desperately, Matthew requested her one morning to leave the plants untouched until further notice from college that afternoon she contented herself with a calm "Certainly, my son," which earned his gratitude, while it excited his astonishment.

"The matter hasn't an atom of curiosity," he said to himself, "and thank goodness for it! But it's most surprising in a woman."

For how could he be expected to remember that a pocket is the best-weighted matters, that it was nothing in this custom to write "Natalie" on bits

RAN DOWN THE "HILL"

Jimmy Fidler Holds a Record In Mountain Railroading.

To Engineer Jimmy Fidler, one of the C.P.R., belongs the doubtful credit of having ridden a runaway engine the length of the Hill, which is the name given the great slope down Kicking Horse Pass in the Rockies. Good record officials evidently thought the credit wasn't Jimmy's.

Jimmy started down the Big Hill one summer day a dozen years ago with a light engine. He let the engine get away from him and found himself approaching the first safety switch at much more than the eight miles an hour prescribed by the company's rules and humorously so. The runaway was already rerversed to use the waterbrake, so all that Jimmy could do was to attempt an economical application of the air-brake and give it and the switch time. Then he proceeded, any visible effect, Jimmy turned to the fireman with a sickly grin and shouted:

"Here goes for Field!"

He reached for the whistle lever and sounded four imperious yelps to indicate that he was switched on to the main line. Fearing that the signal might not be taken up sufficiently repeated it, and then gave it a third and fourth time. The switch-tender saw that the approaching engine was unmistakably running away, and the rules required him to display a red flag. That type that under such circumstances he was to leave the switch and the spur to trap the runaway. But here was a case where the switch-tender who wanted to meet his fate on the main line. As between obeying the rules and humoring the switch-tender allowed Jimmy to tear down the main line, ignoring the simultaneous succession of signals to the next switch-tender.

Such frantic reiteration was not to be disregarded. Switch-tender attended to the command, then himself. He did the same. The three profoundly astonished switch-tenders gazed open-mouthed after a trail of smoke disappearing in the distance. The sound of a whistle came faintly up from the direction of the smoke, for Jimmy seemed to have formed the habit.

The fireman's first impulse had been to jump. Then he looked hard, and Jimmy's grin caused him to hesitate until he had become too terrified to act. The engine took the curves with a violence that called for the fireman's undivided attention to keep from being thrown against the boiler-head and having his brains knocked out. As for Jimmy, the grin had frozen upon his face. He sat upon his seat, his left hand straight ahead, working the whistle lever like a metronome.

Two miles and a quarter from Field is a tunnel which marks the head of the steep grade. On emerging from the tunnel the runaway began to respond to the efforts that had been made to check it. Then the two men recovered their self-possession and looked out upon the bright world in mingled surprise at finding themselves still in it.

When they reached Field the fireman, with an earnestness born of conversation, once more broke, grave like a weed, and a week later, on his own intense amusement, he found himself walking to the university lecture on literature for the entrance with particular ardor. It was a black algret, worn with silver and perched coquettishly on what Matthew somewhat inadequately described to himself as a "big green hat," in particular ignorance of the fact that there are green and green and that this particular green was a soft dark emerald, which had nothing in common with the blatant grass green of spring herself and was, moreover, most distractingly becoming. But Matthew remarked it not. But there was no doubt in his mind about the face itself. ABOUNDING IN WEALTH.

Vast Wild Region Will Be Opened by Canada's New G.T.P. Line.

A party of sportsmen and prospectors have just returned from the Hazelhead section in British Columbia, just north of the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, where the big transcontinental will traverse the country, so rich in scenic grandeur, fertile valleys and mineral wealth. Several constructing camps are now ready at work at the very foothills of the towering mountains. The evidence of penetrating this range will be enormous, but the vastness of the undertaking does not daunt those at the head of the great enterprise, as surveys and explorations by experient engineers prove that the new railway will traverse a rich district in addition, the agriculturist and the miner is one of the finest in the Dominion. All who have returned to Ottawa from this country speak of it as comparably rich in every respect.

One of the party, being interviewed, declared that he had found country of the most wonderful on the American continent. "It is like a fairy-tale story," he declared, "in which each prospector takes up without question. Throughout this whole section of central British Columbia there are mountain peaks unscaled by man, unknown, fir-clad foothills and vast valleys of rich grass. Lakes, rivers and streams are filled with fish and the land contains every kind of varieties of wild berries. There are minerals in abundance. Gold calls the prospector from the corners of the earth as soon as the railway reaches the head of navigation, and that is expected next year. These deep and sheltered valleys will, in time, become a great ranching and dairying district. Unfortunately for the latter, the speculator has already arrived. He has bought 200,000 acres there 10 years ago he was glad to get for less than a dollar an acre, and is now asking as high as $30 an acre for land along the railway line. A man will offer to sell a section of land that is now unexplored, and when you ask him to show him title he will be unable even to admit that he has no claim whatever beyond the fact that he has filed on certain land which is locally described as lying in a certain valley. Many of these speculators are going to straighten out this tangle ultimately, and deliver title, but it is likely to be worked out.

"But for our party, we left nothing but grandeur. We have seen most magnificent mountains and glittering glaciers, and when we reached the Grand Fork of the Fraser River, where the big mountains of Selkirk have been pulled apart, and saw Mount Robson through the opening we took off our hats and bowed down in silence. The Indians called this mountain the Throne, because a great gulch which furrows its side resembles the letter T, a 'spiral road.' However, that was a mere detail even the road has seemed to take. For years trappers and Indians have spoken of the Mount Brown, Mount Hooker and Mount Murchison as the great peaks of the Northern Rockies, and the Indians are always for Yah-bil-hasmountain, which would seem to be chief mountain of the Rockies. Below the mountain, and reached by measurement, Brown, Hooker and Murchison are first of expectations, Milton and Cheadle, and Hooker, the northwest passage, measured about 16,000 feet, and Brown, lowering 10,750 feet above the valley of the Fraser, is a peerless peak of beauty. Thus the contention of the Indians that Yah-bil-has-mountain is the premier peak of the Canadian Rockies."

Saskatchewan's New Governor.

George Exton Forget, of Regina, who has been appointed to succeed Hon. Mr. Forget, as Lieutenant-Governor for the province of Saskatchewan, is an old Ontario boy. He was born in Prescott, of French parents, he struck out for the West and passed through Brandon as a homesteader on the Regina plains. He took an interest in politics, was a man of law, and was called to the Legislature in 1905. Later he was the farmers' choice for Speaker, and sat in the Assembly at the prairie capital until he was called to the Senate. Mr. Forget is a Conservative, and he proved just as successful at this strenuous work as he proved in capacities on the floor of the House of Assembly. He has come in for a long line of honors, including having neither "pull" nor friend at court, to help him on his way. Still, he was pounding away at his country's interests, and when the call came he (who has the say in things on Parliament hill) was the man who was summoned. He was "discovered" by the Premier, who had watched the way they wanted to represent the province, and looked after their interests in the Legislature. Premier Sifton recommended to say, "See George about it!" and the result was that he became the wonderful comradeship between the premier and the man who had believed in him. That explains George Brown's advancement in public life.

All Arranged.

Tom Flanagan, who was made man used to manage Tom Longboat, the famous Indian runner, is a little fine for professional pedestrians. One day a couple of years ago he was led to bet in bunch of fives on a horse. His man, who was the favorite, was beaten. Flanagan, who always looked suspicious—a man who was believed in—stood in with the pair of runners, said to Flanagan:

"Say, Tom, you're all right, but kick about. The start was by mutual consent."

"I ain't kickin' about that," snapped back Flanagan. "What I'm sore about is the finish was by mutual consent, too."

WINTER SHOE STYLES.

If Your Footgear is Smart it Must Conform to These Rules.

The styles for winter shoes are in. Pay attention to them when buying your new shoes, so that you are not fooled into purchasing an old fashioned pair.

The most prominent leathers are dull calf and Russian as well as patent leather in combination with cloth or kid tops.

For dress, patent kid vamps with velvet and satin toppings, black or course. Some corded and self colored figured silks are used.

Black suede toppings are also seen, and a few browns and quiet purples. These, too, have patent leather vamps.

Heels are not so high as recently. One and seven-eighths inches is the highest for day wear.

Vamps are nearly all short. If you have a longer vamp you must get a lower heel.

Toes are either round or long. The latter are broader and more favored.

Tops are rather high and slanting, being longer in front than in back.

Buttons that cover the dresses worn beneath them are extensively worn this season, and this fad is well adapted to girls and small women of similar figure. The seams that extend to the shoulders make a feature of the latest style. JUDIC CHOLLET.

smart, too, over a last season's dress, and they are particularly pretty over dresses of soft net.

Fabric girdles of strongly contrasting colors will be much worn with separate waists.

The plain fabrics are no longer in high favor, a preference now being shown for dotted, striped or patterned materials.

The dominating styles of wraps in Paris are confined to two types, the classic mantle and the practical coat. Both are on slender lines.

The best of the fine styles are graceful, charming and, on the whole, becoming. Their general characteristics are the short, scant skirt, the collarless blouse and peasant sleeves.

All sorts of novelty thin materials are being used for blouses this season, and here is a model that is equally well adapted to chiffon, crepe de chine, marquisette or to lingerie materials. The sleeves are inserted on quite new lines. JUDIC CHOLLET.

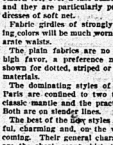
SARTORIAL NEWS.

Hats For the Woe Folk—Empire Styles In Again.

As regards millinery for the wee girl, the mushroom hat with a wreath of small roses or forgetmenots and white daisies is very popular.



Very small perforations and a new arrangement of these perforations on the tips of shoes are seen.

Empire fashions are coming into vogue after a rest of a season, and for evening frocks they will be the height of the mode.

Sleeves are all short. They are wide, in bell shape to match peasant cut, so popular for the blouse.

Heavy gray tweed is the leading material for travel and full length wear suits. Black velvet is liked on this as a trimming.

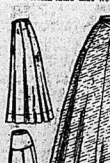
FUR FASHIONS.



The Old Barrel Muffs Again In Favor, The New Fur Shawl.

The newest muffs are in the old fashioned round shapes that have not appeared for a decade, but this season's round muffs are much larger than any we have had before. Tails hang from the end of the muff.

And in connection with muffs there is a charming fat shape of the dressy order made of velvet or silk shirred in wide puffs and edged with wide bands of fur. The accompanying toque should be of fur and velvet, the crown of the latter material and the rim of fur.

The fur shawl is one of the novelties of the pelt season, soft as a silk tissue. Draped or looped knotted, it is a delightfully useful garment when worn with light dresses, a well nigh royal luxury, but of great exquisite ease.

There is in the shops to be found an expensive looking long coat of electric seal trimmed with a deep band of imitation Persian lamb that would baffle an expert to detect from the real skin. The wrap has a novel collar of this fur and is fastened with black silk frogs. Its cost is only $33.

The seven gored skirt is one that is always liked. This one can be made with or without the yoke. It takes straight lines in conformity with the present styles, yet it is not exaggerately narrow. In some the skirt is a practical separate skirt for school.

THE MILLINERY WORLD.

Willow Plumes of Vegetable Origin Charming Wing Coloorings.

On some of the new hats are seen willow plumes that are of vegetable origin. They resemble ostrich and are crinkly and fluffy, but they are made of fine French grass similar to that which was used on summer hats in the form of pompons.

A broad and graceful shaped black velvet hat which turns up slightly in the center front has for its only trimming a double bow of black velvet and fluffy white aigret feathers extending well toward the back.

Wings for millinery purposes never were larger and never more brilliant in coloring. If extended to their full width many of them would measure four feet or more from tip to tip, and they are deep in proportion. Usually they are folded in somewhat and laid in coverlets or the entire top of one is the big fabric hats. It is not unusual to see red, blue, yellow and some other vivid shade on one pair of wings.

Bloomers are favorite garments for cool weather wear. In many instances they take the place of petticoats. They are used for exercise suits and are altogether desirable. Serge, flannel and mohair are the materials from which they are developed.

HELPLESS CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM

Five Boxes Of "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Her

4 HOME PLACE, TORONTO, DEC. 15th, 1909.

"I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism for nearly a year, and my right arm was swollen and the pain was fearful. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful, and I could hardly move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians but their medicine did me no good, and I tried numerous other remedies but received no benefit. I was simply a helpless cripple and suffered from Rheumatism all during last winter.

I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised in "The Telegram" and decided to try this remedy. After I had taken a few doses, I was much relieved of the pain less, and I continued the treatment with good hopes. When I had taken three boxes, I was so well that I could use my arm again and the pain was practically gone. After I had taken five boxes, I was entirely well again—no pain—no suffering—and now I am as WELL as I ever was.

The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-tives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me of my suffering.

For the sake of others who may suffer from this terrible disease, Rheumatism, I give you permission to publish this statement."

Miss LIZZIE BAXTER.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy that actually cures Rheumatism, and Sciatica because "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that actually prevents Uric Acid being formed in any quantity in the body. If there is no excess of uric acid in the blood, there can be no Rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives" keeps the stomach clean—the liver active—the bowels regular—the kidney strong and the skin healthy. These are the organs that rid the body of all waste. When "Fruit-a-tives" so regulates the system that all waste is eliminated, then there can be no waste of "uses" to be changed into uric acid. Thus, there can be no uric acid in the blood, to inflame nerves and cause the pain which we know by the names of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Neuralgia.

"Fruit-a-tives" will cure every trace of Rheumatism. Pain In The Back, Swollen Hands and Feet, and other troubles due to the blood being poisoned by uric acid.

If you are subject to Rheumatism, cure yourself now with "Fruit-a-tives" and be free of pain this winter.

PORTRAYED AS KING.

Mr. Henniker Heaton Mistaken For Edward the Seventh.

Although Mr. Henniker Heaton, M.P., has announced his approaching retirement from Canterbury, which he has represented for twenty-five years, his agitation for cheaper cable rates shows that he is as active as ever in the matter of postal reform. The country has to thank him for the establishment of penny postage throughout the Empire and to the United States, and will one day have to thank him for the extension of the system to France. The City of Canterbury conferred its freedom upon him seven years ago, and numerous Government honors have pressed a K.C.M.G. upon him. But Mr. Heaton has four times declined the honor. There is a joke in connection with Mr. Heaton's friendship with Mr. Marconi which might bear repetition. When he was made a Freeman of the City of London Mr. Marconi accompanied him, and when the latter's turn came and he received the freedom of Rome, he insisted that Mr. Heaton should return the compliment by going with him to Rome. Some little time before this Sir Benjamin Stone had photographed them together on the terrace of the House of Commons, in the costumes of their respective courts. Mr. Marconi sent a copy of this to an Italian newspaper, and the latter published it on the day Mr. Marconi received the freedom of Rome over the inscription: "Mr. Marconi and King Edward the Seventh." Some of Mr. Heaton's most treasured possessions—and he only received it during his election campaign this year—is a letter from Mr. Chamberlain wishing him success. Lord Desborough has chosen the following extract from it as an inscription for Mr. Heaton's tombstone: "It has been given to few men to promote reforms unquestionably and to see them adopted in their own lifetime with universal approval." There is an amusing anecdote in connection with a Parliamentary chess match which the famous postal reformer got up between Great Britain and America in 1907. It was played by cable, and at one stage of the game everything pointed to the defeat of the new, world players. Realizing this, they wired "You're good for us; we'll play you at poker!" The game, however, ended in a draw, and the offer to play poker has not been accepted.

A Handsome Hair Dressing But Easy to Do

Style B. See Note.

Model and Instructions by MADAM LULU BUTLER
Principal, The Madam Butler School of Beautifying Arts, Detroit, Michigan.

STYLE B. The hair is waved on each side of the parting and over the crown of the head. The ends of the waved hair are then brought half way up between the nape of the neck and the crown of the head and arranged in puffs or ringlets. The main body of the hair is brought below the nape of the neck and braided into two braids. These braids are crossed and brought around the head. The curls or puffs are allowed to drop across the back. This arrangement is without the use of rats, frames or false hair.

To Have Beautiful Hair Use Newbro's Herpicide

No woman can afford to be indifferent to the appearance of her hair. A mass of nice snappy hair, becomingly dressed will add more in genuine good looks than a pretty face, or an expensive gown. Don't allow the scalp to become clogged with dirt and dandruff. Don't let the Dandruff Germ destroy your hair. If your hair is uneven, dead, dull and brittle and comes out by the handful every time you draw a comb through it, the germ is there. To kill that germ and check the loss of hair should be your first anxiety. NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE will do this and at the same time put the hair and scalp in a healthy condition. HERPICIDE appeals to those of greatest refinement on account of its exquisite odor, its purity and cleanliness. It contains no grease and does not stain or dye. There is nothing more desirable than this remarkable scalp prophylactic. The hair responds readily to a regular and intelligent use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE. Try it and see.

The GIRL IN THE CASE

Leads to the Finding of a Wife

By STACY E. BAKER.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Rawlins, reaching for his own inferior timepiece, found in its place an expensive watch with three diamonds set in the rear case and the initials W. A. V. engraved thereon.

Naturally Rawlins was surprised. He returned the watch to his pocket, carefully folded his paper and glanced about in search of the philanderer, the person who had effected the exchange.

The vinegary faced female wedged in the seat to the right of him stared back suspiciously.

A wheezing fat man, uncomfortably crowded, sat at his left and grinned heartily as he noted the observant eye of his fellow passenger.

"These street cars are crowded sundays," he said, "don't they?"

Rawlins agreed. He couldn't accustom himself to the thought of this man's pudgy fingers deftly inserting themselves in his waistcoat pocket on a delicate mission of substitution.

He stared about him searchingly, but the enigma was unsolved when the conductor called Twenty-third street.

In the sacred precincts of his own little office Rawlins gave the matter a keener inspection to this gift the gods had thrown upon him.

Heavy lines corrugated the brow of the young attorney, and he pushed his thick black hair back with an impromptu pompadour as his mind grappled with the problem. The slim fingers of the youth fondled the stem and the case snapped suddenly open, disclosing the pictured face of a radiant girl.

Rawlins—John P. Rawlins, Esq.—was young—young enough, in fact, to believe in the ideal woman, and this picture corresponded exactly with the dream in his heart. The clear blue eyes, the flawless contour of the face, with the piquant, refreshing nose and determined little chin; the wave in the heavy hair; the peerless neck and shoulders—every detail about the girl summed up soul dear to the youth.

The sudden advent of that rara avis, a client, aroused Rawlins to the impleasure of litigating logic to admiring contemplation of the picture. Before finding the likeness of the possible owner—Rawlins had as active mind—the case in hand had come into such peculiar possession of the watch had decided to turn it over to the police, but now—

Now the unified efforts of the entire constabulary of the town could not have dragged it from him.

And yet—paradox—the youth wished to find the owner, if possible, more than ever. The riddle of how the little timepiece happened to be in his pocket had gripped him with an insatiable curiosity at first; now, strangely enough, his sole thoughts were of the maid in the case, longed to meet her. He wanted to become acquainted with her.

The attorney was bothered with no clients that day, and in the afternoon, with the fair pictured face of the mysterious damsel propped before him, he compiled an advertisement for the morning papers:

Found, under peculiar circumstances, valuable watch. Owner can have same by calling at ——, Broadway and Twenty-fourth street, Rawlins, Esq.

Rawlins was a wealthy youth of good city connections. He had graduated from college the year before and was now awakened to the fact that New York is overcrowded with attorneys. Clients, from a pecuniary standpoint, he didn't need, but the ennui of a listless life was boring him, stifling his ambition. This little adventure, with the flavor of romance so strong upon it, bade fair to give life back its relish.

The advertisement brought results. Every faker in the city seemed to have bought a paper and picked the Rawlins "found" as the easy money of the morning.

The lawyer entertained the sly adventurers with tentative questions on their lips, keen answers after information that, in turn, was to be given over to shrewd consideration, and would follow up with better chances of landing the prize, and coarse women who attempted to swindle the advertised article away from its holder, and, failing in this, fell into a vocabulary of vehement and impolite protest.

The attorney's faith in human nature was sadly jarred.

The keen youth gave absolutely no information of the gleams along the paths of chance, and then it came about that none was able to come later with sufficient information to draw down the trophy. Rawlins breathed his relief at the end of the day and again drew the watch from his pocket and studied the photograph. One longs dously for the identification. The youth was in a perfect frenzy to meet the girl.

Time passed. Several months went by and still the young man was vainly striving to meet the lady owner of the photograph. It became a habit with him to stand before the window of his office and stare for hours into the street, in this way there was a chance that she knowing eyes would find the owner of the watch.

One day as he stood at his usual point of vantage his contemplative eyes on a hack cab, the latter came to a stop in front of one of the large stores, and—oh, the sudden shock of it —she stepped out.

In a moment the long legs of the youth were fairly flying down the stairs—he wouldn't wait for the elevator—and he was across the street and into the store in another fast following sixty seconds.

It took the attorney some time to find the girl. The wonder of it is that he found her at all in that huge beehive of struggling patrons and clerks.

She was on the first floor and at the handkerchief counter. He patiently waited until she had finished her purchases.

"I beg your pardon!" he commenced, approaching, hat in hand.

The girl stared at him coldly. She was a revelation in beauty all and more than the photograph had promised.

"I have here," said the lawyer, "something that I believe belongs to you." He smiled in what he evidently believed to be a courteous manner, but which left an entirely different impression on the lady.

"I do not know you, sir," she answered in a well bred voice, the cadence of which thrilled her susceptible admirer to the full of his rapidly beating heart. "You have probably mistaken me for another person." Her eyes rested meditatively upon an approaching floorwalker.

"I know we have never met," began Rawlins inanely, "but—but"—

At an almost imperceptible sign from the girl the floorwalker joined them.

"This gentleman," began the girl distantly, "thinks he knows me. He doesn't." She passed suggestively.

The floorwalker, wise of his kind, eyed the attorney with small favor.

"You had better go, sir," she—or. He, too, ended his sentence with an eloquent stop.

Rawlins, despite his keen admiration for the girl, was angry.

"One moment," he said authoritatively to the official. He turned again to the girl.

"Perhaps you recognize this," he asked and held the watch before her eyes.

The maid gazed at it with some curiosity. "I do not," she said. "To my knowledge, I have never seen it before in my life. Are you the—or—official propounder of enigmas here?"

The sarcasm was lost on the despondent Rawlins, who, with the iron hand of the floorwalker on his arm, was being rapidly escorted toward the door.

"I'm giving you a chance," explained the latter, "although I hadn't ought to. The bosses don't never harest any fake or fresh guys who antagonize the trade."

An elderly woman with gray hair and blue eyes came hurrying after the pair and touched the dejected lawyer on the arm.

"Just a moment," she began breathlessly. "My niece has been telling me about it. You—you must have my watch!"

"I knew it," interrupted the floorwalker. "I knew it from the start, madam. He's a 'dip,' old offender probably. If you'll just step into the office I'll see that you recover your property without any fuss, and we'll send this party down."

The woman stared.

"You are rather officious, Mr. Gentleman was attempting to do my niece a favor. He is no pickpocket. I am sure of that." She spoke coldly.

She turned to Rawlins. "Tell me, was the watch you wished to return set with three diamonds and did it contain a little miniature?"

Rawlins nodded a happy assent. The girl had joined them. The youth noted with an appreciative eye the embarrassed flush dotting her pure cheek.

"This is your property," came from Rawlins. Once again he took the watch from his pocket, and the eager hands of the older woman accepted it.

"Oh, how can I ever thank you?" she gasped. "It really is my watch!" She turned to Rawlins. "And you recognized my niece from the little picture?"

Again the happy youth nodded. Words were beyond him.

"But how did you get it?" she asked wonderingly. "I saw that great, fat thief who grabbed it from my hands run and jump on a street car, and although I promptly reported the matter to the police I really had given up expecting the return of the trinket long ago.

"It was my first day in the city," she continued. "I live in New Orleans, you must know, and I am only visiting here. Marie—she is my sister—worries so over trifles that I didn't tell her. Really, I never expected to see it again. I"—

"But why don't you allow the gentleman to answer your question, auntie?" laughingly interrupted the girl.

Upon Rawlins a great light had dawned. The good natured heavyweight seated on his right in the car had been the pickpocket who had stolen the watch. Evidently fearing capture, he had offered the article to Rawlins and taken the cheaper timepiece of the attorney in return.

"It's a long story," explained the youth—"almost too long to tell here. I am a lawyer, with offices just across the way." He handed the older woman a card. "If I might suggest"—

"You must ride home with us in our carriage," eagerly interrupted the aunt, "and explain in detail. Really, I wouldn't miss the story for the watch. Or perhaps," she amended, "you can't spare the time just now?"

Rawlins glanced at the red cheeked girl.

"I will be pleased to ride home with you," he said.

A MAN'S WHISKERS.

They Should Not Be Renovated With the Shoebrush.

If men would devote as much loving care to their whiskers as women do to their hair they would contribute greatly to increasing the dignity of the sex.

A woman wouldn't think of coming downtown without having her hair properly arranged. She combs it, and fusses with it, and pads it out with rats, and puts wire cages under it, and runs ribbons through it, and she is a vision of loveliness when she appears in the busy haunts of men.

But a man gives his whiskers no attention further than to brush the eggshells or coffee grounds out of them with the shoebrush. It never seems to occur to him that his whiskers might be made beautiful if he would devote one-half the time to them that a woman gives to her hair. He might easily have made a wire cage to attach to his chin, and then he could weave his whiskers around it in captivating styles and tie the ends together with a pink or blue ribbon.

The idiotic gets tired of seeing the same old fashions in whiskers when it would be so easy to devise new and ravishing ways of wearing them.

There should be a whiskers club in Emporia. If such an organization were formed and the members held weekly meetings to exchange ideas and compare notes the results would soon be apparent. The town's whiskers would become distinctive, and their reputation would cover the country.

Let us have a new deal in spinach.—Emporia Gazette.

A Deadly Weapon.

There is a horrible weapon favored by certain of the hill-tribes in the Chaco of western Asia, which constists of four sharp, curved blades hidden under the fingers and securely held in place by rings passing over two of them. With such a contrivance Shirvajl, the Ahmma hero, is credited with having disemboweled his Mohammedan overlord when making a pretense of rendering him his humble submission. The vagnaks ("tiger's claws"), as they are called, are distinctly more brutal than their western prototype, the "knuckle duster."—Wide World Magazine.

In Its Destination.

"Here's a nickel," said a thrifty housewife to a tramp at her door. "Now, what are you going to do with it?"

"Well, mum," replied the hungry man, "if I buy a tourist car I shan't have enough left to pay my chauffeur. If I purchase a steam yacht there won't be enough left to defray the cost of running it, so I guess, mum, I'll get a schooner and handle it myself."—Everybody's Magazine.

Not an Unmixed Evil.

"Poverty has its blessings," said the philosophic friend.

"That's right," replied Mr. Sudden. "I'll bet you wouldn't be to wiped out in Wall street as I was last week. But it put an immediate stop to two threatened attacks of promise suits."—Washington Star.

MARCONI'S NEW FIELD

The Wireless Wizard is Working on an Aeroplane Which Will Carry a "Wireless."

The inventor of the wireless telegraph is endeavoring to perfect an aeroplane that will rise directly from any spot and that will carry wireless apparatus of sufficient strength to send messages in a satisfactory manner.

Mr. Marconi explained his views in an interview recently, emphasizing the value of the adaptation of the wireless to an aeroplane in peace or war, and stating that he would probably fly himself in connection with his experiments.

"I am now working on an aeroplane for a syndicate in which I am interested," he said. "Important experiments have been made already with the machine, which at present is housed near London.

"It is a monoplane, and in general design does not differ materially from existing types. When completed, however, it will combine what we consider to be the best points of all the present makes, in addition to several new features.

"Not the least of these, I hope, will be one whereby the machine will be able to rise from any position. In this connection I can only say that we are making an interesting series of experiments with propellers and other parts designed to give a sharp upward thrust or lift, and that I am very hopeful of the result.

"The installation of effective wireless apparatus does not present any very grave difficulties with the right on any machine."

In visiting types of aeroplanes the whole of the pilot's attention has apparently to be concentrated on the machine itself. Unless and until this is adjusted it will be necessary to carry an additional passenger to operate the wireless instruments installed in any machine.

"Imagine," he said, the pilot poised in the heavens in view of the enemy's position.

"By the aid of the wireless installation he would be able not only to report what is happening immediately to headquarters, but without leaving his post."

Mr. Marconi has the true scientist's disdain for danger, if necessary to his work.

"Provided I can evolve a suitable machine," he said, "provided also my time permits, I shall not hesitate to fly it myself. However, I consider that the toll the air has already taken merely emphasizes the need for taking every possible precaution against accidents."

HAVE YOU ACROMEGALY?

This Rare Disease Causes an Enlargement of Various Parts of the Body.

A demonstration was given by Professor Arthur Keith, at the Royal College of Surgeons, London, of a disease known as acromegaly.

Men and women who are the subjects of this disease find that their hands and feet increase slowly in size, so that large fittings in boots and gloves are required from time to time. The face also grows, especially the lower parts, and the ridges over the eyes become more pronounced. Larger sizes in hats and collars may draw the attention to these bodily changes, but the enlargements usually occur so gradually that the victim is unconscious of them. There are probably fifty or more cases of the disease in London at the present time.

The prototype of "Punch" is supposed by some to have been the subject of a disease; the enlargement, however, is evidently "wrong," says Professor Keith, for, although, for simple nose, the massive lower jaw, projecting chin, and dorsal "hump" bear some resemblance to the real disease, yet the lively humor, small hands, feet, and delicate features are against "Punch" being a subject of acromegaly.

Acromegaly is usually accompanied by an enlargement of a small gland at the base of the brain—the pituitary body—supposed by the ancients to be the seat of the soul, and by many modern persons as a functionless structure. The observations of Dr. Marie, a French physician, have, however, led to a renewed interest in the pituitary gland.

Its function, use, and diseases, have been the subjects of many inquiries, and to the evidence evident that its secretion is closely concerned in regulating and co-ordinating the growth of various parts of the body; and a study of the effects produced by overgrowths of this gland will probably provide a key to many of the factors which determine the physical conformation of the body, and lead to the establishment of physical anthropology on a scientific basis.

TIRED OF SOCIAL LIFE

Brilliant Countess Lonyay Has Met Sorrow and Disappointment

One of the most interesting women of the French capital is the Countess Lonyay, wife of the Count Elmer Lonyay, and widow of the murdered Austrian Archduke Rudolph, whose tragic death shocked the civilized world some years ago.

It is only of late that the countess has shown interest in social life, and her friends have hoped that she would receive sufficiently from her melancholy to again grace societies saloons with her presence.

Disappointment added to sorrow seems to be her lot, however for it has been announced that the Parisian Ambassadorship which she had set her heart on securing for her husband, will be awarded to some other man.

It has even been rumored that the brilliant countess will retire to her estate and isolate herself from the social world.

KAISER FAVORS THE DUEL

Germany's Versatile Emperor Has Just Given a Powerful Impetus to the Art of Fencing

After discussing politics with his eastern and western neighbors, represented by the Czar and the King of England, the Kaiser has now found time to deal with a less important subject by way of recreation, and has just issued an article on fencing. As everyone knows, Emperor William is a strong partisan of the duel, once the court of honor has decided that in the given circumstances it should be fought, and he has laid it down that "every honorable man, no matter what his rank or position, must be ready to give satisfaction."

The rescript gives preference to the sword over the pistol as a deciding weapon, and, consequently, one result of the rescript has been greatly to encourage the study of the art of fencing in the German army.

The Royal Military Gymnasium in Berlin, which has two classes yearly in the art, each embracing more than a hundred officers from all parts of the empire, has increased the number of hours devoted to practice. The courses include instruction in the use of the sabre, rapier, foil, and bayonet. It is said that a close observer in Berlin can identify many officers by the constant attendants at the fencing schools by the blue marks on their finger nails, which testify to the vigor of their attack and defence.

LUCKY AND GENEROUS

The Winner of the Great French Lottery Will Give Away Half His Million Francs

It has taken several days to discover the winner of the million franc lottery in France, the drawing of which took place recently, the winning number being 5,978 of series 75. The lucky holder of this ticket, it now appears, is a blacksmith's assistant, named Francois Puisin, at Soumain, in the Department of the Nord, M. Puisin is not only a model of honesty, but of generosity, as he has declared that he will share the prize with a friend of his, a bicycle dealer, named Edmond Dumoulin, of Hazebrouck, who, some time ago, gave him 10 francs as half the price of a lottery ticket, which he was to purchase, and which they were to share between them. The ticket was never bought for some reason or other, and one of the honest blacksmith considers that it is only just that he should give his friend half a share of the ticket which he had previously purchased.

Francois Puisin married a Mdlle. Leonie Noulette twenty-three years ago, and has three children, two only of whom are daughters, who are working millions, and the child is a boy, 12 years of age.

"We have to keep on doing something," said the mother. M. Puisin then told how he learned that he had won the winning number. He was out walking with his son, when his neighbor came running to him with a newspaper which gave the number. He was dumbfounded at first, but soon got over the shock. He hurried to tell the news to his son, who was at school, and then his wife, who would not believe it at first, and continued at her work as if nothing unusual had happened, and said:

"You must continue to work, as well as my family. My daughters attended their engagement last night as usual, and this morning they helped in the housekeeping. I may not tell a lie."

Says my friend, Z. Dumoulin, at Hazebrouck, who has been strongly manifesting during the last few years, has told him that I had won the million, and that half of it should be his. I do not consider that although the second ticket was never purchased he has a perfect right to half of the first. I am delighted, too, that my friend has won, for it was a pleasure to receive the congratulations of my neighbors. The ticket was bought a year ago, and with the money which I had won at a game of dominoes, and to which I added 5 francs to make up the sum."

DOCTOR WED PRINCESS

A German Romance of Thirty Years Ago—Frau Von Kirchbach Was of Noble Birth.

The death of a doctor named William, a practising physician in Breslau, recalls one of the romances not uncommon among the German aristocracy. Wilhelm died at the age of fifty-seven, practised as a young doctor in Berlin, and happened to be called in to treat one of the family of Duke Rupert of Wurtemberg, a brother of that in the main line is now extinct. While treating the patient he was brought into close connection with the ducal family, and in the course of a week or two a strong affection sprang up between him and the duke's daughter, Princess Thekla, whom, as usual, with ducal girls in Germany, was a long time betrothed to a prince. Moreover, was a princess of the house of Schaumburg-Lippe, which gave her another claim to the rank. She was then twenty-seven, or a year younger than the doctor. But that is now, and after thirty years of married life, just fifty-six. The young lovers were married, though not until innumerable difficulties had been surmounted and the princess, on the day of her wedding, had formally laid aside her title of princess and adopted the name of simple Frau von Kirchbach, bestowed upon her by the Duke of Wurtemberg. The pair settled in Breslau and remained there after the duke died, and there her husband-physician has been carried off by pneumonia, a subject in which he was a specialist.

TESTS FOR SUBMARINES

British Navy Experiments in Various Ways to Determine the Utility of Submerged Craft

An important experiment—one of a series made with the object of ascertaining accurately the effect of gunfire on submarines under war conditions and the risks to which they are exposed—has just been made in Portsmouth recently.

The vessel which has been chosen by the Admiralty to be sacrificed in the interests of science was originally the ill-fated A 1, in which eleven lives were lost when she sank off the Isle of Wight nearly two years ago.

The first phase of the experiments was to ascertain how long the doomed vessel should her periscope be shot away. For this purpose the A 1 was merged, showing only her periscope, which was fired at from a number of torpedo lens, which to all intents and purposes the submarine was undamaged.

The experiments are the Admiralty authorities to preserve secrecy that the vessel was towed to her station under cover of darkness.

And secrecy is the keynote of the experiments consisted of towing the vessel up the Portsmouth Harbor near the Vernon Torpedo School, and then when her hull was just awash, a powerful explosive was set off by means by electricity a short distance away.

The effect on the hull of the craft is a secret guarded with the utmost care, but it is understood that the damage is surprisingly small.

The A 1 is to be subjected to further experiments.

Though one of the earliest types of submarines built for the British Navy, it is still largely used for experimental purposes, and the new A-class vessels, which are older vessels, would be of great value in coastal and harbor defence work. Their chief failing is their small radius of action.

The submarines of the Holland boats was flooded in dry dock at Portsmouth, the water being let in and salt water on the batteries, and from the experiments learned the terrible dangers of chlorine gas.

FRANCE'S BLACK SOLDIERS

The Fighting Tribes of French Africa Willingly Enroll Under Tri-Color

The report of the mission of which Colonel Mangin is the head, to study that the scheme for recruiting an army of negro soldiers in the French possessions in Western Africa promises to be completely successful, and that in Senegal and French Nigeria the Republic possesses an immense reserve of fighting material. Moreover, Colonel Mangin is said to have secured the Government's assurance that is not only possible, but very easy, to have the native "princes" and tribal chiefs of the various districts, and has seen every one of the most enthusiastic of hearty support. In French Guinea alone the chiefs have undertaken to provide nearly four thousand recruits annually. Colonel Mangin states that in four years it will be possible to create an army of about a quarter of a million splendid fighting men in French West Africa, and that if necessary this number could be increased almost indefinitely.

The raising of this force is of great importance to the Republic. It will in the first place, enable Algeria to be garrisoned with perfectly loyal black troops, and thus provide for the large garrison that will be transferred to Europe in case of necessity. It is not intended that this black army should ever serve in France itself, but it is easy to conceive circumstances in which a resort to it might be justifiable. It must be remembered that the total population of the French empire exceeds that of the German Empire, and that in the event of a life-and-death struggle with her great neighbor France might be glad to avail herself of the enormous reserves of men in her African colonies, to whom fighting is the only occupation worthy of a man's attention. The creation of a great native army in French West Africa is an interesting fact of close observation, but one, which, in the course of a few years, will count for much that must be taken into account in European politics.

CLEFT GRAFTING.

Directions For Performing This Useful Operation on Fruit Trees.

Cleft grafting is practiced on the tops of trees which are more or less matured. Wild apple trees of good size are often grafted, so that they will produce desirable fruit. It should be practiced on branches not over two inches in diameter. It is best to graft only one-third or one-half of a tree in a single season, so as to have enough top to leave out well. A saw, a pruning hook, a knife and a hammer are necessary, as well as scions and grafting wax. The process is thus described by H. D. Hemenway of Hampshire county, Mass., for the state board of agriculture:

SETTING A CLEFT GRAFT.

With a clean, sharp saw remove the end of the branch to be grafted at a point where the stub will not be over two inches in diameter. Much care should be taken to prevent the bark from splitting down on one side when the branch is cut off.

Place the grafting hook so that the chisel part is over the center of the cut and drive it down with the hammer, splitting the stub into two parts through the center. Remove the tool and drive the wedge part into the end of the split stub, so as to hold the edges open. Select a scion and make a double wedge shaped cut on the lower end of it. Make it wedge shaped lengthwise, so as to fit into the cleft, and wedge shaped horizontally, so that the inside of the scion inserted in the cleft is almost cut away, while the outside which comes in contact with the cambium layer of the stub forms an arc of the original circle of the twig.

When the stub is more than two inches in diameter place a scion on each edge of the cleft, so that the inner bark of the scion and of the stock will coincide. Remove the grafting hook. When the stub springs back it will hold the scions firmly in place. All exposed surfaces should be well covered with grafting wax to prevent evaporation. Let the wax cover the upturned bark below where the scion is inserted, as well as the top of the cut. When the stub is one inch or less across but one scion should be inserted. In the second season one of the branches should be removed if both scions grow. If both were allowed to grow a fork would be formed, which would weaken the tree. The scions should be wrapped in moist cloths to prevent them from drying out. Cleft grafting is successfully done in the spring when the buds are swelling. It is most successful on bright, warm days, free from cold or drying winds.

Our Farm Machinery Abroad.

Scarcity of labor in many countries is forcing the farmers to adopt labor saving machinery, according to the bureau of manufactures. A bulletin it has issued shows that nearly $30,000,000 worth of agricultural machinery was exported from this country in the fiscal year recently ended, Russia and Argentina being the best markets.

Prosperity note from the Sedgwick (Kan.) Pantagraph: "It takes only four bushels of alfalfa seed to buy a new tire for the auto."

Dairy Doings.

Good pasture is the cheapest cow feed, and green soiling crops are next.

Don't expect a dairy cow to give satisfactory results on half rations. The half fed cow never pays.

With the dairy farmer it should not be a question of building one silo, but whether or not two should be built.

A mixture of salt, two parts, and saltpeter, one part, should be put in the salting box at least once each week. The saltpeter will be rich in charcoal. The cows require a great deal of charcoal and cannot do their best without it.

Promiscuous cross breeding never leads to desirable results. It is only by persistent clinging to the characteristics of any of the dairy breeds and by careful breeding to fix those characteristics that the herd is materially built up.

Do not oppose the cow's appetite. She knows what it takes to make a balanced ration better than any feeding standard. If she does not like bran and corn give oats and corn. If she is tired of cottonseed it will mean by a little closer hay.

The thermometer should be used while churning and the temperature kept down to from 55 to 60 degrees, if conditions are favorable the butter should be granular and should require not more than from twenty to thirty minutes for churning.

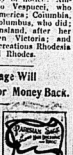
INFANTS' DELIGHT SOAP

ODDITIES OF NAMING.

Process by Which Things Receive Their Designations.

Besides port and sherry, other wines indicate the districts or countries from which they are obtained by their names as: Burgundy, champagne, moselle, and the town of Cognac, in France, is inseparably connected with good brandy. It may not be so generally known that the word "grog" was derived from the nickname of Admiral Vernon, who introduced the mixture into the navy, and who was called "Old Grog," from the grogram breeches that he wore.

Another textile derived from the name of a place is calico, from Calicut, in India; and the province of Ulster has given its name to the long garment with a cape much in vogue a few years ago; while linsey-woolsey is generally supposed to be derived from "Milsey," a trader in Milan goods.



Wellington and Blucher boots obtain their names from the two famous generals who took so prominent a part in the Battle of Waterloo, and Hessian and Balmoral boots are named after places. Names of vehicles which originated from names of persons are hansom, after its inventor, Joseph Aloysius Hansom; Brougham after Lord Brougham; and Victoria, after her late Majesty, Queen Victoria. The name of Charles Macintosh is preserved in the waterproof coat invented by him, and of John Loudon Macadam in the word macadamize, the process of mending roads by rolling in broken fragments of granite or other stones, which he invented.

Currant takes its name from Corinth, from the neighborhood of which the small dried grape is exported; cayenne pepper is from province of Cayenne, in French Guiana; peach is the Persian fruit, damson the Damascene or Damascus plum, but the so-called Jerusalem artichoke has no connection with the capital of Palestine, being a corruption of the Italian girasole (sun-flower), the plant which it much resembles in growth.

Kidderminster, Axminster, Turkey and Brussels give their names to special kinds of carpets, and the Brussels sprouts; Gruyere, Cheddar, Stilton, to various kinds of cheese; Manilla and Havana, to well-known brands of cigar; while Cochin-China and Guinea are represented in the names of farmyard fowls, and the latter also in the now obsolete coin at one time minted from Guinea gold.

Personal names given to roses and other flowers and plants, to pears, apples, and other fruits, to names of towns, rivers, mountains, and other geographical features are too numerous to mention. Among names of countries and states the following, however, are worthy of notice: America, after Amerigo Vespucci, who did not discover America; Columbia, after Christopher Columbus, who did; Victoria and Queensland, after her late Majesty Queen Victoria; and amongst the latest creations Rhodesia after the late Cecil Rhodes.

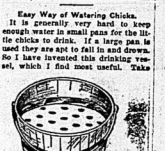
HOW TO DOSE A COW.

Directions For Administering Medicine to the Animal.

The bottle most commonly employed, and the best glass bottle as regards shape and strength, is a quart champagne, but a better appliance still is the fit drenching bottle sold by the agricultural supply stores. It cannot be broken and is provided with an air hole which secures a steady and even flow of medicine from the neck.

In administering the dose the common practice is to straighten and slightly elevate the head by grasping the nose with the forefinger and thumb of the left hand, but this is calculated to interfere with respiration and is unnecessary except in the case of very rough animals, which are certainly rendered more amenable to reason by this grasping of the muzzle.

A much better plan with the quiet animal is for the person giving the medicine to stand with his back against the right shoulder of the cow, slightly fix the head to the right and, passing the left arm over the face, place the hand in the left side of the mouth with the fingers against the palate, and give the dose with the bottle held in the right hand, introducing only the nozzle and allowing the contents to run out with a continuous steady flow.



Where an assistant is necessary to the holding of the animal he should stand on the left side and grasp both horns, or if the beast is very unruly take the right horn in the right hand and grasp the nasal septum firmly with the left, turning the head in the direction of the administrator on the right side of the animal and avoiding the most violent struggles.

With very rough or wild cattle an instrument for grasping the nasal septum, called "bulldogs," is employed, but a couple of determined men can generally give the drink while this instrument is being fixed. Generally what may be called the quiet method is the easiest and most expeditious, but the rough manipulator rarely needs any assistance in the dosing.—American Cultivator.

Economy demands that we save everything that has been produced if it has any value. Not only that of man or animals. The fact that it is not salable need not deter us. Many products that are not salable have utility on the farm.

Easy Way of Watering Chicks.

It is generally very hard to keep enough water in small pans for the little chicks to drink. If a large pan is used they are apt to fall in and drown. So I have invented this drinking vessel, which I find most useful. Take milk crocks, rather shallow wooden buckets or anything that is smaller around the bottom than at the top. Then make a lid or "foot" of pine board that will go down about halfway in the vessel when empty. Bore the lid full of holes and by its floating on top the chicks can help at will to get a drink. As the water is consumed the "foot" settles deeper in the vessel, and if enough chicks should get on it and sink it any the lid wouldn't go down deep enough to drown any of them.—Farm and Fireside.

Begin now to lay plans for better rotation of crops next year.

Best Kind of Potato.

Live Stock Notes.

Be careful not to overheat mares that are suckling colts.

A team that works in the field all week should be allowed to rest on Sunday.

The farmer who has not time to fuss with a young colt had better go into some other business.

Many of the difficulties experienced in handling the young horses may be avoided if the brood sows are properly fed and cared for in the winter.

The value of rape as a food for calves is not well understood. If it were much more would be sought.

Make friends with your horses. They will enjoy your sociability as well as you will. Sensible horses like to be talked to by people.

All sheep love alfalfa, either green or dry, for very many of the animal makes alfalfa a suitable food for it. Sheep need foods rich in protein.

Raw cabbage makes an excellent feed for cattle, but it cannot be safely fed to horses. Mangels, carrots, beets and turnips will, however, be found good for both horses and cattle if fed raw. They are named here in order of their value.

Maxwell finished solemnly. "Beverly Boston's sister."

The shades of evening were darkening down before the two men closed their confidences. Maxwell's face was flushed by deeply drawn lines of care. "I shall be over to-morrow to Fair Oaks and say good-bye there. Does Gordon know all you have told me?"

"No," said Orton, "for I watched him closely, and I even suspected him until recently, of some complicity in Egbert Null's murder."

A piece of her own jewellery was found in the dining room. I fear that he bounded her down, and in despair, she may have used her ill-gotten god for a last resort to effect his "removal." How long, my God, how long will this mystery remain unsolved?"

"All right. Then we meet to-morrow night. Don't write a single word to Gordon. He worries. I fear that he will follow Seaton." said Maxwell with a significant gesture.

"Trust me, I have a human heart," said Orton warmly.

The two young men clasped hands in friendly alliance. When Vivian Maxwell walked in the stately terrace of Fair Oaks the next day, after his two hours conference, he turned and met the sweet eyes of the manly, gentle Marguerite Calhoun watching in adieu, the young knight who had been her supporting 40 well her dear friend, the English Rose. Maxwell was aware of a choking in his throat as he waved his handkerchief in a final salute.

Lucie, poor girl, by her long and patient waiting, her thoughts were filled with thoughts of her steadfast hero in that Death Valley, where Maxwell's friend lay his refuge. "I must wait still. Wait upon the goodness of God. Wait for the day when Gordon can come to me with unclouded hope. May God be with my poor soldier!" The fair woman's eyes filled with tears. She knew not well the ferocity of the Sioux and Cheyenne. A spirited Southerner herself, she was too realistic not that the tall Kentuckian would be in the very forefront and fatal flame, when the ferocious tribes met the white man in their last great death grapple. "If he could only leave with honor. So, too, if Jack Gordon is alive he will be found at the head of 'K' troop of the four dead captains."

"Captain Maxwell," said Orton, as he welcomed that officer, "I have gone over the whole matter as far as you could with me Brissac. He is now about to return to his family honors, and thinks of nothing down. In fact he has gone to France on a confidential diplomatic promotion and marriage. He will tell you all, but only on the steamer, as he wishes to get out of the power to involve him till after he's married."

A week later Orton touched his hat leaving Hotel Metropole to Maxwell, a leading group,) on the deck of the outgoing steamer. Orton's last act was to hand Maxwell a sealed letter. "This will give you the assistance of Jose Sarabasha, who was the confidential valet of Stahrenberg. Should you be called on to act, use him. This letter will place him at your service. Good by moment," said Orton resolutely. Captain Gordon will write you regularly, and if you need my help, only write. I can see now that the casual letter of Seaton was meant to buy punishment without breaking Gordon's heart."

At Fort Abraham Lincoln Gordon, amidst the busy, quickening squadrons, read Elaine's parting letter. "God bless him, and the sunny-faced English bride to be," murmured Gordon, as he pondered what gift of suitable richness he could send for this event's return so soon to come under the American flag.

Seated on the deck of the steamer, plowing the Atlantic's green waste of waters, Vivian Maxwell learned from the Baron of the continued European exploits of La Belle des Barchanales. "No one, Captain Maxwell, can follow in the dark paralyses of sin. Reckless and unprincipled beautiful, she moves quickly, steadily, along. And astonishes even the most depraved, who imitate her dress, manner and glaring beauty. She is a woman to be afraid of," said the newly formed Yvonne. "I have never also her equal in Salsa's others."

A month of golden happiness succeeded Maxwells arrival in England. Led by his gentle captor, he speedily familiarized himself with the "warm social home surroundings of the little lady-bachelor land of girlhood were dragging to a close. Harold's absence at Essen, closing some protracted negotiations with Krupp, for the improvement of the delay giving Maxwell the woman of his heart. A telegram from Harold Durnford Maxwell over to Germany. "Am now most fantastical experience here. If I despatch for you run over. I will bring you safely home, till Rosie." So Harold had written! "And we can also see De Brissac and his wife in Paris." For the gay Gaul had worn his stripped Maxwell in the race of Hymen. She was already 'an homme regagne.' "If will be back in three or four days," said the expectant groom. There are no ladies here; you a few handsome British officers." Maxwell laughed. "I will treat your father to keep them at bay."

"Right, you are, Captain. They shall not steal Rosie from the jolly millionaire called out from behind the Times, a benevolent, conversational bombproof of a year, of which he apparently studied the market, but really took his sage.

Sir, hours in Paris enabled Maxwell to become master of all Josef's recent knowledge of the fugitive Stahl. Warned by a telegram, Josef joined the captain on his arrival. Maxwell marvelled at the kaleidoscopic changes in the various brilliant colors of gaudy vivacity, the magnificent jewelry.

"Monsieur, C'est une femme absolument sans coeur." Upo vrais fille de diable. I have followed her for the last forty years, and have been sent from time to time to try and negotiate with her for the return of the diamond necklace by that young fool, the Grand Duke ——. She will throw me down lessly, a few napoleons and then —— laughed in my face. The Czar, bah. He will not drag his nephew up to the bar of justice as a common thief. Even a Muscovite merchant does not kill me. Then they would never know. "As for me," she sneered, "I have my own diamonds, I do not need to borrow from the Czar." Josef concluded, "I know nothing, absolutely nothing," said she as she would drain a glass of creamy champagne. "I am sorry for the Czar, if he asks me personally, I may tell him—he can ask his other agent," and she would smile slyly with those cool, insolent devil-eyes, staring me out of countenance. The valet paused,—"I have now told you all."

SKEPTICS.

When your old dad was as little as you
Was he likare to do
What they wanted him to?
Why, certainly, so, and as quick as a flash.
He didn't they bid him before you could think
Hey? Hey?
Oh, you don't say?
What makes you look wishing and grim-
Your uncle's gone "sellin' you sumthin'?"
You mustn't believe all the stories you hear
The first of their joys
Was giving their toys
To poor little children who needed them more.
Your dad was so good he gave all of his store.
Hey? Hey?
What do you say?
Your mother's dead, 'am now, put away?
Such thing was unknown in my day! I'll be bound!
I hope have been snooping and prying around.
When daddy was young he was dead,
Obedi and duti
To granks unrefined.
He'd a serious mind
He paid no attention to girls and their toys,
But gave all his time to his tasks and his books.
Hey? Hey?
What do you say?
Your mother was raised to the very same ways
You had an old letter and read it? My soul!
We spank'd such children for mischief like that!

PERSISTENT BEGGARS.

The Mere Egyptian Mendicants Get the More They Demand.

In Egypt one could never give bakhoosh except for actual service rendered. Hesitation only but firmly every application at extension. Never pay till the stipulated service is finished; then, if you have paid a little more than the bargain called for, turn a deaf ear to the protestations and entreaties that will follow. Bear in mind that the more bakhoosh you give the more clamorous becomes the applicant. Real poverty is rare, and should not be respected for gifts.

Then there is the case broke one of these rules just to see what would happen. As we passed through a little mud village twenty miles from Cairo the gave a sturdy beggar a millieme (half a cent). This beggar, accompanied by half the village, followed us to the edge of the village, asking for more. My friend then gave him a Piaster (5 cents).

They followed us a hundred yards or so with more persistent than before. When they showed a disposition to go back he gave them 5 piastres. They followed us half a mile and became very clamorous. It was afraid we should get into trouble and wanted him to stop it, but when they began to lay he gave them 20 piasters. They followed us two miles, and the experiment might have ended seriously had we not met a company of travelers with a dragoman, who sent the beggars about their business. This story may help you to understand the Egyptian character.—Christian Herald.

LAPLAND BABIES.

For Their First Few Months They Live in Winter Babies.

Little Lapplanders spend the first few months of their lives in a bag. The lack of wickerwork associated as the top with the bottom, and the close for the baby to breathe, and yet give the baby plenty of light and air.

Before commencing the work for the day the Lapp mother makes her child in the basket, and then sets on the limb of some sturdy companion before [illegible] the baby's head. Then she [illegible] over a cord passed across the top of the basket.

The child strapped the child spends the entire day in the open and yet at the same time is guarded from the protection and dangers of outdoor child life in other countries.

Lapland babies, curiously parallels the Indian idea of strapping the papoose into a carrying case, but the Lapp baby has the advantage over its Indian fellow in that its limbs are unconfined and a certain amount of liberty of movement is afforded.

The child is carried from place to place in the same basket, the cord by which it is attached to a tree being slung over the shoulder.

Fossils and Gold.

In Alaska bones and often the entire bodies of extinct animals, such as the mammoth, the mastodon, the prehistoric ox and the bison, are found most abundantly in layers of soil, directly above gold bearing gravels. So intimate is the association between fossil animal remains and auriferous deposits that one prospector who has explored Alaska says fossils serve prospectors as indexes of the metallic richness of the soil. In certain districts, he says, gold and the bones of animals were deposited at the bottoms of valleys by action of rivers and similar streams, many of which have now disappeared; consequently the appearance of fossils is, it is claimed, an almost certain indication that gold will be found in the neighborhood. Definite Instructions.

Telegraphers have their troubles, like the rest of mankind, and the man who follow the code does not always tell studies based upon actual happenings that almost test the credulity of the hearer. A man in charge of a railroad office is responsible for the following, which occurred to him when he was holding down a key in an obscure place in the suburbs.

"A farmer came in one day and handed me a message to Mrs. Smith, New York city." I asked for the address, city and post-office, looked at me with a pitying smile, replied:

"Sonny, you don't know Mrs. Smith, who keeps a boarding house in New York. Don't let any one know you don't know where her place is."—Philadelphia Times.

Fellowed Instructions.

She was a woman of very puritanical notions, and when she came into his room to kiss her little boy good night and found that he had not said his prayers she was very much shocked.

"You see, mamma," he replied, "when dad put me in bed he told me he said there mustn't be another word out of me tonight."—Lippincott's.

And almost without trying

As an attainment fitting
He sits in peace with his wings
And leisurely goes flitting.

Progress.

"They're building bigger vessels, Bill.
To put the Dreadnoughts to shame."
And the contractors' pockets fill
With bribes and boodle just the same.
And when this bigger one is done
And many others in its class
They'll turn out at still bigger one
As them on to the scrap pile pass.

At that the builders will not stop.
Each biggest one will have its day,
Then something else will come to top drop.
And it will bear, "Be on your way."
No odds how bulky it may be.
How deep it is or may displace,
It is a Title while will see
A bigger vessel in the race.

That is the law.. We must progress.
There isn't one that stays in place.
The war lords will have nothing less
Than very largest in the class.
Until the pioneer from mole,
All conquerors and rulers,
Just by its awe inspiring bulk
Throws little islands in the shade.

And is there any aid to sight
To all this frenzied, frantic waste
For bigger styles with which to fight,
For death in iron monsters cased?
There is—a very little thing
But very, many, frim and fit—
The already now has taken wing
And they may read their cause in it.

Washington Irving.

To Washington Irving more than to any other writer belongs the high honor of being the "creator of American literature." Irving was not the first American to write good literature, but he was the first American to write in a way to catch and hold the European attention. It was through Irving's writings that the old world was made aware of the fact that there was an American literature. Hildreth, Prescott, Cooper, Poe and others of the pioneers came in for a full measure of praise, but Washington Irving will always hold his title as father of our literature.—New York American.

Hub of the Social Universe.

"We do not hesitate to call the Cow Pasture Drive house the hub of the social universe," says the London Sphere. "We have been in the opera houses of Munich, Dresden, Milan, Berlin, Paris and Vienna, and there is nothing quite so impressive in any one of these as can be found at Covent Garden in the height of the season. To visit Covent Garden Opera House in the season is to know life at its most magnetic point."

THREE PIERS ENOUGH!

EMPLOYE ON GRAND TRUNK KILLED HERE

George Thomas Ramsey Crushed Between Two Engines

DIES ALMOST AT ONCE

Victim Was Engaged In Operating Turn Table at Round House.

Within a week two lives have been lost on the Grand Trunk premises here. The second fatality occurred at about 12.40 this morning, the victim being George Thomas Ramsey.

It appears that Ramsey was engaged in operating a turntable in the large roundhouse near the station when he met his death. He was standing near the turntable, when two engines came into the building from opposite directions. Ramsey thinking that there was in such a position that the two iron horses had to pass him, and the space was exceedingly narrow. The result was he was caught between the two beams of the engines and his life virtually ceased out. After being extricated from his awful position he lived but a few moments. Physicians were called to the scene as quickly as possible, but their services were not required. The upper portion of Ramsey's body was horribly crushed in and mangled. The remains were conveyed to Tickell & Son's undertaking rooms to be prepared for burial.

The victim of the deplorable accident, was 21 years of age, being the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ramsey, who reside on College street. The father is employed as an engineer at the C. P. R. pumping house, and was on duty when the accident took place. George had been employed about the G. T. R. premises for some years and was an industrious young man, beloved by his fellow employes, who are naturally grieved at the distressing manner in which death overtook him.

Deceased was a member of the Methodist Church, and was also a member of Derry Lodge, True Blues, of this city. This is the second affliction in the family within a year, as sister of the deceased passed away a few months ago. In addition to this bereavement the parents have brothers, Clarence and Harold, survive. To all will be extended the sincere sympathy of many friends in this their hour of grief.

BELLEVILLE CITIZENS ARE URGED TO ATTEND TOMORROW'S MEETING

Railway Commission Will Sit Hear And Hear Arguments Against Proposal of C. N. R. To Use Fivpiers in Construction of Bridge.

THE RAILWAY COMMISSION AND C.N.R.-MOIRA BRIDGE.

The Dominion Railway Commission will be here at the City Hall to-morrow morning at nine o'clock. A large attendance of the citizens, City Council, Board of Trade and Property Owners' should be there to demonstrate by their evidence and presence how important the construction of the C.N.R. bridge across the Moira is to them, and how necessary to limit the piers that may be required for its construction to the minimum number. Now is the time to act. The Commissioners have made their appointment and will be here to give our citizens the opportunity of personally appearing before them and making the statements of fact concerning the condition of the river in flood time. The Commissioners may also, when here, consider the grades east and west of the river and order such changes as they may find desirable. This is surely a remedy which our grievances if you have any other than the proposed pier. There should not be more than one or two piers in the river. This can be done. There is no engineering difficulty. There is a little more expense in the first cost, but it will save in the end, as there will be no obstruction in the river for the ice to jam against and possibly carry away.

Ladies are interested in this matter and should attend in large numbers. Let the Commissioners see that we are alive to the protection of our interests. You who have suffered financially and otherwise by the floods in the River Moira make a point to attend. You don't want the floods to be dammed back a great deal worse than ever before. They why let the construction of a five-pier bridge dam the river, when one or two is enough, and the bridge can easily be built without a pier in the river. The Board of Railway Commissioners have full power to order what kind of a bridge should be built. And it is now up to the citizens to let the Board know what kind of a bridge they want. One pier is sufficient. Keep the river open as much as possible and free from obstruction.

Splendid Addresses Delivered at Annual Meeting of Dairymen

Many Matters of Interest and Importance to Those Engaged in Dairying Discussed By Interesting Speakers.

On Saturday afternoon in the city building, the annual district dairy meeting for a portion of Hastings and the whole of Prince Edward County took place and was fairly well attended. During the session many matters of interest to those engaged in dairying were dealt upon by several speakers conversant with the subject.

Mr. W. S. Blakely, Director for the district, occupied the chair and explained the object of the meeting. He suggested that instead of the annual meetings held alternately in Picton and Belleville that they should be held in Belleville two years and in Picton two years. This he considered was an important matter and worthy of consideration.

ANNUAL REPORTS.

Mr. Howie, instructor for the Belleville district, read his annual report. Dairying in it's section is improving. In his district there were cheese in Hastings County, two in Addington and one in Frontenac County. The number of patrons was 1,812 and cows 17,720. This gives the average yield of milk per cow for six months was 3,481 pounds, as against 3,200 pounds last year. During the season he had made visits to 47 factories on more than one occasion and had also visited several of the farms. Two cases of adulteration of milk he had found, and the parties had to pay about $100 each. He emphasized the pasteurizing of whey, which should be done in all factories.

Mr. Whittam, of Prince Edward County, presented his annual report. He had in his jurisdiction 35 cheese factories and one creamery factory, where butter is made from whey. His duties commenced on April 25th and were finished on November 12th. He spent in that time 58 full days in inspection and made 203 call visits. He called upon 246 patrons and endeavored to give them some advice in reference to handling milk. During the season he made 1,987 tests for adulteration of milk and four samples were adulterated by water or some other substance. These samples were sent to the proper authorities, and the result was these patrons were dealt with. In sixteen of the factories in his district they pasteurized the whey, against two last year. The average yield per cow for the season was about 4,000 lbs., an increase of about 800 lbs. per cow over that of last year. About $9,000 had been expended in the improvement of factories and one new factory erected at a cost of $1,500. Many new silos had been erected this season, which fact was in the interest of better dairying.

ELECTION OF DIRECTOR.

Mr. J. A. Holgate moved, seconded by Mr. James Anderson, that Mr. W. C. Farley be nominated as the Director on the Board of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association.

Mr. Parks moved, seconded by Mr. Tom Ketcheson, that Mr. M. Bird be nominated as Director.

The nomination of Mr. Bird was withdrawn, and Mr. Farley was unanimously selected.

PRESIDENT GLENDENNING.

Mr. H. Glendenning, President of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, was called upon. In opening he referred to the pleasure he was to visit Belleville, as in this place he first attended a dairymen's convention. The product on milk was the subject of his address. During the past summer there had been good pastures and consequently there had been an extra supply of milk. The good pasture season is not long in this country, extending from the latter part of May to the first of July, when it naturally dries up. We must provide for the lean year, as we will have them, and it is necessary to have good feed for the cow if we wish to keep up her flow of milk. Corn silage is good to supplement the pastures. Good alfalfa hay, cured in the barn, produces excellent results. He was pleased to known that in this section of the country alfalfa hay is being produced and some of the crops were exceptionally good. With increased knowledge of this fact, it can be grown on ground where it was thought it could not be grown. Last year was a good year for growing of seed, and the reason was that it was not frosts during the winter. In pasturing alfalfa, he contended, was not in the interest of those who are growing this feed. Last year it was rather difficult to procure first class seed as it was owing to the fact that alfalfa fields had been pastured.

Mr. Jas. Anderson said he had grown alfalfa for three years and he was satisfied with it as a food for cattle, and especially as a milk producing substance.

Mr. Glendenning, continuing, said he would not advocate the smothering of noxious weeds by manuring it to another same. If you want to smother them, cover over with tar paper or

KING GEORGE DISSOLVES THE BRITISH HOUSE

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 28.—King George the Fifth at noon today formally dissolved the British Parliament and turned over to the great electorate the question of the veto powers of the House of Lords, the question which literally taps the foundation of the footing of the British constitution. His Majesty's speech was very brief and formal, regretting that the parties had failed to come to an agreement regarding the powers of the Upper House, made no reference to the momentous question officially thrust upon Britain this day. There was a feeling reference to the death of King Edward, who had February conversed in the Parliament so quickly dissolved. The King spoke gratefully of the fact that the long standing Behring Dispute involving Canada, Newfoundland and the United States had been amicably settled at The Hague.

Parliament to-day was attended by only those members of the Commons whose duties necessitated their presence. Most of the members are already in their constituencies conducting campaigns which must be short sharp and decisive. The first polling will take place Saturday and elections will continue until well on to Christmas.

Friends of Sergt. Downey, of the Ordnance Store Corps, Kingston, fear that something has happened him in Montreal. About ten weeks ago he was granted a two months' furlough to visit his relatives in the Old Country. He returned to Canada about two weeks ago, and shortly after his arrival friends received word that he would be back in a few days. Since then he has not been heard of, and his absence is causing much concern. His baggage remains unclaimed in the Allan Steamship Co.'s offices, Sergt. DELIVERS ELOQUENT MISSIONARY SERMON

Rev. Dr. Batstone Heard By Large Congregation In Holloway Street Church--Students of Albert College Out In Force.

Yesterday interesting and profitable missionary anniversary services were held at Holloway Street Church. In the morning Rev. Dr. Batstone, a former student of Albert College and a returned missionary from India, gave an address on missionary work in that far eastern country. The students of Albert College were in attendance. In the evening Mr. Henry Pringle gave a splendid missionary address. The pastor, Rev. R. Greatrix, took part in the service. He preached a statement which showed that the Methodist Church in Canada, through the Epworth Leagues, the Sunday Schools the Woman's Missionary Society and church generally had within the past 15 years contributed $0,137,941 to the missionary cause.

Mr. Pringle in his opening remarks, said he was deeply interested in missionary work.

Listen! the Master beseecheth,
Calling each one by his name:
His voice to each loving heart reacheth,
Its thrilliest service to claim.
Go where the vineyard demandeth,
Wherever sorrow and error are found;
Or go where the white harvest standeth,
The joy of the reaper to share.

With the sentiment of this hymn ringing in their ears the Students' Forward Missionary Movement was started a few years ago. Many of these young consecrated men, some of whom will shortly afterwards be sent to the uttermost parts of the earth that they might preach the Gospel [illegible] Subsequently the Laymen's Missionary Movement was inaugurated, and it is accomplishing a grand work. This movement is not a failure, but a magnificent success. The work had been divided among the Missionary Board and to Canada had been allotted a field to do missionary work among 40,000,000 people, and of this number 14,000,000 was allotted to the Methodist Church to evangelize. The Laymen's Missionary Movement, which has for its object the uplifting of the heathen nations, came in the fullness of time as other great events had, and not by accident. Christ came in the fullest of time. He was despised, persecuted and was crucified but He arose again and broke the bars of death. He left a mission to His disciples, and that mission was to go out into the world and preach the Gospel. What a missionary work the Apostles did. They toured the country and thousands were brought under the influence of the Gospel. That christianity came westward instead of eastward, we should be thankful for, because we enjoy christian privileges, which we would not have enjoyed. The Almighty is lavishing blessings upon us for which we should be truly thankful. All the blessings we enjoy are owing to the missionary movement of years ago, and the preaching of the Gospel. The call to Macedonia for help comes to-day as it did in the day of St. Paul. What is our duty towards this call? It is our duty to give of our means to send the Gospel to those in the lands. It is not how much we are giving, but are we doing our best. The question is what have we done and what shall we do to-day?

ALBERT COLLEGE VICTORIOUS

Y. M. C. A. Juniors Go Down To Defeat to the Tune of 26 to 3--But Score Does Not Indicate Play.

The Y. M. C. A. Juniors went down to defeat in a game of football on Saturday night to the tune of 26 to 3. The Albert College men were certainly on the job, especially when it came to shooting. The score does not indicate, by any means, the play, as the Juniors played a good game and the boys kept close watch on their opponents, but the Albert College team proved the victors. Harrycott, Dyer and Scantlebury were the stars for the College.

Messrs. Strongman and Wilkins handled the game in good shape. The game was very clean, the fouls that were called being for minor offences. We wonder where the Y. M. C. A. rosters were while the game was on? It surely makes a good All Star team man.

After the game the Y. M. C. A. Juniors were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Colling, Alexander Street. During the evening games were played as only boys can play. Lunch was served and about eleven o'clock the boys, after giving three hearty cheers for Mr. and Mrs. Colling, wended their way homeward.

THIS BURGLAR SATISFIED WITH A SIX SHOOTER.

Wilfrid Reppard, who resides on Bettes Street, reports to the police that some time last evening, between the hours of 7 and 10 o'clock, his house was entered when its inmates were absent. It was apparent that the party secured an entrance to the premises through a window which was found open. The only thing that was securely taken was revolver, which was taken from the drawer of a sewing machine. The burglar had evidently not ransacked the house very thoroughly appeared to be in its place and undisturbed. There is no clue as to who committed the act.

MR BENJ. QUINCEY HONORED BY CLASS

Yesterday morning Mr. Benjamin Quincey, who has been for 27 years a member of the Sunday School of Methodist Church, was on behalf of the members, presented with two handsome bound volumes of the first century of Methodism of Canada. The presentation was made to commemorate Mr. Quincey's birthday, which occurred a few days ago. The recipient made an appropriate reply.

An engaging woman is not necessarily engaged frequently.

JUDGE MASSON PUTS IN A BUSY MORNING HERE

Police Magistrate Masson this morning, when he took his seat upon the bench, was confronted by three drunks, and another should have appeared, but Rick Dooley was arrested on Saturday morning and was allowed to go, but in the evening was again taken in charge for being drunk and disorderly. He was fined $5.00 or ten days. Not having the money, he went to jail.

George Bird, a drunk, was allowed to go.

Albert Smith, for drunkeness, which was not his first appearance, had to contribute $2 to the city treasury.

Charles Lawson was arrested on Saturday for drunkeness and was allowed his liberty to appear this morning, but he failed to do so. The charge against him was adjourned for one week.

WALLET LOST HERE, IS MCTAGGARTS CLAIM

A man named McTaggart, who hails from the country, was in the city on Saturday and imbibed too freely of intoxicating liquors. He had some money. He reported to the police that he had been relieved of $15 and to another party he stated that $20 had been taken from him. It is rather difficult to say, owing to his condition, whether he had money or taken from him or that he lost it.

An egotist is always telling you what he said to somebody else.

Religious Establishments in Spain Prohibited

The Senate in Madrid Spain,on the 18th of November, 1910, accepted legislation on a vote of 140 to 26, prohibiting "the creation of further religious establishments in Spain during the next two years. As originally drawn, it forbade the entrance of new orders until a revision of the concordat has been accomplished, or a definite law on the subject passed. The Senate adopted an amendment limiting the period of introduction to two years. This was viewed as a concession to the Opposition (the Carlist) by the Premier and was also pleasing to the Vatican. Where it was constructed as an indication that Canalejas was in a mood to compromise with the church.

It was the announcement by the Government that it would introduce such a Bill which caused a controversy between Spain and the Holy. See and led to suspension of the negotiations then under way for a revision of the concordat. The Vatican took the position that, in view of the pending negotiations, the Government should not adopt any legislation having a direct bearing on differences that might be adjusted in a revision. This attitude has been maintained. Rome reiterating that the work of revision would not be assumed unless the measure was withdrawn.

The Home Secretary's Pyjamas.

Mr. Winston Churchill's interest in the army manoeuvres on Salisbury Plain is not surprising when one remembers that he himself began life by holding the rank, and a powerful pink collar that overflowed his pocket. "Pyjamas!" someone shouted. "Take them off, Churchill!" said another; while even Mr. Lloyd George turned a reproving countenance on him and exclaimed, "Oh, and pink of all colours!" In the end the Home Secretary felt so uncomfortable that he arose and left the meeting.

A Kaffir Member.

Rev. W. Benson Rubusana, Ph.D, who has been returned as a member of the Provincial Parliament for Cape Colony, is said to be the first Kaffir who has found a seat in that House. He has been in the Congregational ministry for twenty-six years, of which fifteen have been exercised in East London, where he has a very large native following. Rubusana came from Peelton, which was under the influence of the late E. Birt. Mr Birt one of whose daughters married Sir Starr Jameson, was originally connected with the King's Weigh House Church at Fish street hill, London. He married Dr. Binger and educated in the last Rubusana and the members of the former hill Church contributed money, which paid for his education at Lovedale College.

Assumed the Offensive.

Here is a story of Whistler, the artist. He was late at dinner one day, and the hostess was evidently annoyed. "Whistler, however, was to all wise disconcerted, for, cheerily grasping a somewhat limp hand, he rattled out: 'Don't apologize for having kept me waiting, my dear, I'm offended in the very least.' After which, liking the meal, he became the life and soul of the party."

Quite Young.

"He is very young for a lord."

"Do you think so?"

"I know it."

"How young is he?"

"Well, he knows absolutely everything."

Scotchmen Attend Church And Hear Inspiring Sermon

Big Turnout at St. Andrews Church Yesterday—"The Ministry of Memory" Theme of Eloquent Discourse, by Rev. A. S. Keer.

To commemorate the near approach of St. Andrew's Day, the members of the Sons of Scotland on Sunday morning attended divine service at St. Andrew's Church. There was a good turnout of the members, the pastor, Rev. A. S. Kerr, preached and his utterances were most appropriate. Before the sermon Mr. Kerr, on behalf of the Session and congregation of St. Andrew's Church, extended a welcome to the Sons of Scotland to the service.

The subject of his remarks was "The ministry of memory," and the text was from Isaiah, 40th chapter and a portion of the 8th verse: "Remember this and show yourself men."

In his opening remarks the divine said the words of the text were from a prophet who was advising the people of the weakness of idol worship. He should act as men and not as children. Mankind is endowed with a most wonderful thing, namely memory. Of all powers this seems to be the greatest. The power of memory—how it gathers in past impressions and stores them for the being. Remember this and show yourself men. Does not the memory of home touch tender hearts and make the fireside member home, no matter where that home may be; remember is no matter how humble or antagonistic it may be remember the devoted father and mother, sister and brother who may be at home. That matchless parable of Christ teaches us a great lesson of home. It was the memory of home that caused that prodigal son to wake up to realize there was a home for him where loving mothers and servants were and others ready to welcome him. Remember home; the memory of our mothers makes the fireside hearts brave and courageous. No matter what country it is, it has its heroes and heroines. Scotland has a wonderful history. She had men who withstood every foe. Such men as Campbell, Chalmers, Knox and others gave their lives for the freedom of religious worship. Think of the loyalty of the Jews to the old city of Jerusalem. The memory of Jerusalem made their hearts sad, but we should not be so. The memory of our native land should not make us sad. Think of John Knox, how he withstood Mary Queen of Scots until she said she feared the prayers of that holy man of God. It is this memory of our native land that should encourage us. The man who professes to be a christian has to run the gauntlet of ridicule, but all will be well with him. We should above a remember the God of our native land was the God of Abraham and the God of Isaac. The children of Israel rejoiced when they knew it was God that led Moses out of the wilderness into the land of promise. When we remember our God, gratitude will go up to Him. Because her God and express your gratitude to Him. How necessary it is that we should remember God and His desire to cherish a loving memory of Him. The stars remind us of Him When we look upon the birds, remember what He said: not a sparrow falls to the ground without His notice. In nature we can see God and should remember Him. Memory is of inestimable value in our manhood. If the memory of our God will we not be thankful to Him who has redeemed and saved us. Remember Christ and believe towards us. As we go out into the world remember Him who is the fairest among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely. Remember Him during the heat and cares of the highest order and calculated to make us better and truer men.

During the singing Miss Anna Ponton sang sweetly and effectively a solo entitled "Ninety and Nine." Sacred Oriental selections were played by the organist, Miss Riggs.

"When one is searching for health," she says, "there are many things to be considered. Constitutionally my enemy of us quite unlike. I think each person should study character and experiment with different recreations before going ahead with systematic programme of exercise. To a nervous person not the things we like to do best that is the best for us. In my own case I feel that I have found and kept my own good health by consistent and constant exercise in the open air. Eschmorning I take a brisk walk of some length, perhaps several miles. There is no lagging on the way, and I make it a practice not to have all the distance covered in over level walks, but rather up some of our steep hills and, if possible, along the rougher streets of the outlying districts."

CAPTAIN BARCLAY'S FEATS.

Famous Athlete Walks a Thousand Miles in a Thousand Hours.

The late Captain Barclay, of Ury, Kincardine, of Ury Retted known by the name under which he ran as Captain Barclay, was a very serious athlete and a most authority on training, on which subject he wrote a book.

His most famous achievement, however, was that of walking a thousand miles in a thousand consecutive hours in Newmarket Heath for a bet of a thousand guineas. He started on June 6, 1809, walking, as we are told, with an easy lounging gait, and sliding his feet over the ground rather than lifting them. Between 5 and 6 he began to go to sleep or lie on a sofa and talk to his friends.

His ideas of training were rather peculiar. Between the heats he took the amount of alcohol he consumed stands to his gigantic feats. According to The Sporting Magazine, he would "feed on strong ale" with his breakfast at five, and again at 11 at his luncheon. He dined at six with yet another two glasses of strong ale, and he drank ale again for supper, while he kept himself on tea and Madeira and water between meals. So largely interested in the event was Newmarket in his success that they died with each other in providing him with their own ale—it being better than that supplied from the public stalls.

Gradually the hours wore away, and the last hour of the last day of the certain rose to five to one. At one time his backers received the dismal intelligence that the sinews in his legs were so much strained that it took him half an hour to walk a quarter of a mile, but the strain passed, and eight minutes before the end of the last hour he'd walk ten to one.

As the final day approached Newmarket was invaded by a huge crowd, and Barclay was so led to be had in love or money. The track had to be fenced off, much to the annoyance of Barclay, who disliked this parade, and finally he ended his task amid the natural excitement of the crowd, and said to have won a hundred thousand pounds over the result. Moreover, he was so little distressed that almost immediately afterwards he was induced to sail with the army on the ill-fated expedition to Walcheren.

It is satisfactory to know that in spite of these feats Captain Barclay lived to a great and respected old age, and it was only the kick of a horse that could kill him in the year 1854.

Miss Bradden's Birthday.

Miss Bradden, the author of more books than any other woman novelist celebrated her seventy-third birthday recently at Lichfield House, Richmond, Eng., where she resides with her son, W. H. Maxwell, himself a well-known author.

She dislikes interviews, and as for photographs, she will have none of them. The last she allowed to be taken, a photograph is at least twenty years old.

For this reason the genial-faced lady, with her white hair and keen eyes, who may be seen driving in her carriage about the fine day along the Sheen road, is unknown to many of her neighbors.

Miss Bradden has been writing stories since the age of eight, and has already written over 100 novels.

"The years between eight and twelve were fairly fruitful years," she told a friend recently. "I can remember writing a historical novel about the siege of Calais, an Eastern story suggested by Miss Parloe's Turkish tales and fifteen 'Bride of Abydos,' a story of the Hartz mountains, and a domestic story."

Many years after this publication reached her to-day. After walking in the lake district, she takes great pride in a fine show of geraniums, the novelist went out for a short drive.

WM. McGIE, Belleville.

BISHOP OF NIAGARA'S SUFFRAGETTE REMEDY

Let Rats Loose on Them, He Suggests--First Try Hydrant and Hose--If This Fails Try Rat Cure.

The hydrant and hose as a means of quelling the militant suffragette and, this failing, the letting loose of fifty bags of rats from the London sewers--these were the suggestions made by Bishop J. P. DuMoulin, of Niagara, at the close of his speech before the Empire Club in Toronto friday. The remarks were a sort of epilogue to his address on "Canada East and West."

"Bishop DuMoulin said:

"There is one other matter I might touch on, and that is regarding the behavior of the women of England who call themselves Suffragettes. It is a disgrace to the English name and character and that portion of the Empire where this is allowed to occur. (Hear, hear.)

"A certain man suggested two remedies for these poor policemen who are shamefully beaten and bruised, and for these poor Ministers of the Crown who promise some concessions on the eve of election. There is no use talking and locking them up in prison--they crave that, for then they become martyrs. This man said that if a hydrant and hose were placed in the hands of every policeman, and let the whole body of police play on that army of spiteful and vicious women when they surround the House

"If this would not do you could get out of the sewers of London about fifty bags of rats (laughter), and turn them loose among them--you can imagine the rest.

"I think myself that either remedy would be a good one. If these people are brought before magistrates, they insult them in the very halls of justice, while other people like them would be sent down from the slums of London for months, subject to prison discipline for not one-half as great an offence. They should either be dealt with by the hose or bitten by the rats.

"Now laying this aside, every one of us who loves the Great Empire and and looks up to the great flag that has braved a thousand years knows that there is a solution here in Canada, and that is if the evil dey should ever come and petticoat government should ever be established in England (every one of us here who are married knows what petticoat government is in mild form), (laughter), but no one of us has the faintest imagination of what it would be like if those vix ens sat on the bench or in the House of Commons.

"The debates, which now last until two in the morning, would last until two o'clock next day. They would fly across the tables, turn at each other and tear their great hats to pieces. Although we deprecate this sort of thing, we look forward to the time when all this shall be changed. But in the words of Macaulay, that imperial administration should fail and the New Zealander should stand on London Bridge and sketch the ruins of St. Paul, here in the Dominion of Canada British Principles, British freedom, British honesty and British sturdiness will stand invincible."

Bishop DuMoulin also had something to say about the political crisis in England, which he said was arising through the head and heart of the Empire. Continuing, he said:

"We can all look back upon the Imperial House of Commons as an assembly of gentlemen. Classical quotations were made by a member on one side, and he was answered by another from the other side just as telling. To these men they did not fear to trust the destiny of the greatest Empire that stands.

"I sat in the House of Commons in 1908, and such a change from the days of Gladstone and Disraeli! When I was there before, I could not in my wildest ravings and dreams imagine that there were the Socialists cursing the very Empire whose blessings they on joyed and cursing the very hand that gave them the liberty of cursing.

"There was the Irish gang. As the great statesman said when asked to join [illegible] 'Help Ireland, he said 'It is like my gout--intolerable and incurable.' (Laughter.)

"Now they have the Socialist Labor ites. Some of them may be conservative gentlemen, like John Burns, after they walk into office. They are the rudest, roughest and most unreliable gang that could possibly be collected They dominate the interests of the Hour of Commons; Ministers of the Crown now crouch and bow down before them."

Something Heroic.

"What is the matter with you?" "I have a raging fever."

"What are you taking for it?" "Medicine."

"Why not bolted lobster?"

CRIPPEN'S LAST WORDS.

Affectionate Letters to Leneve Published in London Papers.

London, Nov. 28.--The last statement of Dr. Crippen, who was hanged on Nov. 23, at Pentonville Prison, is published in a Sunday paper, in the form of two final letters, written to Ethel Leneve, one of which is dated Nov. 22. The letters are not reproduced in their entirety, it being explained that they contained certain personal confidences, but nothing in the nature of a confession.

Crippen throughout declares his innocence, but hopes that it will one day be revealed. The letters, which are printed as one, begins with protestations of pathetic love for the girl, and repeats constantly the phrase: "How can God destroy a love in the hour of the end, now so near. Crippen continues:

"How can I endure to take a last look at your dear face. What agony must I go through at last, when you disappear forever from my eyes. I feel comforted in thinking that, throughout the years of friendship, never have I passed one unkind word, or given one reproachful look to her whom I loved best in life, to whom I have given myself heart and soul, entirely, entirely, forever."

Crippen asks that Leneve have his body cremated, and, if possible, obtain his ashes. "I am calling you dear as she deem best." He complains that the statement, published on Nov. 20, omitted his criticisms of the crown's evidence, with reference to the pear and the absence of the navel, which he considered important, and proceeds exhaustively to analyze the evidence on these points. "He asks that Miss Leneve have to no further expense in trying to secure further evidence, adding "I can safely leave further evidence to a just God."

He concludes: "Good-bye, Miss Leneve will go to "Mrs. H," where she will be free from the lying tales of the destiny of the greatest Empire that stands.

"Of my innocence I have no fear. I will let my spirit be with you always."

The paper prints a fac-simile of Crippen's letter, bequeathing everything to Miss Leneve.

Pro-Navy Meeting.

Montreal, Nov. 28.--The pro-navy demonstration, held at St. Johns, Que., on Saturday afternoon, was attended by 1,500 people, and speeches were delivered by Hon. R. Prefontaine, Hon. R. Dandurand, Dr. Beland, M.P., Arthur Demers, M.P. for the County of St. Johns, Iberville; E. Lapointe, M.P., and others. There were a few interruptions, but on the whole the explanations of the Ministers of the day were listen to by a sympathetic crowd. It is understood that a series of such gatherings will be held throughout the province, and it may be that another test of public opinion will be taken at an early date.

Hon. L. P. Brodeur declared that he was responsible in a great measure for the bill and he congratulated himself on the fact that the navy bill is the unanimous wish of the people of the statute book by the Cabinet of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Dr. Beland, M.P. for Beauce, asked on his compatriots to pause and realize the fact that there is but one French province out of the nine composing the confederation, and at the way they are now going it will not take much to have the other eight allied against the lone province, and everyone knows which would be the sufferer in the long run.

N. S. Coast Storm Swept.

Halifax, Nov. 28.--For the past twenty-four hours the Nova Scotia coast has been swept by hurricane weather, which has played havoc with the telephone and telegraph wires, and delayed shipping.

The Allan liner Virginian, the first homeward bound mail steamer, which sailed from St. John Friday afternoon, and should have reached Halifax Saturday morning, and sailed for Liverpool Saturday night, did not make port until yesterday morning. After rounding the Nova Scotia coast, Captain Gambell ran into the teeth of the storm, and was forced to slow down to five knots an hour. A blinding snowstorm was raging, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the ship was kept on her course.

In the Bay of Fundy the D.A.R. liner Yarmouth encountered the gale, and Robert Taylor of Round Hill, Annapolis, who was returning from Upper Canada with his family from their honeymoon trip, was washed overboard and drowned.

In attempting to enter Halifax harbor in a gasoline boat Saturday night a machinist named Wambolt, was swept out of his boat by the seas and drowned.

500 Fliers in the World.

Paris, Nov. 28.--The Prof. Sorea, lecturing before the civil engineers, said the dangers of aviation should not be exaggerated. The Aero Club of France has issued over 270 licenses and the total number of aviators in the world is about five hundred. The deaths have been about six per cent. The total distance flown may be estimated at 1,000,000, or one death for 4,166 2-3 miles.

A movement for an international exhibition in Paris in 1920 was started this week by a number of senators, acting in behalf of the commerce and industry group in the Senate, who visited the Minister of Commerce and urged that such exhibitions awaken international relations and stimulate the prosperity of the country.

No Tariff Changes.

Washington, Nov. 28.--The probability of President Taft recommending any tariff legislation in the present session disappeared Saturday when Chairman Payne, of Emery of the tariff board called at the White House. Mr. Emery told the President that it would be practically impossible for the board to get data ready to submit to Congress for several months. The board as now at work on pulp and paper and the woollen schedules.

The ...Veiled Lady...

Maxwell's fiery game. "Ah, 'De Americus'," Vera, fired the excited brigadier of the Frontier Police, shielding in his show, flopped coat. "If I spoke zem God damned as I Montreal, I'm zem English."

"Certainly. Speak English," Maxwell said.

Fifty yards to the right of the track is a cottage, its humble walls shone with light, a wonderously beautiful young woman lay fainting in the arms of a man whose face was undistorted by the bystanders who murmured, "She is dying, but that man cannot know." From the west down she was already dead. A splinter of hard wood had translated her spine.

"Depeches, Monsieur," said the old physician. "Elle va mourir bientot. Quelle beaute." The surgeon replied, "I will give her opium until you have done." Maxwell approbated. "The woman can receive some nourishment. He started back. "My God, Beatrice, Beatrice."

"Who are you?" she said as a thick film started over her eyes.

"I am Vivian Maxwell, Jack Gordon's best friend; and the man who rescued Beverly Seaton from Elmira Prison."

"Quick," he added, "death is notary. I want you to write for me. And then I will go." She signed. His dying woman, struck down in the proud insolence of proud animal life and flowing beauty, the tender fragility and the wonder--that organ sentimentally termed the heart, really a model of perfection pump.

"Depechez-toi," whispered the son of Galen, as he gave her a stimulant. A glittering fire burned in her eyes. She tried to write her dictation. "Hell to Beverly were here. Oh, my God! To die like this." Maxwell sighed.

"Write quickly," she murmured. A pitying woman wiped the foam away from her lips. Maxwell dictated:

"A notary! My will! Write." The physician wrote. The brigadier and the old official entered.

"Ah," said the Gendarme officer. They uncovered in the royal presence of death. Maxwell, with a sob, knelt and prayed as the beautiful wreck of mortality. His kindly eyes now said "Ready."

"Begin," she dictated. "Beatrice Gordon, being of sound and disposing mind, leaves her estate, all real and testament." Maxwell, with dying fingers, wrote. "Maxwell Gordon, Barrister-at-law." "I give, devise, and bequeath my entire estate, real and personal, to the Right Honorable Sir Hugh Seaton Hall, Virginia, United States of America."

Maxwell's eyes gazed pityingly on the dying woman. "You cannot give to the dead."

"Speak," she hissed with supreme effort.

Beverly Seaton shot himself at New York after a duel with Jack Gordon. Desperate duel with Stahwenstein broke his heart. He never forgot killing Adolf Stahwenstein."

"My God, this is my punishment. My wife killed poor Adolf," and she tried to head fell heavily on the coarse linen pillow. In fifteen minutes she opened her eyes. Maxwell was at his post. The surgeon whispered, "I have done all I can, be brief."

"Gordon?" she whispered, as Maxwell bent over her. "Would never accept it. Beverly left his land to me. Poor old servants," he softly whispered. Her fading eye kindled.

"Then you Maxwell, then, in trust for the colored people once belonging to the late Judge Monroe Seaton. And I appoint said Vivian Maxwell to be my executor without bond. Quick," she muttered, "the pen!" and the trembling, jewelled fingers touched the pen for the last time. In a few minutes the brigadier and the physician affixed their names and the grave-faced notary took the papers, which were instantly read. He bowed, and then began his work.

Maxwell gazed on the prostrate woman with eager attention. A peculiar light was in her eyes. The fluttering fingers undoned the fur over-coat away. Maxwell leaned over her. "A priod." The Brigadier saluted, and went quickly down the street. Maxwell undid the fast-expiring woman whose splendid eyes never left him, even for a moment.

"Tell Gordon I was driven on by madness to save my life. I was alone, poor, friendless. Oh, God! I am dishonored. Forget. Forgive. Beg him. Hunted down like a beast. I was driven to my ruin. The prey of men." He fell. "I could live. If I could go back."

"And Jack," said Maxwell, as the notary affixed his seal to the paper, and gravely noted the time.

"Jack!" he moaned. "I only asked to be righted to save my honor. He scoffed and sneered. I struck him down. With one kind word, I would have gone back." Oh, God!" Maxwell drew from his bosom, a pocket,--the receipt for the diamonds. Hitchhiker, Berlin. Send them back. All that I have left away. In my trunks, jewels--all--all are the ill-gotten gains." Maxwell's face faltered. He was very close to her trembling lips now. "Beatrice, Beatrice, My name, only Beatrice. You by Beverly's grave, pray to God. Forgive, forgive." Maxwell bent over her, and kissed him my disgrace. Ah," and with a sudden sigh, she fell back dead.

Maxwell crossed the lovely hands on the marble bosom, warm in life's passing warmth, and with a sob of grief, closed the eyes, in its sad, unearthly, unnatural beauty--which had had touched the cheek of the pure, English girl, who now was waiting for him at home in her nest.

At the door the grey-haired priest, with white cassock, received Maxwell as he moved forward and knelt beside the bier.

"Vera e Patre," he began. His voice was hollow as the falling clods on a coffin.

The work of one woman was done. The next day, later, Maxwell parted and Maxwell, still pale and shaken, stood by the window of the train, and gazed at the rincur. With rare delicacy, the English man never spoke. Before the coffin lid closed forever, the kneeling figure stole forward and gently laid upon the breast of the "Queen of the Barrhaven alps" a clus-ter of pure white roses.

To be continued.

GIRLS BURNED ALIVE

Twenty-Four Perish in Fire at Newark, N.J.

Factory Catches Fire and Working Girls Rush to the Windows--Some Strike Life Net, Some Fall on the Firemen, and Fifteen Crash on the Stone Pavement Sixty Feet Below --Two of Injured Will Die.

Newark, N.J., Nov. 28.--In ten minutes 24 girls were burned alive Saturday morning, or crushed to death on the pavement by leaping from the windows and fire escapes of the factory brick building on Orange and High streets here.

Fifty were taken to hospitals, of which two may die. Among the injured is Jose Sloan, deputy fire chief, who was overtaken by the falling walls and buried in bricks and rubbish. The rush of the flames was incredibly swift and three such unreasoning terror into the hundred working girls on the top storey that the body of one was found huddled against the charred stool beside the machine at which she had been sewing when the first cry of "fire" petrified her with fright.

Horrible as must have been what went on in the smoke of that crowded upper room, what befell outside in the sunlight was more horrible yet. The building was furiously inflammable, and the first gush of flames had cut off all possibility of escape by the stairways. Some had attempted one trip, but took down no passengers and never came back.

The only exit was by two narrow fire escapes, the lowest platforms of which were 25 feet from the street. Only these overcrowded and long lines, scorched, dancing hot by the flames from lower windows, pressed forward in a mob of women, blind with panic, driven by the fire and the others behind them.

A net had been spread beneath the windows, and like that it was useless. "Like rats out of a burning bin," was the way Fire Brenner described that pell-mell descent. They poured out of the windows, rolled up on the heads of those below them and cascaded off the fire escape to the pavement, 60 feet below. Some of them stood in the windows outlined against the flames and jumped clear; others from the landings, still others from the steps where they stood. The air was full of them, and they fell everywhere into the net, on the necks of firemen, and 15 of them on the hard stone slabs.

When the awful rain ceased there were eight dead in the street and the gutters ran red. Seven were so badly crushed that they died in hospitals. Rounds of smoke and showers of burning embers spread over the city and rained down on neighboring roofs. As the news flew--and it lost nothing in the telling--

Tactful Truth.

"I appeal to Mr. Verity, whose truthfulness nobody doubts," said the outraged bather, with a glitter in her eye. "Mr. Verity, do you think I supply my boarders with bad butter?"

The others looked eager attention to see how Mr. Verity would get out of it.

"Madam," he answered, with a bow, "the truth on which you compliment me forces me to declare that your butter is one of your strong points."--Baltimore American.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong when he is suffering from weak stomach with its constant indigestion, or from some derangement of the intestines, or associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. Any man who is nervous, weak or diseased, there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," nothing "does" him any good, because assimilation, lasting in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, by loading the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood. Invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves and builds up the body with SOUND, HEALTHY FLESH, STRENGTH AND THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

Gompers Re-elected.

St. Louis, Nov. 28.—Samuel Gompers was Saturday afternoon re-elected president of the American Federation of Labor.

James Duncan, John Mitchell and James O'Connell were re-elected as first, second and third vice-presidents by unanimous vote.

John P. Frey of Bloomington, Ill., was re-elected treasurer, and F. Morrison, Washington, D.C., re-elected secretary.

D. J. Hayes, Philadelphia; William D. Huber, Indianapolis; James P. Valentine, Cincinnati; John R. Alpine, Chicago; H. B. Perham, St. Louis, were re-elected fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth vice-presidents by unanimous vote.

The proposition to grant the Western Federation of Miners a charter in the American Federation of Labor, was referred to the executive council. President Gompers overruled the point of law raised by James O'Connell of the machinists.

The convention by unanimous vote endorsed women suffrage, and placed itself on record as favoring the organization of all classes of labor in the country, including negroes. Some of the Pacific coast delegates objected to this proposition to include the Asiatic races, and it was suggested that the remedy was the exclusion of Orientals from the United States.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 26.—Alex. Lucas is about 60 years of age, was born in Ontario, was the pioneer newspaper man of Calgary.

He was badly mutilated, the left foot and the top of his head being cut off. His body was found later on the pilot step of the yard engine. He leaves a wife and three daughters.

TIGERS BEATEN.

Hamilton Football Players Lose to Toronto Students.

Hamilton, Nov. 28.—The great University of Toronto Rugby football scoring machine overwhelmed the Hamilton team here on Saturday in the final game for the Canadian championship by 16 to 7. The Tiger is in his lair, and the Varsity bulldog who chased him there went away from Hamilton with his jaws firmly set on the greatest honor to be won on a Canadian football gridiron. "Dooley" of the Varsity was nine, decorated in his blue and white blanket, was a living picture of "What we have we'll hold."

More than three thousand spectators saw the Intercollegiate champions beat the winners of the Junior provincial championship. Other thousands were outside the enclosure trying in vain to get in. They rushed the fences, only to be driven back by mounted police until finally, by sheer force of numbers, they overcame the police and joined the cheering throng inside. The football centres of the country sent their quota to add to the thousands who went from Toronto and the Hamiltonians who saw their favorites humbled by the splendid student team.

It is known that four choice seats in the grand stand brought $100, and for days before the game exorbitant prices were charged by speculators who had secured tickets. The streets of this city on Saturday were a riot of blue and white and yellow and black. The football game was before all else, and the contest, with the incidents attendant upon it, was one of the most exciting and interesting spectacles ever seen on a Canadian field of sport.

The celebrations of the Varsity supporters in Hamilton and Toronto were riotous, but not more than usually violent.

KAISER TAKEN TO TASK

Socialist Ask About His Theory of Divine Right.

Herr Ledebour, the Leader of the Social-Democrats, Says There is a Crazy Streak in the Hohenzollerns —Chancellor Denies Actions of Emperor—Enthusiasm Against the Monarch Is Hard to Arouse.

Berlin, Nov. 28.—The Reichstag debated on Saturday's Socialist interpellation on the Kaiser's famous divine right speech at Koenigsberg on August 27. In this address the Kaiser arrogated to himself the office of a divine delegate, and in that character avowed his determination to rule in his own way, regardless of the views or opinions of the hour.

On the whole, the events of the day denote a victory for the Kaiser and the failure of the Social-Democrats to arouse the press or popular enthusiasm against the monarch on account of the speech. To a certain extent, also, it established the fact that the largest prosperity in the constitutional representatives are still strong supporters of the monarchic system, and are willing to accept, although perhaps some sometimes against the doctrine of divine right claimed by the Kaiser. At the same time, if they accept this claim, they do so in theoretical grounds, and with the proviso that the Kaiser shall not employ it to override or modify the constitution.

Herr Ledebour, the Socialist leader, opened the discussion. He charged the Kaiser with breaking the promise which he solemnly gave the nation in November, 1908, when, after the national agitation caused by the interviews with him published in The London Telegraph, he announced through the Imperial Chancellor that he had become convinced that the greatest reserve on the part of the crown was indispensable to the interests of German policy.

Herr Ledebour declared that the Kaiser was hereditarily afflicted with the same illusions which destroyed the Stuarts and the Bonapartes, and he warned the sovereign that the Hohenzollerns were heading in the same direction.

The Socialist leader concluded with the defiant assertion that the German Social Democracy avowedly aspires to establish a republic, and will bend all its efforts to that end. This statement was greeted with prolonged Socialist cheers.

Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor, responded on behalf of the German Empire. He declared that never before had the Social Democracy of Germany so openly unmasked its revolutionary objects. When the speaker was interrupted by Socialist cries:

"Is that anything new?"

To this the Chancellor replied: "Yes, it's nothing new, but the country will be glad that its eyes have now been fully opened."

The remainder of the Chancellor's speech was a vigorous defense of the Kaiser's actions since November, 1908. He said none of the responsible branches of the imperial word had violated the constitutional provisions of the crown. Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg closed by declaring that he only defended the Kaiser as Imperial Chancellor, but also because he shared the honest depth of his convictions.

The most notable utterance was made by Dr. von Heydebrand, the leader of the Government Conservative party, who—sometimes called the "uncrowned King of Prussia."

Doubtless prior at the Chancellor, who was seated only a yard away. Dr. von Heydebrand declared that the bold avowal of the Socialists in favor of a republic should not wait for the arrival of the republic, but should take immediately such steps as would put it in the bud.

The appeal of the Conservative leader to the Imperial Chancellor to guarded as forecasting an attempt to secure the reversal of Bismarck's anti-Socialist laws, for the purpose of suppressing all forms of the Socialist propaganda.

Comment of Vatican Organ.

Rome, Nov. 28.—The Osservatore Romano publishes comments, evidently inspired by the Vatican, on the discussion Saturday in the German Reichstag of the speech made by Emperor William at Koenigsberg on Aug. 26, pointing out the Ultramontane attitude of the Centrists. Regarded as forecasting an attempt to secure the reversal of Bismarck's anti-Socialist laws, for the purpose of suppressing all forms of the Socialist propaganda.

Secretary of Union to Die.

Paris, Nov. 28.—A jury in the court of assizes at Rouen has imposed the death penalty upon Alexander Jacquet of the Coal Handlers Union, who was convicted of instigating the murder of Foreman Donge, during the strike on the docks at Havre in September. Donge abandoned his comrades and returned to work. Soon afterwards he was beaten to death in the streets. The actual participants in the crime were condemned to term of from 8 to 15 years' imprisonment at hard labor.

The evidence introduced showed that on the day preceding the murder, Secretary Durand introduced a motion "to get rid of Donge," and that the union adopted the motion with but a single dissenting voice. The leaders of the general confederation of labor in Paris charge that the attack was inspired by Premier Briand's recent attitude toward trade unions, and have called a public meeting to protest against the sentences.

Jap Premier May Resign.

Victoria, Nov. 28.—Count Komura's health, according to Japanese papers, received here, is such that his resignation as foreign minister is expected at any moment. Numerous suggestions are made as to Komura's successor, the names of Baron Kato and Baron Goto being suggested.

When the count undertook the diplomatic operation a few weeks ago the physicians thought he could recover quickly, but it is feared that the operation was too great a tax on his strength.

Put Poison In Water Tank.

Macleod, Alta., Nov. 21.—Henry Adams of Taunton, Illinois, was convicted in the Supreme Court of the attempted murder of F. C. Hunter of Nanton, and sentenced by Justice Stewart to ten years' imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary at Edmonton.

The jury decided that he was guilty of placing poison in the family water tank.

Committed For Trial.

Cayuga, Nov. 27.—The adjourned preliminary hearing of the Smeltzers was heard yesterday at Seneca before Magistrates Harris and Rusholm. Mrs. Smeltzer was bound over in $2,000 sureties to appear for trial, and Lloyd Smeltzer was sent up for trial, no bail allowed, the charge being setting threatening letters. The charge against Leah Smeltzer was withdrawn.

Canadians Do Badly.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Canadians have not done nearly as well this year at the International Live Stock Show as usual.

Canadian exhibitors stand sixth in cattle, sixth in sheep and ninth in swine.

In the judging competition, the students from the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, failed to do better than seventh, while Manitoba was fourth. First honors went to Missouri, with Nebraska second.

Michael Cudahy Dead.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Michael Cudahy, founder of the packing firm bearing his name, died last night at a hospital here of pneumonia. He had been ill for five days.

Mr. Cudahy was born in Ireland on Nov. 7, 1841. He came to the United States with his parents in 1849. The family settling at Milwaukee, Wis. When a boy of fifteen, he became an employe in a Milwaukee packing house.

Infants Are Starving.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—The efficient strike committee, which has investigated conditions in the families of striking garment workers, reported yesterday that 3,000 babies are starving here as a result of the labor war. The report was made at a meeting at Hull House, and a special babies' milk fund was started at once by members of the committee.

It is well to be sure you are right, before going ahead, and it is just as well to be sure you are wrong before backing out.

INDIAN UNREST.

Northwest Frontier Conditions Are Steadily Growing Worse.

The Indian papers continue to offer evidence of the growing spirit of unrest on the northwest frontier. So far, says The Pioneer, from the situation having improved in the last few weeks, affairs are steadily going from bad to worse. As pointed out, the outlaw trouble during the past six months has assumed very serious proportions, and there is little doubt that the tribesmen of the lands to the west owe their present encouragement they receive at the hands of the Afghan officials in Khost. It now appears that these officials at Khost have in fact actively been hard at work stirring up the Mezais and other transfrontier tribes against us, and that they have made sufficient progress with their machinations to give cause for the little apprehension in regard to future developments in the October Bannu outrain is over.

"It is a significant symptom," adds the writer, "of the unrest already prevailing in the troubled territory that the Kohat Pass has just been closed. The success which attended the last attempt to close it against the outlaws has naturally excited the envy of the neighboring spirits across the border, and it is certain that the moves instituted by the tribesmen under the arms traffic have tended considerably to embitter their feelings towards us. The difficulties of frontier administration have now been seriously enhanced by the further complication of the Kabul intrigues. It is high time that the government of India should put a stop to this state of affairs, and it is not unreasonable that certain representations have already been made to His Majesty on the subject."

The Pioneer has an interesting message from the Englishman's Frontier Correspondent, that Ameer is demonstrating his possession of some progressive ideas. He has issued an order, it is stated, to the Governor of Jellalabad, to inform all the inhabitants of that Jellalabad Jirga to clear the Lakhi forest as soon as possible, so that, on His Majesty's arrival at Jellalabad, the land may be distributed to the poor people living in the surrounding district. No revenue will be demanded from the people on the lands for three years, and the water for cultivation will be supplied free. The Jellalabad River canals free. The Jellalabad Bazar Road, which was under construction, has been finished. It is about twenty feet broad. All the four gates of the city have been repaired. The Governor of Jellalabad, in obedience to the order of the Ameer, has appointed a committee consisting of influential Hindus and Mahommedans of the city, to have lamps put up in every street and bazaar of the city, and also to arrange for the water supply from the Jellalabad rivers for the city.

A Rangoon Journal recounts the following incidents:

"A chieftain of a frontier state, over which we exercise a quasi-rule, was entirely seized upon the person of one of his subjects, who is reputed to be possessed of a very considerable sum of money, and proceeded to attempt to extort some of the latter by means of torture. The Resident demanded that the unfortunate man should be handed over to him. The Sawbwa, it is said, flatly refused to obey, and asked the Resident by what right he interfered. 'This,' said the Sawbwa, 'is my country, and not yours.'

"Of course, by a very small display of force, the Resident managed to rescue the unfortunate man, upon whom such revolting cruelty had been exercised that it is doubtful whether he will recover; but the chief was insulting to the last, saying, we are told, the key of the prison in which his victims were confined through the hands of a very inferior officials, and remarking that the Resident might unlock the prison door himself. But the Sawbwa certainly would not release him.

"This Sawbwa employs a Chinaman as Prime Minister, and it is believed with some good reason, that the chief tain's attitude is due to the prompting of his Celestial adviser and his insolence to the belief he can get foreign backing for himself and his native state. From him we can have nothing to fear, for his army is a tiny one and is armed with flint-locks, but it would be somewhat awkward if in case of trouble the Chinese might consider that they were entitled to interfere to restore order. The Lieutenant-Governor is very shortly about to pay a visit to the Shan States in order to see and judge for himself, and to make arrangements if necessary for strengthening our position."

Whistler Slumbered.

It was Whistler's custom when dining to go deliberately to sleep, no matter where or what the circumstances might be. At one dinner party his genius more suddenly aroused his neighbor, who nudged him violently with the words: "I say, Whistler, I protested excitedly, "you must not sleep here!" "Leave me alone!" replied Whistler. "I've said all I wanted to. You've interfered all in which you and your friends have to say." The sweeping he was a guest at an hotel, and he also fell asleep. Asked to immediately after the dinner was over he went calmly to sleep. On the way to the theatre he had another nap in the stall. He also slumbered peacefully through the play. The next morning he blandly asked: "What did Abbey have to saw last night? Anything worth while?"

An Adventurous Skipper.

Captain G. B. Blythe, of Coventry, England, is making a trip round the world in a nine-ton yawl, the Pandora, built for him in Western Australia.

A famous lone sailor is Captain Slocum, who, navigated an old British sloop 45,000 miles. He left Boston in 1895 in the Spray, a vessel 40 feet long, 14 feet broad, and 5 1-2 feet deep. His first port of call was the Azores, and he went through the dangerous Straits of Magellan. When at the Cape he saw President Kruger and Lord Milner, while Mrs. Louis Stevenson visited his little craft at Samoa. His voyage of circumnavigation took three years and two months.

Didn't Like Them.

"I hate a clever woman!"

"Do you, dear fellow?"

"Yes; don't you?"

"Well, they do get on to a fellow rather quick, don't you know."

Revenge.

"She didn't care a mite to be party."

"I'd get even with her."

"How would you do it?"

"By staying away."

Caught Them All.

The girl was simply awful.

But as she was a dimple

She made a bit with men or all

And fellows by the score.

Only Way to Get Them.

We hate to do without 'em.

But as we cannot spare 'em,

Or wait to grow the things

Pa cut them short—fancy—

We'll have to save our money

And buy a pair of wings.

Lloyd-George Says He Is Not Trying to Upset Institutions.

Centre of the Attack on the Lords, Declares That the Upper House Cannot Legislate Sympathetically Because It Does Not Know Anything About the Misery Outside of Its Well Kept Circle.

London, Nov. 28.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George, the itinerant storm centre of the struggle, addressed several meetings at Edinburgh on Saturday. He declared that the Budget was not designed to undermine institutions or assailing property. He desired to take away the glance of the sunshine of the peers from the people. He was not out to pull down the House of Lords, but to make it safe because, while sympathy without knowledge was impossible.

Mr. F. E. Smith, in the course of a speech at Burnley, made reference to Hammond's "American dollars," and said he would be glad to contribute to help redress the constitution. "Let Carnegie bring over his dollars and their own porridge."

Lord Hugh Cecil emphasized the danger of unchecked tyranny of democratic politics in the Commons.

T. P. O'Connor, speaking at Leeds, stated that if the Tories could get a majority on the question for tariff reform, there would be nothing left but civil conflict.

The Tories are making urgent appeals to the moderate men among the Liberals, and profess to be afraid of Carnarvon on this occasion, but nothing else. The Opposition expect to win half a dozen seats on the balance in London, but are looking with hope, rather than confidence, to Lancashire. The Stock Exchange was reporting shows that the opinion of the brokers is that the Radicals are declining.

Winston Spencer Churchill, Home Secretary, returning to London Saturday night, after a speech at Dundee, was attacked in the train by a female suffragette, who, it is said, had who cried out "Take that, you cur!" The lady detectives, who accompany Mr. Churchill, carried the blow and overpowered the assailant, who stated that she is believed to be a man who interrupted Mr. Churchill during his address and who was expelled from the meeting after a violent struggle.

Mr. Churchill arrived at London three women tried to assault the Home Secretary, but the detectives drove them off.

Little more than a year ago—Nov. 15, 1909—Mr. Churchill had an adventure with a suffragette and a dog which, not only startled him, but evidently except that the suffragette was a woman. As Mr. Winston was confronted with his wife from a train at Bristol a well-dressed woman broke through the crowd and lashed at him with a dog whip. "Take that, you brute," she cried.

The election address of Arthur J. Balfour, leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, is a brief document, in which he says that the Liberal program of legislation is practically the same as that of the general election, and asserts that behind the single chamber conspiracy lurks socialism and revolution.

"It is because both Nationalists and Liberals are afraid of losing their darling projects are not in harmony with the constitution," he says, "people," says Mr. Balfour, "that they have forced upon the settlement of the only constitutional safeguard which at critical moments will enable them to be protected efficiently."

The Opposition leader also refers with the greatest emphasis to the imperative scheme for the reform of the House of Lords, which Lord Lansdowne proposed.

Now Poet Is After Asquith.

London, Nov. 28.—William Watson, who obtained great notoriety by his attack on Mrs. Asquith in the Woman Who Toasted Tommy," came out this past week with some scathing comments on Premier Asquith's husband. The Morning Post accorded him hospitality of its columns in the poem, which is entitled "The Chief."

Woodstock's New Chimes.

Woodstock, Nov. 28.—Edward Taylor, who died on Nov. 25th, passed away peacefully in the hospital as the result of being kicked by a colt, fracturing his skull.

A chime of ten bells pealed out from the Knox Presbyterian Church last night in the playing of "The Maple Leaf," "the Doxology" and other airs. The bells were purchased with the $4,000 left the church by Mrs. William Gray, and were played yesterday for the first time.

Negro Lynched.

Mayo, Fla., Nov. 28.—Richard Lowe, a negro, was lynched near here on Saturday for entering the bedroom of the daughter of Dr. M. Cobb in this city late Friday night. Cobb was awakened by his daughter's screams, and went to investigate. As he entered the room the negro jumped through the window. A searching party arrested Lowe, who was identified by a portion of his hat.

Splendid Addresses Delivered at Annual Meeting of Dairymen

something else that will another it. The best remedy would probably be to put the plough into the field.

Mr. McVannel, of Picton, spoke of the old cheese factory and the alfalfa dotter, both of which were obnoxious. Wherever it is, every effort should be made to exterminate it, as it takes nourishment from the alfalfa plant. The farmers in Prince Edward County, he was pleased to state, are getting rid of their poorer cows, supplanting them with superior grades. The farmers generally are also weighing their milk and attending to it in a most systematic manner.

Mr. Singleton, of the Kingston Dairy School, addressed the meeting and said he regretted the fact that Mr. Publow was unable to be present. The farmers in this section are progressive and the reports, by the reports which were presented by the instructor of the district, and he was much pleased with these reports. Milk is valuable in proportion to the butter fat it contains. A man's success in farming is due to the care he exercises and the work he performs upon his farm. In order to have good cows you must breed right. The cow feeding work was most important and should be taken more than it is by the farmers of the community. New Zealand started this work a year ago and as a result the farmers are increasing their production. In New Zealand the payment is made upon the butter fat, and this is much better cared for. To get the best result out of cheese, the best milk obtainable must be sent to the factory, the factory well equipped with all modern improvements. Next year all cheese makers will have to have a certificate. He should be a man of tact and a man who is conversant with everything in reference to milk. The man who has some aim in the man who is wanted as a first class cheese maker. Every cheese maker should be an expert in milk and curd testing. If the factories desire such a man the manufacturing of cheese will be improved.

Mr. McIntosh, of the agricultural class in Stirling, spoke of the necessity of girls and boys being taught in the schools something about milk and farming generally. Technical education would do this.

MR. G. H. BARR.

Mr. G. H. Barr, of Ottawa: The weakest point in our dairy interest is the dairy cow. Why? Because if a man has a first class dairy cow he will have more interest in the production of milk. There are one hundreds of herds of cows that are producing from 5,000 to 6,000 pounds of milk per annum from each cow? Milk is produced more plentiful than it was in former years, and the consumption can be improved. The average farmers of to-day have not the best dairy cows, and the cow is responsible. The speaker instanced a case where six years ago a farmer had a herd of cows which averaged 3,000 pounds of milk per year. A young son took hold of this part of the business and to-day the cows on the farm are giving nearly 10,000 pounds of milk per annum. We should have more cow testing associations in this country than we have. In Ottawa, at the Experimental Farm, there are cows which give 10,000, 12,000, and, in one case 14,000, pounds of milk in one season. Speaking of the wisdom of the work of Mr. Barr, who said he was pleased that the branch of taking care of milk was becoming general. The cooling of milk properly tends to improve the manufacture of cheese. It is a simple and easy matter. We should also have more cool cured cheese. We must not stand still in this matter, but go forward. A cool cure need not be great as $300 or $400 would place a cool curing room in any factory, and this would be more than realized in the proper care of the cheese. Cool cured cheese will command a better price than those that is not cool cured. We have in Canada the best system of dairying instruction, and why are we not in the cheese industry occupying the position Denmark occupies? Because we do not apply the methods. We should apply the methods and do better work, until better cheese will be the result. A cool curing room should be at a temperature of about 58 or 60 degrees, especially in the fall.

MR. J. A. HOLGATE.

Mr. J. A. Holgate was pleased to be present and had been profited. He was interested in cool curing cheese being a move in the right direction. He was thoroughly convinced that it was an excellent plan, and factories were making a mistake in not placing a cool curing room in. Cool curing factories have less trouble with cheese than factories which are not so equipped. In speaking of the duty being lessened on cream sent into the United States, he said he was in favor of reciprocity with that country. If we can get more money that is what we are all after. Something should be done to arouse certain farmers who are not improving by producing milk.

Mr. Tom Ketcheson thought the cheese makers should see that the cheese is properly weighed and tested this important matter.

Mr. The inspectors should look after

Mr. Blakley was of the opinion that all cheese factories should be provided with cool curing rooms. He thought the farmers should think twice before entering into any arrangement with the Americans for the shipment of cream. Let us keep to the cheese business.

At this stage of the proceedings a number of those present spoke pro and con on the matter, but the majority were not in favor of the idea.

Mr. Glendenning thought that if the duty was lowered on cheese it might be advantageous to ship Canadian cheese into the United States. It might help the cheese industry, and a better price might be obtained.

Mr. James R. Andersen eulogized the efforts of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, who were able and efficient men. He knew it was a fact that cheese was bought in this section and the buyer paid six cents duty and shipped it to the United States, and no doubt made some money. If we could ship cheese to that country it might be advantageous.

Mr. W. C. Farley, being called upon, thanked those present for the honor conferred upon him by nominating him as a Director on the Board for this district.

The meeting then adjourned.

MR. C. M. READ DELIVERS A MOST INSPIRING ADDRESS

Yesterday afternoon at four o'clock there was a meeting in the Palace Theatre, at which there was a good attendance of about a hundred. Splendid music was furnished by members of the Belleville Orchestral Society. Ten views, beautifully illustrated, were shown on "The Holy City" was sung by Mr. Harry McKay.

The men joined in singing the hymns as they were thrown on the screen.

The subject for the afternoon study was "Moses at College," or "Among the Temples of Egypt." Mr. C. M. Reid very kindly read the interesting account, which was illustrated by fifteen stereopticon views.

The illustrated account reviewed the life of Moses from his childhood, the education he received at college where he received the advantages of the Egyptian branches of learning for which they were noted. They were most advanced in literature, art science and architecture. Moses, being in the royal court, also received the best training in their history as well as their politics. The views illustrated the nature of the work which the downtrodden Israelites had to do. The pictures presented a number of the Egyptian gods, pyramids, temples, halls and obelisks.

Egypt, among its many other aspects of interest, has this special claim, that it is the background of the whole history of the Israelites, the land to which, next after Palestine, their thoughts, either by contrast or association, immediately turned.

The next of the illustrated series will be given in the same place on Dec. 11th, as next Sunday afternoon there will be a mass meeting of boys, which will be addressed by a special speaker. This meeting will be entirely in charge of the boys.

Waist Lines Are Going Up—Drum Shaped Muffs.

The waist line is growing shorter—at least two inches—and some of the handsomest evening gowns have the belt just below the bust. Pleats and lace collars which fall over the upper arm are much worn.

The drum shaped muff, much larger, though, than the shape our grandmothers carried, will be one of the fashions of the winter.

Street shoes of calfskin and even of patent leather are severely tailor made with plain stitched seams and with only the smallest eyelet holes. The evening slippers and pumps are as elaborate as individual taste and purse will warrant. They are made of velvet, satin, kid and suede and decorated with fancy rosettes of ribbon, tulle or flowers.

Black and White "Beauty" Veils Always Good Style.

Stylish and becoming are veils of white ring dot net with rings in black and a fine black border to match. The most becoming veil, however, is one with tiny black dots on a white mesh. These are known as beauty veils because so many women wear them regardless of style.

Dancing frocks for the young girl are of chiffon, plain or bordered; net, marquisette or some other sheer, soft stuff. All of these are made over linings of satin messaline or silk. Nearly all silk frocks are veiled to soften the effect.

A chic hat for a little girl is of fine French white felt of the mushroom order. The trimming is a soft ribbon passed around the crown and held down with trim rosettes of the ribbon, one over each ear. The left rosette is encircled by a dainty wreath of holly, the soft, creamy kind with pale green leaves and crimson berries. The ties are of white ribbon.

The fancy waist that closes at the front is one of the newest developments of fashion. This model is cut in one with elbow sleeves; consequently it is easy to make, it's no trouble to fit, and it is sure to give graceful lines.

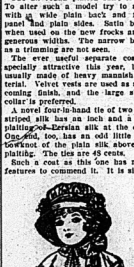
DECISIONS OF LA MODE.



How to Alter an Old Skirt Model—The Separate Coat Much Worn.

The all round plaited skirt is out. To alter such a model try to recut with a wide plain back and front panel and plain sides. Satin bands when used on the new frocks are of generous widths. The narrow bands as a trimming are not seen.

The useful separate coat is specially attractive this year, being usually of heavy mannish material. Velvet vests are used as a becoming finish, and the large shawl collar is preferred.

A novel four-in-hand tie of two tone striped silk has an inch and a half plaiting of Persian silk at the ends. One end, too, has an odd little cord effect of the plain silk above the plaiting. The ties are 45 cents.

Such a coat as this one has many features to commend it. It is simple and easy to make, shapely and becoming. The model illustrated is made of Russian blue broadcloth, with trimmings of rattail braid. If a simpler coat is wanted the cape may be omitted.

FOIBLES OF FASHION.

A Fetching Novelty of the Season. Rival of Willow Plume.

The most fetching novelty of the season is the theater cap of lace with velvet or silk bonnet as an accompaniment. The lace affair is modeled after the mobcap and is intended to be worn throughout the play, the bonnet being doned for the lobby and from the playhouse.

For hats and frocks the wood colors are much favored—soft dull brown and green that is termed hunter. In tailor made costumes it is predicted that brown and green will continue in vogue throughout the winter.

The willow plume is still in evidence, but it has been supplanted in stiff modish esteem by the exquisite French plume both in two tone and shaded effect. This feather is a work of art; as many as four shades are combined.

A new and much liked feature of many frocks is the yoke which extends straight over the sleeves. In lace with a vivid color underneath the effect is striking.

Pretty waists such as this one can be used for the entire dress and for the separate blouse. All the fashionable materials this season is such as successfully are appropriate, and for the trimming portions can be used contrasting silk or velvet.

Milady's Likely to Be Cold This Winter In Her New Gowns.

The new dress lining is known as "cora." It is very light sorah and is soft and beautiful. Of course there is not the slightest warmth in the lining, but comfort is not what the couturiers are after these days. With chiffon cloth that composes a large part of the afternoon and evening gowns there will be no protection whatever. But the effect is soft and clinging, and that is all the tradespeople and dressmakers seek.

Long coats of plush or fur will be worn quite as much this winter as they were last, and they will be very plain buttons forming their principal trimming, with perhaps a collar of some other fur.

Belts of patent leather are still much liked, but the new ones are very narrow.

Raccoon was never so fashionable as at present among furs. And black lynx is another smart fur that is more expensive this year than last on account of its scarcity.

The narrow seven gored skirt is a favorite one. This model can be made either in walking or round lengths and consequently is adapted for street or house wear. It takes the long slender lines proscribed by the winter fash ions.

Some of the tailor modes from Parisian houses show killed skirts and wide unattached panels of plain materials.

The newest of the big fur coats for evening wear are made with sailor collars and wide sleeves cut without seams.

To be in the mode hand bags must match the costume with which they are worn.

The little coat that is closed snugly at the neck is comfortable for cold weather. This model is treated in that way and is distinctly novel. The trimming on the front is pretty and becoming, and the big armholes are a new feature. JUDIC CHOLLET.

A BOURASSA RUMOR

STOLEN $20,000 IS DISCOVERED

Child at Play Unravels an Old Mystery in Toronto.

LOST IN TRANSIT

Concealed in a Rented Furnished House, in a Heating Register

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—Twenty thousand dollars in Traders Bank bills, stolen last year between Toronto and Ottawa, have been recovered at 91 Galley avenue in a remarkable manner.

The anxiety of a little boy to recover a lead pencil accidentally dropped into a heating register caused the find.

Early last week when an employee of the Canada Foundry went to his home after work he was confronted with stacks of new $5 bills and an excited wife, who explained that the little boy in searching for his pencil had pulled up the grating of the register and had discovered a tin box containing the notes which he found much fun in playing with. There was several thousand dollars.

On Thursday the Traders Bank was communicated with and on seeing the bills at once recognized them as part of a consignment of $20,000 sent from the American Bank Note Company at Ottawa, per Dominion Express, to the Traders Bank here a year ago last March, and stolen somewhere in transit. The police have been on the hunt for them ever since and have had persons under suspicion who will likely be connected with the crime now.

The place was searched from top to bottom with the result that a large portion of the missing money was found.

MACAULAY OFF TO PRISON FOR FOURTEEN YEARS

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Nov., 29.—J. C. Macaulay, who tried the black hand death sentence trick on John C. Eaton, president of the T. Eaton Co., was sent to the penitentiary to-day for twelve years. For some theft charges Macauley got two years, running concurrently with the other sentence.

TWO WEEKS' MISSION.

Rev. Father Doyle, of Toronto, is conducting a two weeks' mission at St. Michael's Church. The services this week are for the female members of the congregation and next week the services will be for the male members. The Rev. Father is a forcible speaker and his addresses are much appreciated. The attendance at the various services is large.

DR. BATSTONE HEARD

Monthly Missionary Meeting Held in Victoria Ave. Baptist Church.

Last evening in the Victoria Avenue Baptist church it was the monthly Missionary meeting, which is always a bright meeting and well attended. Last night, beside the missionary Hymns, the male quartette of the church sang. Miss Biggs presided at the piano. Mr. Hoyle acted as chairman and distributed the different books which comprise the society's missionary library. These books are returned and exchanged at each meeting.

The special speaker last night was Dr. Batstone, of India. His presence was an inspiration. He brought with him an entirely several of what has been idols or ideas of worship. He explained how utterly bereft of power one felt in himself as he undertook the work of amongst a people so superstitious, so predisposed and so subject to the caste system. Human power counted but little under these conditions. It was God's power that did the awakening, and creating of interest and enquiry in souls' hearts. God prepared this ground for the seed and the fields are already white to harvest. There was need of prayer and assistance that more laborers would be sent into the harvest fields. The speaker was rendered a hearty vote of thanks for his address.

Liberals May Now Come Out For Home Rule For Scotland

Asquith Would Give a Good Deal To Gain The Support of Scotland--Big Unionist Meeting Held in Edinburgh Last Night

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 29.—Political meetings held last night here and in many other big centres demonstrate that neither party will leave a stone unturned to gain victory. The Unionists and Liberals alike realize that for it to be a victory worth anything the Liberals must increase their majority in the House, as a mere plurality wouldn't suffice to curb the Lords, as required to pass the veto and home rule resolutions. So far the results of the meetings indicate nothing. They are all generally crowded and the orators of both parties are subjected to equal heckling.

It wouldn't surprise the people if Asquith came out with home rule for Scotland as well as Ireland, with endorsation of some scheme of provinces of Great Britain. Much depends on the Scottish vote and the Liberals would give a lot to get it. Edinburgh saw a strong Unionist meeting addressed by Austin Chamberlain last night. The name of Joseph Chamberlain was loudly cheered, but Lloyd-George's was hissed.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 29.—That there may be a slump in the Liberal majority in the last election owing to the difference in the policy advocated by Asquith's following is startling indicated by the first returns of canvassers in London and southern England. It is found that many who voted Liberal last time on the budget issue fight shy of the veto and home rule bills. This may have a serious effect on the Liberal majority.

IS BOURASSA CONFINED IN MONTREAL ASYLUM?

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—There is a persistent rumor here that Henri Bourassa, Nationalist leader, has not gone to Europe, as given out, but is confined in an insane ward of Longue Pointe Asylum. A telephone message to the doctor there this morning caught him off his guard, and he said Bourassa's condition was about the same. Friends state he suffered a nervous breakdown following the Arthabaska campaign.

RAILWAY COMMISSIONERS TO PLACE RESPONSIBILITY ON PUBLIC WORKS DEPT.

Citizens Appear Before Commissioners Here This Morning and Point out The Danger Which Will Result From The Construction of Five Piers Under C. N. R. Bridge--Board Says It's a Matter For Public Works Department To Deal With.

That much interest was manifested in the presentation of evidence to the members of the Railway Commission in reference to the matter of piers under the proposed C. N. R. bridge over the river, was evident this morning when the Council Chamber was filled with representative citizens.

The members of the Railway Commission were Messrs. D'Arcy Scott, Assistant Chief Commissioner, and Mr. McLean. They were accompanied by Mr. Simmons, chief engineer. The C. N. R. was represented by Mr. R. Temple, assistant solicitor, Mr. H. S. Greenwood, assistant chief engineer, and Mr. Baldwin, of the locating department.

Mr. Mikel, Kgtcy, City Solicitor, was present, also Mr. S. Mawson, the latter the interests of the Properties Owners' Association.

Among other present were: Mayor Marsh, Ald. Lott, Sills, Knox, Robinson, Bog'e, Wallbridge, Adams, Vermilyea, Clown, Messrs. Geo. Wallbridge, J. H. Hurley, J. J. McFee, W. B. Deacon, J. F. Wills, K.C., F. B. Leighan, D. Price, J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., C. F. Sharpe, E. Naylor, C. M. Meid, C. J. Bowell, Dr. Farley, R. Templeton, Walter Alford, J. D. Clarke, A. Caldwell, G. S. Sharpe, F. Quick, J. A. Roy, S. Robertson, D. McKinley, A. P. Allen, R. McCue, Cit. Ponton, T. Ritch, D. B. Leavens, J. A. Kerr, J. Roblin, T. Blackburn, J. Wallbridge, D. T. Sinclair, Dr. Yeomans, T. P. Power, W. Easier, W. C. Sprague, H. Carre, D. Mel. Ferris, J. Pauder, B. Arnott and J. Cummins.

MR. W. C. MIKEL.

Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., City Solicitor, in addressing the Commission, stated that in this city there had been trouble with anchor ice, which caused the water to back and flood cellars, putting out fires. He had received instructions from the Council to oil in reference to the bridge, but they desired one with as few piers as possible so as to obviate any trouble. Mr. D. Price, chairman of the Harbor Commission, presented a lengthy report of Mr. R. Gray, a Government engineer, which was made some years ago. At that time there were a number of lumbermen's piers in the river. He recommended that a channel be made to the lower bridge and also that a strong tug be used in breaking up the ice. This had, however, not been done.

In answer to a question from Mr. Temple, Mr. Price said there had not been much trouble since the piers were removed some two years ago.

Mr. John Roblin said he had lived on Front Street, near the harbor, for many years. There had not been so much trouble since the old piers had been removed. The jam of ice forms in the river and gradually works down. He had seen ice piled up at least 25 feet high. It was held by the piers. He had seen ice piled up on the island, which is now Victoria Park. Piers would no doubt be an obstruction. The ice breaks up in the river before it does in the bay.

In the stage of the proceedings photographs were presented to the Commission of scenes taken of a flood a few years ago.

Mr. George Wallbridge testified that he was chairman of the Harbor Commission for ten or eleven years. It was at the suggestion of the Commissioners that the lumbermen's piers were removed. The dredging out of the river below the lower bridge had

RELIGIOUS MEN CHANGING NOW

Schurman Thinks Present Day Condition of Poor Cannot Remain.

SPEAKS IN NEW YORK

Belief In the History of The Jews is Not Needed, He Asserts

New York, Nov. 29.—"To make belief in the history of the Jews a condition of the salvation of the human soul is, in this enlightened age of the world, not only a physical impossibility, but an intellectual absurdity and an outrage on free moral personality," said President Jacob G. Schurman of Cornell University, in an address here last night. Dr. Schurman was speaking at the dedicatory exercises of the new buildings of the Union Theological Seminary in this city. He declared that the buildings are a striking expression of the spirit of religious progress which, he said, is, however, larger than any institution.

"Whether we like it or not," he said, a change is taking place in the attitude of religious men. It may certainly be claimed that in their solicitude for improving the condition of the poor they may cite the example of the founder of the Christian Church. And apart altogether from belief, we may also argue that the condition of the poor is always to remain, as it is to-day, in any civilization calling itself Christian.

"A theological student, therefore, who wants to improve the condition of society, must study the social sciences, and especially the sciences of economics and statistics. As time goes on, I expect to see some of the studies which now find a place in the theological curriculum, and which are the mere survival of problems that our age has grown, eliminated, and in place of them there will be other subjects dealing with the problems of our own age, and from our modern scientific point of view.

"The only way that some clergymen can see to improve the condition of society is by the agitation of socialism. I believe, however, that with a thorough training in the social, economic and political sciences the main complained of may be abated under our present individualistic system of government."

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Railway Commissioners have been here and have gone over the ground and heard considerable evidence this morning. Their judgment is reserved until the Public Works Department of the Dominion of Canada has been notified and dealt with the construction of the bridge over navigable water, as provided for in the Railway Act. It is now up to the Government to back up the contentions of the Property Owners and citizens occupying property along Front Street. It is open to anyone to put in writing his or her statements of fact concerning the danger of flooding from the erection of so many piers in the river under the C. N. R. bridge and send such information to the chairman who presided here today, D'Arcy Scott, Esq., Railway Commissioner, Ottawa. There is no doubt that favorable consideration was given the matter by the Commissioners and good will result from their visit, but it is still open for citizens interested to petition or personally write them.

The merchant who advertises will before Christmas will get the biggest share of the early shoppers.

THE C. N. R. BRIDGE

Suggestions Made at Meeting of Railway Commission Explained.

Regarding the suggestion made at the meeting of the Railway Commission that the surplus covering over the steel sewer pipe in the bay might of itself prove a source of obstruction, The Intelligencer understands from the City Engineer that the slight rise mentioned was placed on purpose to allow of the settlement that always takes place on an extended trench, especially as the trench filling was wide and deep, and when this settlement takes place the slight obstruction disappears.

DR. LEAVITT DEAD

Deceased Reeve of Bancroft Village and a Prominent Man.

When the County Council convenes here next week there will be at least one vacant chair, and one familiar form will be seen no more. On Sunday last Dr. Leavitt, Reeve of Bancroft village, passed away. Deceased had been in failing health for some time and his demise was by no means sudden. The doctor was about 70 years of age and a widower. The Intelligencer is informed that no family survives. A year ago Dr. Leavitt was elected as Reeve, defeating Mr. James Best, who had been Reeve for some time. He was a painstaking and conscientious public man and his demise will be regretted by a large circle of friends.

TOWN TOPICS

ALL MALE TALENT HEARD

An all-male talent evening was an outstanding feature of the meeting of the Presbyterian Guild of St. Andrew's Church held last evening in the lecture room of the church. Gentlemen furnished the programme from start to finish. But in justice to the fair sex it must be stated that it was a lady (Mrs. Ryan) who prepared the programme and secured the able services of the artists of the evening. Mr. Gordon Reid and Mr. William McGie, jr., gave addresses on attention. An outline was given of the been a decided improvement. More dredging was, he thought, necessary. If a low bridge was built, how would it be got out of the river?

MR. J. W. JOHNSON.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., said the Harbor Commission had jurisdiction of the river up to the lower bridge. Before 1905 the lower bridge was carried away and the upper bridge had also been carried away. There had been trouble since then. It was thought that the bunching of piers in the mouth of the river had the effect of causing a flood. Since the piers had been removed there had been no trouble. The citizens wanted the C. N. R. but wanted protection and wanted the bridge built with a lower number of piers than was contemplated. He believed the interest of the railway could be served by having two or three piers.

In answer to a question, Mr. Johnson was of the opinion that the piers at the lower bridge did not interfere with the ice and cause it to block. There were seven lumbermen's piers in the river at one time. The deepening of the channel would no doubt be beneficial.

MR. S. T. HARRIS.

Mr. S. T. Harris stated that he was chairman of Public Works of the city for some time, and he had seen trouble from ice jams. Since the piers had been removed there had been no trouble. He was afraid that if too many piers were placed under the proposed C. N. R. bridge there would be trouble.

Mr. Mikel said he was informed that some of the lumbermen's piers in the river were 12 feet square and some were seven larger.

Mr. Scott—Would the city object to the spur of the G. T. R. on Pinnacle Street being raised?

Mr. Mikel—This matter had not been considered by the city, but he did not think there would be any serious objection.

Mr. Scott—Would there be any objection to the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Street where the proposed railway will pass?

Mr. Robb—I certainly object to having the grade raised on Front Street.

Mr. J. G. Lindsay, City Engineer, did not know the conditions here of years ago, only from what he had been told. Seven piers represents a solid wall. Five piers would also represent a wall. His opinion was that less than five piers could be placed under the bridge. He spoke of the feasibility of having deeper girders upon the bridge. If five piers were placed under the bridge there would be about 60 feet of space between each pier. At the lower bridge there was a much stronger current than where it is proposed to erect the C. N. R. bridge. The present bridge there would be such that the bridge could be built with two or three piers.

Mr. Scott—What is the grade of the proposed railway through the city?

Mr. Lindsay—He had not figured it out.

Mr. Scott said the Commission was under the impression that this was a matter which should be referred to the Public Works Department at Ottawa. That the Harbor Commission had jurisdiction over the section of the river where it is proposed to build the bridge there seemed to be no doubt, and it being a navigable stream it came by statute under the jurisdiction of the Public Works Department. We will give to that Department, as speedily as possible, the evidence taken and our views in the matter, so that action can be taken as soon as possible.

Mr. Temple said he had not read the Act or the sections referred to, but considered that the matter of navigable stream where the C. N. R. proposed to build the bridge. All the evidence submitted, he contended, were opinions and conjectures. All seemed to have based their opinions as to the cause of trouble to the old piers which were in the river at one time. They were only some 32 feet apart and were from 12 to 16 feet square. The C. N. R. proposition is to erect a bridge with five piers and these would be 85 feet apart. He believed the city had put down in the bed of the river near the proposed bridge a sewer pipe which might cause trouble. If the C. N. R. had to change their plan of the bridge it would mean a great expense.

Mr. Mason contended that it was a navigable stream, as vessels had and did come up the river.

Mr. Scott—He think this matter should be referred to the Public Works Department and so direct. We will reserve our decision when this has been done and the Department has been consulted.

The meeting was then brought to a close.

World Language

A few months ago an Esperanto convention was held in Washington, D.C. Soon after an Ido convention was held. Ido is less known than Esperanto, but is a rival as a "world language." Each claims that it and it alone is rightly qualified for a world language and that the other is absolutely worthless. The net result is that ordinary mortals conclude that each is right in its estimate of the other and that neither Esperanto, Ido, Volapuk or any other artificial language is ever likely to be generally adopted.

While the two leading artificial languages are quarrelling among themselves, English is making steady advances as a real world language. Each year sees an increase in the territory in which it prevails and in the number of people speaking it. Spanish and French are declining instead of advancing in the number of users, while German is not advancing nearly as fast as English. English is now taught in the schools of Scandinavia and Japan. At the same time irresistible trade and financial currents tend steadily to spread the extent of territory in which English is used.

Of the advantages which English has in the race to become a world language, the Chicago Record-Herald says:

"Trade, travel and immigration cause a language to spread. The greatest traders of the world are the English speaking peoples. They are also the greatest travellers, and insist on being served in their own tongue. The greatest movement of the nations that the world's times brings miscellaneous millions to a land where command of English must be acquired.

"Our language is expanding to meet our needs and the future needs of the world. It has long been the most copious of civilized tongues. The various Romance languages get along with from 125,000 to 150,000 words. The new Standard Dictionary contains 435,000 words, and the great Oxford dictionary, now freshly completed, will bring the number up to 450,000. The new enlargement of the Century Dictionary adds 100,000 items. The English language is as liberally receptive as a grab bag or a crazy quilt. Nothing fails of assimilation; nothing compromises its broad and catholic harmony."

It may be that no language will ever achieve the honor of being a world language. If, however, the honor does ever fall to any language, the prospects are that English will be the chosen one. Already it is the native tongue of about 175,000,000 persons. Of course Chinese is spoken by a greater number, but Chinese makes no advances outside of its native country. Its tremendous difficulties and peculiarities forbid that it should. The indications on the contrary are that before the end of this century English will be spoken by at least twice as many persons as at present and that it will have outstripped even Chinese in the number of persons speaking it, much more in the variety and extent of the territory in which it is used.

Amazing Paragraph in The Auditor-General's Report—Will Be A Vigorous Protest.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—Parliamentary committees sometimes work high. The special committee which investigated the operations of the various race tracks in Canada last summer in this country in witness fees and reporters' fees no less a sum than $1,242.80. The legal expense in the London lavestigation involved the expenditure of $9,118.60, Mr. F. B. Carvell, K.C., of Ottawa, receiving $2,500; Mr. G. H. Moss, of Toronto, $2,817.80, and Mr. R. C. Smith, K.C., of Montreal, $3,800.

MR. MARCIL'S UNIFORM.

If no other opportunity affords for the discussion of the uniform which was worn by Speaker Marcil in the Eucharistic Congress procession at Montreal, it will come in committee of supply, because the report of the Auditor-General contains an amount of $222.65 paid to an Ottawa tailor for a silk gown, an official suit, one pair of official trousers and other things.

Some of the Conservative members may bring this before the House of Commons what is regarded as a most fair expenditure during the course of last session.

HOW THEY RAISE FUNDS.

During the spring there was a bazaar held in the basement of the new Roman Catholic church of the Sacred Heart on Laurier avenue, the object of which was to raise funds for the completion of the church. In connection therewith there was a tombola, and in the Auditor-General's report of the expenditure by the sergeant-at-arms last year there appears this paragraph:

DONATION TO THE CHURCH.

Tombola, Sacred Heart church Ottawa—Basket of flowers... $8.00
Pipe case 7.00
Jardiniere 5.00
1 fancy chest of drawers 6.00
Bronze candlestick 4.00
4 cushions 11.00
Centrepiece 6.00
Rugs, 3 at 2.00
Fire screen 6.00
2 shoe bags 2.50
Sundries 8.35

Total $68.85

WILL BE VIGOROUS KICK.

What is desired to be known is by what authority the public money was expended in such a fashion, and it is predicted that when the matter is reached in supply there will be a vigorous protest from the left of the chair.

CANADIAN ACADEMY EXHIBIT

(Montreal Gazette).

Among the artists' works that were not mentioned in the article of last Friday, on the opening of the Royal Canadian Academy's Exhibition at the Art Gallery, is one by James E. Graham, A.R.C.A., who formerly did the painter who reveals a skilful brush in depicting these rural scenes.

John C. Pinhey, R.C.A., has three beautiful pictures, conspicuous for the warmth of coloring: 22, 23 and 21, by H. Bridgen, are certainly amongst the best this year. "The Lumber Road" is a delightful picture, with the sunlight filtering through the trees, falling on the easygoing horses.

J. W. Hutchison has three landscapes (105), "Through the Woods," is another fine picture of our Canadian woodland scenery. "Evening Then" (Watercolor) (111) by L. M. Kilpin, is the frosty autumn roads through the deep snow in the forest, the snow-laden boughs of the pine trees are so soft and realistic. Realistic also is "Autumn" (111). "The Gates of the Infinite."

C. W. Simpson is another of our most promising artists, the work he has made wonderful progress; his two pictures (127 and 128) are very strong and full of local color.

A. P. Jackson has two good contributions, his "Edge of Maple Wood" being exceedingly fine.

At the end of the large room are two pictures by Miss Emma Clarke, which attract attention from artistic audiences, as well as from the devotees of Isaac Walton. Her "Black Bass" (130) is alive and rushing through the most natural looking water. Her "Mackinonge" (37) is lying in all its beauty across a landing net, a fishing rod is nearby. These realistic pictures please, for they bring back vivid memories of delightful moments passed in the vicinity of many beautiful lakes and rivers, and are fine specimens of Canadian fishes and Canadian work.

A companion to Miss Clarke's pictures is (135, "Still Life," by T. Mower Martin, R.C.A., a picture of two fine specimens of the fall shooting along the banks and amongst the islands of our majestic St. Lawrence.

Two pictures in the Tempest Room, by C. W. Jefferys (pen and ink), are worth more than a passing glance, for here he has happily the artist depicted types and scenes of a past fast disappearing from our midst (111) "All Sainted Town," is a picture of Quebec village, is a very typical habitant scene; in front of an old church is the usual crowd which gathers on Sundays and Holy days for local news and gossip.

Hills Convincing Words On Good Road Question

No Material Aid To The Farming Population So Great As The Creation And Maintenance of Good Roads, Says He.

James J. Hill, the railway builder and developer of the Great Western States, has given his opinion on the good roads question in a letter to Logan Waller Page, director of the United States office of public roads. It is a letter full of sound logic and the knowledge with which he speaks, will carry conviction wherever it goes.

"Next after the preservation of the productive power of the soil," said he, "I know of no material aid to the farming population so important as the creation and maintenance of good roads. What the telegraph is to general information, good roads are to transportation. The country highway is to the agriculturist what the railway is to the commerce of roads in the United States. We spend on the railways about $6,000,000,000 a year. Less than ten per cent of road surface has been permanently improved in any way. It has been estimated conservatively that a moderate improvement which would permit four bales of cotton to be hauled at once would increase the value of the crop by what instead of 55, would effect a saving of $10,000,000 on the cost of hauling those two crops alone to market.

"The enormous volume of commodities that find either their origin or final destination on the farm or in the village must be transported over the dirt roads, and pay toll to the obstructions which they offer to traffic. The average country highway makes country life lonely and less profitable than it should be; wastes time, wastes labor, wastes money, wastes life. It helps to keep the farm unattractive, promotes the drift of population city-ward and disturbs still further the balance of employment. The two subjects which it is easiest to arouse public interest to-day are population of freight rates and improvement of highways. Both are closely allied in other direction accomplished, the second could not be compared in its relative or in its social effect on country life, with the substantial improvement on the country road.

"Good roads are expensive; but it costs more money to do without them than to build them. The actual money spent on the highways by the old system of local supervision, or rather non-supervision, is worked out instead of paid in cash, and the actual annual waste every dollar so expended. Road building is a matter of technical engineering, where results will always be measured by the amount of money appropriated and the methods employed.

"Never was a problem simpler that that which the good roads movement presents. It rests on the principles and appointment of resources and the enforcement of rules that will make it as strictly a business affair as if it were a transaction done for an individual or a corporation.

"Make a road so smooth and strong that a traction engine can pass over it with ease at all seasons of the year and you have done for the farm that the railroad does for the cities that they are connected by; what the trolley does for the suburb. Wherever roads of this character are provided, the rise in the value of farm lands alone is greater in the aggregate than their entire cost of construction.

VICTIMS OF CONSUMPTION.

MOTHER AND TWO CHILDREN AT MUSKOKA FREE HOSPITAL.

Are Now Under Treatment—Husband, Too, Had Been a Patient—A Tragedy in Real Life—Worthy Object for Institution.

A story from the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives tells of a mother who, with her two children, is now under treatment in that institution. The husband had been a patient, but on the case was advanced one when the patient entered, and he has since passed away. There is little doubt but that the wife was infected as a result of caring for her husband, and now she is in the Muskoka Hospital. Her little girl, about five years of age, and a boy of ten are with her, both being afflicted with this dread disease.

The words of the mother are pathetic. She writes: "I went to a doctor and got him to examine my lungs to see whether there was anything wrong with them, and he said that the right lung was affected. A little rest, he hoped, would build me up. I have a little girl, about five years old, and the doctor says that if I could take her up with me it would do her ever so much good, as she is not very strong. I have three more children, and one of these, a boy of ten, seems also to be affected, and it is advisable that he should enter the hospital."

These three are of the 104 patients who are residents in that deserving institution and being cared for without money and without price. The secret of it is that the trustees are carrying a debt of some thing like $40,000, incurred largely through the additions that have been made within the past year, and that have more than doubled the accommodation of the institution, together with the heavy cost of maintaining so large a number of free patients.

Readers who desire to help this great charity may send their contributions to Mr. W. J. Gage, Chairman Executive Committee, 29 Richmond street west, Toronto, or to Mr. Frank Wootten, secretary-Treasurer, 347 King street west, Toronto.

The Muskoka Free Hospital has ever lived up to its claims of never having refused a single patient because of his or her poverty.

Happiness.

"There is an instinct in the heart of man which makes him fear a closed-less happiness. It seems to him a curse to misfortune a tithe of his life, and that which he does not share bears interest, is amassed and largest sweels a debt which sooner or later he must sought."

Her Long Dream.

Estelle—And the proposal was just like a dream!

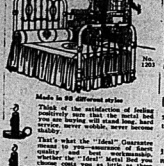
Agnes—Well, you ought to know, dear. You've been dreading of that proposal for years.

The ...Veiled Lady...

mality, addressing the sparkling Flossie. "Are you detailed for service today?" said the lady, gazing into his honest blue eyes. He writhed in unspeakable agony.

"I, sir—I rather—that is to say, I am at your service."

"Oh," said Flossie, and sagely ruminated. "Then have the horses brought around. I wish to make some purchases in the village. I will not walk with you. A member of the Fifth Cavalry walking! She was a member and the dainty witch swaggered around the table in officer's. "Beside," said she, "I prefer much better than you talk." I can see you and can thus be spared your cold Anglican criticisms of my style to the free. I just give you ten minutes," and she disappeared like a flash, if they fresh voice was heard carolling, far away, "Some day! Some day!



"By Heavens! I fancy she thinks I'm a bowling idiot," said the pessimistic Briton. "I suppose I am." He stole a glance at this disconsolate face in the mirror as the guests filed away to the parties; for the lovely hostess was reading Jack's letter.

"I need speak to that young terror?" growled General Everitt, "she knows Dunsford as if he were a chimpanzee."

He was not unmindful of the 3 to 1 that backed Harold's generous wooing. "Dear mother was glad to send a mad up once," sighed the old veteran, and he scooped all the morning papers and, drawing first a fine cigar case, wandered away to a quiet corner.

"I don't more than half like the looks of this thing on Sable River," said Gibbon, Terry, Custer, all in the field. Well, there could be no reason for the lack words of the cablegram were: "Come home. Shall go to Fair Oaks when this reaches you. Love. Harold tells all's ring."

"Hello, Dunsford, you're a mad up once," sighed the old veteran, and he scooped all the morning papers and, drawing first a fine cigar case, wandered away to a quiet corner.

FIVE CHILDREN LEFT.

MOTHER DIED OF CONSUMPTION AND ONE LITTLE GIRL IS NOW AT GRAVENHURST.

A short time ago a woman in the advanced stages of tuberculosis died in her own home. By her death five little ones were left without the care of their mother. There was money enough in the family to make some provision for the care of the children, but it was almost impossible to secure any one who would render this service, so afraid are many people of this dread disease. A visitor in the home says that time and time again she had found the baby sleeping in her sick mother's bed, and near by food was stored from which the children ate. A sequel is revealed in the fact that to-day one of these five children is a patient in Gravenhurst, and the baby is in the children's ward at the Toronto Free Hospital for Consumptives.

It is for the cure of such sufferers as these that the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives has been built. The tax on the accommodation is heavy, and the Trustees have only been able to make the large extensions of the present year by borrowing heavily from the bank. An appeal is now made for help to help on this work and provide a place where children, such as are referred to here, may find a home with good possibilities of cure.

Contributions may be sent to W. J. Gage, Esq., Chairman Executive Committee, 84 Spadina avenue, or Sec.-Treas. National Sanitarium Association, 347 King St. W., Toronto.

The Muskoka Free Hospital accepts patients from any part of the Dominion, and not a single patient has ever been refused because of poverty.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

If some captains of industry were to preach what they practice they might be in danger of losing their jobs on Sunday school superintendents.

A man likes to have his wife always dressed ready to go out with him whenever he asks her, but he expects three square meals a day just the same.

Giving advice is an excellent thing. It affords the giver much satisfaction and frequently amuses the recipient.

Nothing makes a man more righteously indignant than to be accused of doing a thing that he hasn't yet found time to perpetrate.

The man who declares that boldness would cease if people had more sand to resist the marauders finds it convenient to snore loudly if he hears a strange noise downstairs after midnight.

Many a man has started in life with 15 cents and has died with as much as $14 to his credit.

A Woman's Reason.

"Are you fond of boating, Miss Ethel?"

"I should say I am."

"What do you like best about it?"

"Even me."
"My dearest little footsie wootsie you never will be old."

"How generous you are!"
"Have you noticed it?"
"Yes. How does it happen?"
"Bob is paying the expenses."

THE FORTUNE HUNTER.

A Scheme That Brought a Surprise to Alicia.

By CLINTON DANGERFIELD.

"Do you mind telling me," I said, looking in open wonder at Alicia's calico gown and rural hat, "what you are wearing that getup for?"

"Doesn't it seem suitable to a farmhouse in the country?" she inquired, with obvious satisfaction in her costume.

"I can't see why white lawny stuff, with embroidery and things, the kind you usually wear, wouldn't be quite as unostentatious," I said discontentedly.

Alicia leaned near to me. Really she ought not to put that kissable mouth of hers so close to even a married man. Then she whispered dramatically:

"I'm poor. I've lost every cent."

"What?" I cried, aghast. Alicia is not fitted for poverty.

"Sh! Not truly, you know. I'm making believe. I want to meet a few men and know they are not fortune hunters."

"Humanity is more decent than you usually suppose it," I said dryly. "There are a few ripping good young fellows in our own set, untainted by self-seeking, though that guardian aunt of yours won't let you believe it."

"Well, but here," said Alicia, with such satisfaction that I knew at once some one was on the tapis—"here one can be absolutely sure."

"Whom have you met?" I asked sternly.

"No one," said Alicia disdainfully. But the next moment she blushed rosily as a doll, and browned young man came slowly up the wide steps of the piazza. A red handkerchief knotted around his columnar throat and a wide hat sat slightly atilt gave a picturesque finish to him. I am bound to admit he looked interesting.

"Mr. Roberts," said Alicia, "I want to have you meet my friend Mr. Hamlin Johnson. His wife comes out to board here next week."

"You are down to have a look at the lay of our country?" suggested Roberts, holding out a strong tanned hand and nearly smashing mine in it.

As he spoke Alicia vanished. She returned immediately with a huge pan of green peas and, seating herself on the step, began shelling them as industriously as though her future depended on it. Roberts promptly joined her, while I disconsolately dropped into Alicia's hammock. Alicia was too utterly unlikely her bored and ensuled self. She laughed now in low ripples and then lifted the shining eyes of a child to Roberts' earnest and altogether too handsome face. It would never do, I told myself, to permit Alicia to know herself easy on an uncongenial rustic.

For the next two days I criticised Roberts decently to myself. I could not but admit that he was manly, that he seemed capable of taking on polish and that his grammar, while not of the best the made breaks occasionally, was reasonably good. He openly and frankly adored Alicia, who proudly aloof her poverty and exulted in her captivation of a man who must indeed love her for herself alone.

But I could not bear the thought of it all. At last, for I saw matters were approaching a climax, I determined to appeal to Roberts' generosity.

I got him off on a day's fishing, and as we came homeward I prepared my appeal. I led the conversation up to marriage by beginning to talk of home. Yes; his father and mother were living, he said. Yes; the old folks did miss him, but he got an extra good chance to get a job with Farmer Kelleter, and he guessed they could stand it awhile longer.

"I suppose," I said bravely, "that some day you will be thinking of marriage, just as they did once."

He shot a peculiar glance at me.

"And when you do marry," I pursued, "of course you want everything fair and aboveboard. You want no chance for ill feeling or mischief makers to creep between you and your wife because there was any misapprehension at the beginning."

He turned red under his tan.

"Misapprehension? How could there be? What do you mean anyway?"

The guilty look on his face gave me a sudden insight into the matter. Alas, poor Alicia! This innocent rustic lover belonged to the very class of men she most abhorred. He knew who she was, and he had deliberately let her play her poor little play before him.

"You know who Miss Alicia Gordon is?"

"Yes. I do," he answered doggedly. "She is Alicia Van Anderson, the heiress and society woman."

"And, knowing this as you do," I said, bursting with natural indignation, "you dare to let yourself make love to her, to let her believe you honest."

"I told myself honest," he returned quietly.

"A mill cannot be considered honest," I said sternly, "who courts a woman under false pretenses. You are letting Miss Van Anderson think that you love her for herself alone."

"And you would argue that I love her for her money?" he said in a tone of bitter sarcasm.

"It looks that way," I retorted angrily. "I mean to let her know the whole truth unless you have good sense and manhood enough to quietly withdraw. You don't want that ugly name 'fortune hunter' applied to you, do you?"

"No; I don't want that applied to me," said Roberts, punching holes in the moss with his rod, for we had got so near the house that by mutual consent we had seated ourselves on a log for our discussion, "especially as I have asked Alicia to marry me, and she said she would give me her answer tonight."

"She will give it to you now?" cried a clear voice, and Alicia's own hand parted the bushes near us. "Oh, I know it's contemptible to listen, but when your whole happiness depends on it—"

A little sob choked her sentence. We both sprung up and stood staring at her—Roberts with a yearning intentness of gaze, I hopefully.

"I certainly trust," he said slowly, taking off his hat and standing bareheaded in the sunset rays, "that nothing I have done, Alicia—"

"Miss Van Anderson," henceforth," she said significantly and scornfully.

"That nothing I have done, Miss Van Anderson—"

"Is it nothing," cried the girl, "to find that you have been deceiving me all along; that you wanted the heiress, not me? If only you had come to me and said, 'Alicia, I know about your wretched money, but I mean to marry you in spite of it,' then I should have respected you. But you preferred to have me think you took me for a simple country girl."

To my intense surprise Roberts coolly and audaciously caught both her hands in his, fixing a magnetic gaze full on her face.

"Alicia," he said slowly, "God pity you if you let your life you have proved how suspicious a thing it can be. That horrible taint, suspicion, blackens your whole world. And I, God pity me, too, I can understand how hard you has been soiled by this. I can pity, forgive and love you."

"Love me!" cried the girl. "Why you've said you love coolly. "I am Robert Castleton, and my fortune, dear child, is double all you can count."

We both stood out in amazement. Loosing Alicia, he drew out from an inner pocket a locket set round with rubies and, pressing the spring, showed us an exquisite face, which I recognized at once. "My mother," he said simply. "And here are letters, and of course I can offer you all the proofs you want by cablegram—"

"But how on earth"—I stammered.

"To be frank," said Robert Castleton composedly, "I was sick of being hunted down by designing women who wanted me for their only daughters or for themselves. If I hadn't seen Alicia once at the opera she would have deceived me as completely as I did her."

His simple, straightforward manner, the casting off of every shred of the rustic as he talked, convinced me wholly. I burst into a fit of ringing laughter.

"Lord, this is good," I choked—"you two flying from the fortune hunters and then making what will prove the match of the season!"

I turned away, laughing still. A turn of the road showed me on glancing sideways Alicia's pretty head reposing on the fortune hunter's breast.

Nature as a Dent'st.

A curious tale of a gold filled tooth being found in the jaw of a prehistoric mastodon is told in "Gold Diggings of Cape Horn," by John H. Spears, who recounts the story from a South American miner:

"This miner, searching for gold along the coast, found in an earth bank a fossil which proved to be a part of a mastodon's jaw, with two teeth in place. The bone was in such a decayed condition that the finder was about to throw it away when his eye fell on a crack in the top and side of one of the teeth. The cavity thus formed was filled with a foreign substance, to which the miner applied his knife and found, to his astonishment, that it was pure gold. The explanation of the curious discovery is probably as follows: The gold, contained in fluids down quartz, was washed into the cavity by the action of water, deposited there and the fine grains united to form a nugget. The old bone simply happened to be lying in the track of the silt. The piece of gold thus formed weighed about eight grams."

The Earliest Surgeons.

Surgery is said to be older than medicine, and probably, in its simplest forms, is to be as old as human need for it. Skulls of the neolithic period give evidence that the operation of trepanning was then practiced.

The Hindu surgeon Susruta, who lived several centuries before Christ, had more than a hundred different sorts of surgical instruments, and there is abundant proof that his countrymen were skilled in amputation, lithotomy and operations for hernia. Susruta set rules for removing lost ears and noses.

Hippocrates, who lived 400 B. C., was a skillful surgeon, and discoveries by Ebers and others in Egypt prove that the ancient Egyptians practiced surgery with suitable instruments nearly 6,000 years ago.

Among the six hermetic books of medicine mentioned by Clement of Alexandria was one devoted to surgical instruments. The Greeks are thought to have learned the Hindu methods, and the Romans were skilled in surgery.

GETS CHILLY WELCOME

Gilbert Is Introduced by Monk in Dominion House.

Nationalist Member for Drummond-Arthabaska Takes His Seat, But All the Occupants of the Front Benches Give Busy Looking at Something or Other—Dr. Sproule Participates In Debate on Speech.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—An incident unique in Parliamentary practice, and quite without precedent in the history of the House of Commons, occurred yesterday afternoon when Arthur Gilbert, Nationalist member for Drummond and Arthabaska, was introduced to Mr. Speaker. Speculation as to why would escort Mr. Gilbert to the House was relieved when F. D. Monk (Jacques Cartier) and Dr. Kaspe Paquet (L'Islet) retired from the chamber before the orders of the day were called.

Amid a silence more ominous than Macdonald Mr. Gilbert shook hands with the Speaker, and proceeded silently to his seat on the back row farthest from Mr. Speaker. If Mr. Gilbert was welcome, nobody tried to make him feel so. There was no cheer for him, and it is significant to note that the occupants of front seats on both sides of the House found it convenient to be otherwise engaged while this interlude ceremony was in progress. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Borden found something interesting in the memoranda on their desks. George E. Foster was in a book study, but pulled well over his eyes, and Hon. Wm. Paterson seemed to be counting squares on the ceiling. The Nationalist, if there were any, were not conspicuous by their presence or demonstration. P. E. Blondin, J. A. Lortie and W. B. Nantel, the three followers of Mr. Monk, were not in the House.

Apart from the introduction of Mr. Gilbert, member for Drummond and Arthabaska, the feature of yesterday's sitting of the House of Commons on the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, was Hon. Wm. Pugsley's vigorous, unsparing on the position of the Conservative party in the light of Mr. Borden's amendment offered in lieu of that by Mr. Monk. Mr. Paterson persistently asked the question, when the Conservative party was anxious for an immediate contribution to the imperial navy a year ago, why did hon. members present a change of front now and urge the delay consequent upon an appeal to the country. He suggested it was due to the influence of Mr. Monk upon that party.

Mr. Borden, he said, had suggested to the Prime Minister the insertion before the word "organization" of some such word as "immediate" or "early" in the original resolution. The Prime Minister acceded to this view, and the word "speedy" was inserted.

Continuing, his voice increasing in volume and raising in pitch, the Minister of Customs, said: "Mr. Borden made a suggestion and wanted one word inserted, that would indicate that there was to act promptly. Now the whole tone of the Opposition is, not to go into the creation of a navy; ask the people."

In conclusion, he said, that if the Government would build a Canadian navy in close co-operation with the Admiralty the Conservative party would endorse it.

On resuming after recess, Mr. Paterson asked what position would Canada occupy if the matter of naval organization were stayed until a general election. Hon. gentlemen opposite, repeating the need for immediate action last year, were in favor of making a gift of $25,000,000 to the Mother Country. Now they do not propose that anything should be done in the matter of self-defence at all.

"Is it because the member for Jacques Cartier, (J. D. Monk), whom they tried to read out of the party, is in the party, and has assumed the leadership?" (Liberal cheers.) Dr. Sproule (East Grey) declared there was an absolute need for a plebiscite or reference to the people on the naval question, and described the Government's attitude as "arbitrary, autocratic, tyrannical, and out of harmony with the principles of constitutional government, as known and carried out by the Imperial Parliaments and the colonial dependencies of the Empire."

He considered the Government for its apathetic policy towards the Hudson Bay Railway. The construction of a bridge across the Saskatchewan River at the Pas Mission was poor management because it was a bad, known whether a bridge at that point would serve the railway when located.

Furthermore, if the Government make better progress with that bridge than it had done with the Quebec bridge, it was inclined to sympathize with the people of the west.

Discussing the fiscal situation, Dr. Sproule charged the Government with being without a policy in the fiscal kind. The feeling of the country, he asserted, was totally against reciprocity, and there was no mandate from the people to warrant the Government entering into negotiations.

Further, he chided the Government with not being able to take a licking like good sports. The verdict in Drummond and Arthabaska had not satisfied them. He argued that there was no greater sinner in Canada to-day than the Minister of Marine and Fisheries in raising the race cry. On the same issue the Government would be beaten in seven out of ten constituencies in Canada.

George W. Kyle (Liberal) Richard Blain (Conservative) and D. B. Neeley (Liberal) also spoke.

W. S. Northrop (East Hastings) moved the adjournment.

Dr. Schaffner, one of the Conservative members from Manitoba, has given notice of the following resolution: "That the present system of operating terminal and transfer elevators is detrimental to the interests of the western grain producers, and that the Government should take immediate steps to have the terminal elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur, and the transfer elevators between these terminals and the Atlantic seaboard."

Mr. Armstrong, the Conservative member for East Lambton, will ask if the Government has done anything to put a stop to the use of the mails for the furtherance of "get-rich-quick" schemes, such as Sheldon's, and enquiries further if the Government has taken any effort to prosecute the guilty parties.

Dr. Black (Haute, N.S.) introduced a bill to amend the Medical Act. He explained that it contained a provision of more than ordinary importance, viz., the giving in the federal laws an enactment giving to a medical practitioner qualified to practice in any Canadian province the right to practice in any other province.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux explained that the public accounts committee would be organized later than the committee of agriculture and industry of Canada, and thereby to the City of Montreal would secure immense advantage, be it recalled that the Parliament of Canada be required to carry out the essential national enterprise with the shortest possible delay.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Three more jail guards at Montreal have been suspended as the result of the investigation into the traffic in cocaine to prisoners.

Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, yesterday celebrated his 50th birthday anniversary, and received many telegrams of congratulations.

It is rumored that Gen. D. G. Macdonald, quartermaster-general of the Canadian militia, will shortly retire on pension and be succeeded by Col. J. L. Biggar.

The Dominion Government has completed the plans for the new Plaza Lesarie, Ottawa, which will form a beautiful square of the Sappers and Dufferin Bridges and the now vacant space between them. The cost will be the neighborhood of $100,000.

Wholesale Thievery in House.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—Wholesale thefts of dozen towels were stolen from the Parliament buildings while the House was in session last year, was the statement made yesterday. The wholesale thievery of brushes, combs, towels, handbags, rubbers, walking canes, pocket knives, soap, and a host of other articles have been going on for years, but it has not assumed gigantic proportions.

Brisk sales have been disappearing from the Government cupboards with confident regularity. Street car tickets and odd change have been taken from coat pockets, the drawers of desks have been ransacked, and pens, pencils, tobacco, pipes, and cigars abstracted.

One day during the recess an individual who had been employed there by sergeant-at-arms to remain outside the precincts of the Parliament buildings, was discovered by a newspaper correspondent in one of the lobbies, carrying off a grip, plainly containing some valuable papers.

Nothing escaped in the shape of attempt to stop the petty thievery could be observed. The Dominion police patrol the lobbies, but they cannot see what is going on inside the rooms.

Will Be Rigid.

Newark, N.J., Nov. 29.—"If I find my city or any official guilty of negligence in the inspection of this building," said Prosecutor of County Colgate yesterday, as he stood by the ruins of the factory where 24 girls lost their lives by fire last Saturday, "there will be the bitterest sort of prosecution."

Accordingly, a coroner's jury of six was sworn in, the first of its kind that has sat here in twenty years. There will also be separate enquiries by the grand jury, which visited the scene yesterday; by the State Labor Department, and the city building department.

Funeral of many of the victims were held yesterday afternoon. Most of the girls and women killed were supporting their families, in a few cases the whole. One woman left a blind daughter almost penniless, and there is much actual want in other households. A relief fund, started Sunday, has now reached $2,000.

Goulin Joins Pelletier.

Fort Monroe, Va., Nov. 29.—Sir Lomer Gouin, Prime Minister and Attorney-General of Quebec, and J. T. Gillahey of Montreal, arrived here yesterday to join Sir Charles A. Pelletier, who is here for the benefit of his health. All will remain here for a month. Lieut.-Col. D. O. Cowley, U.S.A., commandant of Fortress Monroe, made an official visit to the Canadian visitors.

Walked Off Breakwater.

Port Elgin, Nov. 29.—A sudden death occurred on Saturday night, when Rev. Conrad Bollender ended his life by walking off the breakwater and drowning. About noon on Sunday the body was found in the standing position on the harbor side. Rev. Mr. Bollender was in his 74th year, and had been for years a minister of the Evangelical Association, although retired for the past few years.

A Male Suffragette.

London, Nov. 29.—H. A. Franklin, the male suffragist who attempted to assault Mr. Churchill, while the Home Secretary was returning to London after a speech at Bradford on Saturday night, was arraigned in Bow street police court yesterday and remanded for one week. He refused. Franklin is a nephew of Postmaster-General Samuel.

Trunk Murder Mystery.

New York, Nov. 29.—A new clue was given the trunk-murder mystery yesterday by statements in Chicago, who declared that Albert Collier, the supposed victim, was seen alive in 1905, three years after the crime was supposed to have been committed.

The trunk containing the body, recently found in a tenement basement, is declared to have been left there in 1902, by William Lewis, waiter, for whom a widespread search is now progressing. The investigation of the mysterious crime is turning to-day largely in the direction of enquiry to put a stop to the use of the mails for the furtherance of "get-rich-quick" schemes, such as Sheldon's, and enquiries further if the Government has taken any effort to prosecute the guilty parties.

Dr. Black (Haute, N.S.) introduced a bill to amend the Medical Act. On Trial for Murder.

Cambridge, Miss., Nov. 29.—A girl just seventeen years old, Miss Estelle Le Blanc, will be tried in the Middlesex County Superior Criminal Court next week on the murder charge at Waltham, Nov. 20, 1909, of her employer, Clarence F. Glover. The little French-Canadian girl is the youngest of her sex ever tried for first degree murder in the annals of the Massachusetts courts. Her aged father has come from his home in New Archiat, Cape Breton, to aid his daughter.

The Struggle Bitter.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—Further bitterness has been introduced into the struggle between the two political parties here by the fact that the Government has commenced R. L. Borden's speech last Thursday deported from the usual Parliamentary territory of detailing the Premier or a Minister of the crown to follow the leader of the Opposition, and instead put on H. H. Miller of South Grey. This is a slap, and a bout of other articles have been going on for years, but it has not assumed gigantic proportions.

Bribes have been disappearing from the Government cupboards with confident regularity. Street car tickets and odd change have been taken from coat pockets, the drawers of desks have been ransacked, and pens, pencils, tobacco, pipes, and cigars abstracted.

Ottawa Citizens Object to Home Rule in Ireland.

Meeting Held in Belfast and on Motion of a Presbyterian Minister a Declaration Is Drawn Up and 100,000 Subscribed to Purchase Arms Rather Submit to an Irish Parliament—House Dissolved.

London, Nov. 29.—With the dissolution of Parliament yesterday all formalities preliminary to the election of a new Parliament were completed. The proclamation at dissolution summoned the new Parliament to assemble on Jan. 31, 1911.

Among the first of its members to be elected unopposed will be Arthur J. Balfour, the Opposition leader, the Liberals having decided not to contest his seat in the City of London. On the Stock Exchange, where regular dealings have been instituted in bets on the election, the feeling yesterday seemed to indicate a reduction in the Liberal majority.

In Ireland the struggle is growing more bitter every day. The number of delegates representing every Ulster county meeting was doubled at the last yesterday, at which a resolution was adopted declaring that a Protestant minister, to draw up a solemn declaration pledging the signatories to resist imposed by a Dublin Parliament, or obey its decrees, while $50,000 was subscribed on the spot to organize the Ulster men into regiments and purchase arms.

At night a monster union demonstration was held at Ulster Hall, Belfast, an overflow meeting of 20,000 people being held in the open air. Both aroused the greatest enthusiasm. Lord Londonderry declared that Ulster was enabled by Premier Redmond to hold issouth in the hollow of his hand. A home rule Parliament were established, he said, it might be found that Ulster would utterly decline obedience to the law. Sir Edward Carson, former Solicitor-General, now Conservative M.P. for Dublin University, said they never would submit to their country being sold for American dollars. Walter Runciman, Unionist, M.P. for Strand, spoke in the same strain, and Lord Castlereagh declared his resistance to the law, if home rule was forced upon Ulster.

The first independent woman suffrage candidate is announced in the person of Mrs. Kenneth Mitchell, of Mirfield, who will contest a division of Glasgow. Mrs. Mitchell yesterday decided to run a third candidate in Dundee, their sexagenarian champion John Burns' chance of re-election.

Yesterday's dissolution of Parliament brings to a crisis the political struggle now in progress to limit the veto power of the House of Lords, and thereby permit the election by a majority of Parliament, the House of Commons, to exert larger powers in effecting legislation, more particularly measures relating to Irish home rule and the financial budgets.

The House of Commons has a Ministerial majority of 124, and the present composition of the political strength is a follow: Liberals 275, Labor members 40, Nationalists 82, Independent Nationalists 11, Unionists 273.

Of the foregoing, the first four groups are generally counted as supporters of the Ministry, giving a Ministerial strength of 397, as against the Unionist strength of 273, or a net Ministerial majority of 124.

Arrest on Serious Charge.

Goderich, Nov. 29.—M. O. Johnston, a prominent lawyer of this town, was arrested Saturday on one of serious charges preferred by John Hunter, of Hullett. The arrest comes as a sequel to the story of the livery rig driven by Johnston on the night of the time of the Anderson murder investigation. Johnston kept the rig out till a late hour, and it is alleged that Mrs. Hummel was his companion. The other night Hummel came home from Vanscover and gave Johnston a severe beating, almost beating his head in the process. He threatened to kill Johnston if he ever dared get better, if he did not leave town. He was persuaded to let the law take its course.

Policeman Missing.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 29.—Strangely missing since Sunday morning, the disappearance of Policeman Charles Bonner yesterday created a sensation here when it became known. Brown returned home from duty, P. C. Bonner changed his clothes and left the house without breathing a word. He is known by Brown's disappearance. He has spent many years on the force, and was once been on the carpet. He has a wife and three small children.

Deserted by Bandit.

Tampico, Mexico, Nov. 29.—Miss Grace Holt, the 17-year-old Nebraska girl who disappeared from a ranch near Tampico several weeks ago in company with Sidney Ellen, a well noted bandit, has been found and taken home. She claims she suffered indignities at the hands of the bandit and was almost exhausted from the hardships and exposure when found. Miss Holt was found Saturday afternoon, fifty miles inland from Tampico, deserted.

Small Boy Suicide?

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 29.—Conductor Thomas Brocow of the Scenic Belt Line, declared he saw a small boy wade into the whirlpool rapids and go to his death. He says as the waves swept over his head he waved a last farewell. No missing boy has been discovered. No one else has reported having seen the occurrence.

City Clerk Authorized To Prepare By Law For Pavement Construction

Council, in Session Last Evening, Transacts Many Important Matters—Insurance on The Gas House —By-Laws Introduced—C, N, R. Bridge Matter Sidetracted

At the Council meeting last evening considerable business, chiefly of a routine nature, was transacted.

Those present were Mayor Marsh, Ald. Woodley, Fairfield, Bogle, Robinson, Wallace, Adams, Chown, Parks, Wallbridge, Knox, Canning, Sills, Vermilyea and Carlaw.

After the reading and confirming of the minutes of the last meeting the Council went into Committee of the Whole on Reports, Communications, etc., Ald. Fairfield in the chair.

The reports of the various civic committees, as already published, were first taken up and passed.

Mr. H. F. Ketcheson was called up on and stated that before the new addition to the gas house be had the insurance upon that building, but the committee had for some reason given the insurance to another company. He thought he should have it.

Ald. Adams said that this matter had been left with him and Ald. Chown, and they had decided to give same to Mr. Hudson. Of the $91,000 insurance on city property the names of Messrs. Jamieson and Canning appear for $70,000.

Ald. Robinson thought Mr. Ketcheson should have this risk as a matter of fair play.

Ald. Adams was to enquiry Ald. Wallbridge said Mr. Hudson's rate was the same as Mr. Ketcheson's.

Ald. Adams said that this portion of insurance be placed with Mr. Hudson.

Ald. Wallbridge moved in amendment that this insurance be placed with Mr. Ketcheson.

Upon a vote being taken, it was a tie, and the chairman voted for the insurance being placed with Mr. Ketcheson.

The various recommendations of the committee were passed without discussion.

ACCOUNTS PASSED.

The following accounts were recommended to be passed;

R. J. Reid ..... $ 53.75
H. Cameron & Co. 618.00
Trenton Electric Co. 10.65
Goldfellows' Band 80.00
Mr. Craddock 10.00

A lengthy communication was read in reference to the visit of the Rail. Way Commissioners to the city on this (Tuesday) morning.

A motion passed that as many of the members of the Council as possible attend the meeting.

Ald. Carlaw contended that the Council should make itself busy during only three piers being built.

The Council took no action as to the number of piers.

A communication was read from Mr. W. C. Pearce, suggesting that Mr. R. S. Bell be employed to report to the city.

On motion, no action was taken in the matter.

Mr. B. Mallory, County Treasurer, wrote the Council claiming, on behalf of the county, $23 as accrued interest from the date of agreement.

Mayor Marsh said there had been considerable discussion on this matter and he would be in favor of filing the communication and saying no attention to it.

A motion to file the account was passed.

The Women's Christian Association wrote the Council for the loan of tents in the isolated hospital for use in the burning of the hospital being built.

Referred to the Property Committee.

Mr. H. Carby wrote the Council, suggesting that the motion passed by that board in regard to guaranteeing the interest of the Hospital bond should be endorsed by a by-law submitted to the ratepayers for their approval. Referred to the Executive Committee.

Mr. T. Carr claimed damages from the city to the extent of $300 owing to the city building a granolithic walk in front of his house which caused water to back up in his cellar. The water was not only causing inconvenience, but was endangering the health of his family.

Ald. Lott said that the Public Works Committee had considered this matter and it would no doubt be made right.

A petition was presented for a light on the corner of Brown and Mill Streets.

Referred to the chairman of Light, with power to act.

A communication was read from Mr. F. Wright re a write-up of the city in a weekly publication.

Mr. Wright, who was present, addressed the Council and said that his proposition had been accepted conditionally by the Publicity Committee. He had carried out his part of the contract. No action was taken.

COST OF DEPUTATION TRIPS.

City Treasurer Price presented a statement showing that the cost of deputations for the past season were as follows:

Picton trip	$ 53.85
Toronto trip, W. C. Mikel	19.00
Permanent improvement deputation	100.00
Total	$174.85

Ald. Lott—The permanent improvement deputation cost more than that."

Mayor Marsh—There is a mistake, as it cost $118.50."

The report was received and filed.

Mr. F. D. Diamond, tax collector, presented a statement showing what taxes had been collected the past two weeks and the balances for two years. It was as follows:

	Collected.	Balance.
1908	$100.06	$1,290.04
1909	377.31	1,873.80
1910	306.66

Received and ordered to be filed.

The committee rose and reported.

Ald. Lott moved, in amendment, that the report be not adopted, but be referred back to reconsider the matter of giving the insurance on gas works to Mr. Ketcheson.

The amendment was defeated and the report adopted.

INTRODUCTION OF BY-LAWS.

Ald. Vermilyea introduced two by-laws, namely a by-law to ratify an agreement between the city and Thos. Manley re construction of the Front Street sewer and a by-law to amend By-law No. 1022 regulating the Water Works Department as to water rates being charged.

The Council went into Committee of the Whole on By-Laws, Ald. Bogle in the chair. These by-laws were passed through their various stages and numbered respectively 1013 and 1014.

MOTIONS.

Ald. Wallace moved, seconded by Ald. Adams, that the City Solicitor be instructed to prepare a by-law under Section 667 of the Statutes for the construction of a permanent pavement on Front Street from the upper bridge to No. 1 fire hall, same to be presented at the next meeting of the Council.

Under the section of the Statutes above referred to the pavement can be built and the entire cost charged to the ratepayers on Front Street.

The motion was adopted.

Ald. Wallace moved, seconded by Ald. Adams that the Market and City Property Committee have power to accept tenders for plumbing and heating in the old meat market building which is being remodelled.—Carried.

Ald. Wallbridge moved, seconded by Ald. Carlaw that the Gas Department hereafter be not charged more than $500 per month for use of the City Treasurer's salary.

Ald. Wallbridge contended that all the Treasurer did was to sign checks for the department and this was ample for the work done. It was not fair that the Gas Department should pay $100 of his salary.

The motion was adopted.

Ald. Wallbridge moved, seconded by Ald. Carlaw, that after January 1st the Gas Department be not asked to pay any part of the City Solicitor's salary.

The motion was adopted.

Ald. Lott moved, seconded by Ald. Chown, that the Market and City Property Committee be empowered to procure proper coils for the new police station.—Carried.

Council adjourned.

HAND BAG FASHIONS.

Exclusive Novelties That Are Expensive, Though Smart.

A fitted bag for week ends is of seal leather, with self overhanging flap frame ten inches wide. It is equipped with a leather pocketbook and seven toilet and manicure articles. The lining is of red leather, and the frame is in rose or green gold, with burnished metal pieces.

Very exclusive is a little bag of blue cross grain saffian leather with a frame of imitation ivory and a lining of blue moire. It has duplicate strap handles and the equipment of change purse, cardcase and combined powder puff pocket and bevel mirror. There is a novelty unbreakable clasp.

Another bag is of dark green moreco also inches wide, boasting a mother-of-pearl frame held on by green bands. The lining is gray calf skin with a change purse, a powder puff pocket and a mirror. The handle is so made as to fall flat against the bag when folded down.

The shirt waist made with full fronts is one that is much liked by the younger contingent, and here is a model that can be made with or without the back yoke. The style is a modish one for flannel as well as for linen and cotton materials.

An engaging woman is not necessarily engaged frequently.

The first cold storage warehouse in the modern acceptance of the term was opened in Chicago in 1889.

VISTAS OF LA MODE.

The Bell Shaped Hat Is Popular. Waistcoats Are In.

Some of the smartest hats of the smallest type are the rockre models, very reminiscent of the mushroom hats with a decided bell shape. They are felt, very fine, and are trimmed with ribbon bows at the back or with plumes and wings.

Waistcoats are brightening up many of the black or dark colored walking costumes. Moire in some suitable shade and Japanese embroidery, cloth and old brocade are smart.

While many girls cling to the comfort of the Tuxy collar, the up to date girl will adopt the pretty, narrow turnover embroidered linen collars, such as were worn by our grandmothers. This no doubt will create a call for the large speeches of bone days.

Quite a few of the imported skirts have the habit back, which is an indication that the once popular style will soon be in vogue again.

Many of the utility coats show raglan sleeves, but for the regular street garment the plain tailored sleeve is the smart thing.

Tailored shirt waists are always needed. This one can be made in a variety of ways. With the tucked fronts and strapped shoulder seams it is adapted to linen and heavy wash materials, but made with gathered fronts, the softer and thinner fabrics are more appropriate.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes from 34 to 42 inches bust measure. Send 15 cents to this office, giving number, 6774, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage, which insures more prompt delivery.

A LEGAL DILEMMA

Tangle of Red Tape In an English Extradition Case.

GETTING AROUND THE LAW.

Only the Quick Wit of the Canadian Police Inspector Kept a Notorious Criminal in Custody When in Reality He Was as Free as the Air.

The manner in which a prisoner extradited to England from a foreign country can escape while on the voyage home depends very much on the detective who has him in charge and whether or not there is any suspicion that he may be contemplating violence either to himself or to others.

For instance, in the case of Jabez Balfour, who was taken to England all the way from Buenos Aires, there was a strong suspicion—probably ill founded—that he contemplated committing suicide. Consequently Inspector Froest, who had him in charge, decided to take no risks that he could possibly avoid."

The regulations do not permit of an unconvicted prisoner being handcuffed on board ship once the vessel has left port, but he must be allowed one hour's exercise on deck each day. These indulgences, if indulgences they can be called, were therefore not withheld from Balfour.

But he got few others. For twenty-three hours out of every twenty-four he was immured in a locked cabin. He was not permitted even to enter the public dining room, his meals being brought to him by Mr. Froest himself after the rest of the passengers had fed. He was, besides, constantly watched and was subjected to a most rigorous search immediately on coming aboard.

His only relaxation was an occasional game of chess with some of the passengers who kindly came to his cabin to play with him by permission

SNAPSHOTS OF THE MODE.

Bokhara Red and Magyar Green Are New and Smart Colors.

Among the new colors is Bokhara, a red of depth and richness and yet with an eastern touch of pink in it. Then there is Magyar, a blue green shade, what steely and unlike the greens that have preceded it. Blue greens and wedgewood greens are shown in all the new materials.

THE GIRL'S SCHOOL DRESS.

A favorite combination seen in the fur store is nasturtium and silken ermine. The satin is lined with the white fur, which is then form over to frame in the large fat muff.

Nothing could be smarter than the kiss piece velutine frock which the shops are now showing in navy blue, olive green and brown shades. They are fashioned with empire waist, modified bobbie skirt, kimono sleeves and fasten down the side with self covered buttons. A collar of good lace, usually in cream tone, lends a brightening touch.

Simple dresses with this cut are always needed, and every one and every design finds a place. The skirt is straight and plaited, and the waist is noted and smart.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

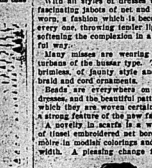
FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

Square Cut For Yokes—Jabots Just As Much in Favor as Ever.



Round yokes or neck lines are plentifully seen, but the latest waists have the square cut at the lower edge of the yoke or neck.

With all styles he dresses the most fascinating jabots of net and lace are worn, a fashion which is becoming to every one, throwing tender lights and softening the complexion in a wonderful way.

Many misses are wearing military turbans of the busier type. They are brimless, of fancy style and looped braid and cord ornaments.

Beads are everywhere on evening dresses, and the beautiful patterns into which they are woven certainly make a strong feature of the new fashions.

A novelty in scarfs is a wide strip of tissel embroidered set bordered by chiffon in medial colorings and of such width. A pleasing change from the silver or gold spangled scarf is one of black chiffon cloth thickly covered with sequins in dull blue.

The waist that gives a surplice effect is pretty in any one and so charming that it is a general favorite. Individual fancy can evolve the model waist in a number of ways, and the materials used are subjected merely to the whim of the wearer.

VOGUE VAGARIES.

Shoes Now Have Collars—Long Fur Coats Will Be Popular Wraps.

Shoes with collars are a novelty of the season. Around the top is a turnover piece of leather called a collar. This collar is tied together with cord and tassel, amusingly suggestive of a small necktie. The "collar" is usually of leather contrasting in color or kind with the shoe.

Long coats in coal and caracal are smart, and handsome imitations of these furs in cloth are made up on the same lines.

The use of three or four broad tucks at the lower part of the narrow skirt, breaking up the plain, deep hem effect, is popular.

Fur trims everything. Nothing is

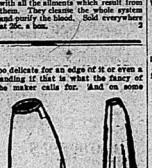
CURED OF CONSTIPATION

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.



Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never seems quite handled, and I have been a victim to the many remedies that constipation brings in its train. Before using I have tried almost in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would do more than set me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I found it in Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

"They have worked a lucky day for me for I was so impressed with the statements I made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

"They have regulated my system and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box. 2 gowns these bands of fur are veiled with net or chiffon. Sable is most used for the veiling than colors.

Double breasted coats are always popular for girls. And in a rough tweed these models are very smart this season.

The narrow circular skirt is one of the smartest of the season. This one is fitted by means of one dart at each side and can be made with or without a seam at front, so that it is adapted to narrow as well as wide materials. The back can be finished in habit or with inverted plaits.

MEANS VOTES FOR BALFOUR

Referendum Policy of Unionists Already Gaining Supporters

A FORECAST

Another Parliament Probably Which Will Leave Big Questions Uncolved

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 30.—It was stated in independent sources this morning that the announcement by A. J. Balfour, leader of the Unionists, that they would consent to a referendum policy on tariff reform, should greatly increase the Opposition's chances in the present campaign. This removes one of the Liberal's best planks for getting votes in Scotland and North England, where protection is in disfavor to a great extent.

Already the effect of the Unionist taking th's stand is evidenced. This morning Mr. Balfour and some supporters addressed workmen's meetings at lunch time in constituencies known to be strongly free trade. They were given a great and apparently a sincere reception.

It is now almost purely a question or throttling the House of Lords, and even in Liberal ports of England there is an undercurrent of feeling that it is unbecoming traditions to make the Upper House the mere puppet of the Commons.

Perhaps the situation is best expressed by a statement that the outlook is for a new Parliament that will muddle along another year and again appeal to the country, leaving the big questions still unsolved.

Dr. Cook Confesses He Didn't Discover Top of The World

Pleads Not To Branded As A Liar But To Be Thought of As Being Merely Mistaken--Leading a Quiet Life In London.

(Intelligencer Special.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Dr. Frederick Cook has come out of his shell and made what is tantamount to a confession that he didn't discover the North Pole after all. Hemp'on's Magazine which published Peary's great story has discovered him in London and elicited the statement from Cook that he may have been crazed by his privations in the Arctic and made mistakes in his bearings. He pleads that he be not branded as a liar, but that he was merely mistaken. With his family he inten is passing the rest of his life quietly

BRAKEMAN IS MAN WANTED

Mc Intosh Is Charged With Stealing $20,000 In Bank Bills.

LIVED IN TORONTO

Accused Believed To Have Gone Off in a Touring Car.

Toronto, Nov. 30.—A warrant has been sworn out by Superintendent Rogers of the provincial police for the arrest of Edward Ernest McIntosh, formerly a brakeman on the G.T.R., and residing at 48 Galley avenue. The charge is that he did steal the $20,000 in unsigned Traders' Bank bills of which $9,000 was found in a furnace flue of the house by a four-year-old child of the family that moved into the house three weeks ago.

McIntosh is 28 years of age, and, with his wife and one young child, lived in the house from the time of the robbery last year till Nov. 7. Then they disappeared, but it is known that McIntosh was in Belleville on Sunday with a Dundas touring car.

EDWARD M'INTOSH.

which it is believed he has since disposed of. The suite was a six cylinder touring car, with green body and seating seven persons.

What first directed suspicion against McIntosh is that he was known to have been investing heavily in real estate immediately before the disappearance of the bills. It is supposed a number of persons were involved in the robbery. For months the Galley avenue house has been watched, and the neighbors became aware of it. He is thus described: About 5 feet 6 inches in height, fair complexion, brown hair, weighs 160 pounds, prominent dimple in his chin, straight nose, and generally good looking.

CLARION NOTE IN FAVOR OF PREFERENCE SOUNDED

Right Honorable Joseph Chamberlain Issues Call To Electors--Reciprocal Trade Relations With The Overseas Dominions.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, in the course of an address to the electors of West Birmingham says: "It would be a misnomer to call the Colonial Conference powerless without winning one being able to come to an agreement which would establish reciprocal trade arrangements with the empire Dominions.

"A slight preference given the colonies on articles that they produce would secure, at least, equal concession from them as regards our manufactures and these material benefits ought to be considered by the Conference."

Speaking at Finsbury Wins on Churchill said if the electors returned the present government to power the result would be that the Veto Bill would be enforced in any and of the Parliament which would receive the consent of the sovereign.

Sir Edward Grey, speaking at Dudley, said that the Colonial Preference would be the most feeble and most aken notion the Unionists ever put before the country, as it would introduce discord.

Insurance is being effected at Lloyds to recover payment of claims should the Canuks, party be returned to power.

TRAINS BUMP, NO ONE HURT

(Intelligencer Special.)

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 30.—The engineer and fireman on No. 6 Grand Trunk train Sunday afternoon had a narrow escape when their train ran into a dead end freight near Gananoque, smashing their engine and tele-scoping the caboose. After reversing the engine, they jumped before the crash.

MYSTERIOUS MAN SUICIDES

BALTIMORE, Nov. 29.—By striking one end of the tube to a gas jet and placing the other end in his mouth, Alphonse N. Richard, 48 years of age, committed suicide. He came to this city from Toronto about five years ago, and his means appeared to be a man of mystery.

Mrs. Richard informed the police that her husband had never discussed his affairs with her nor his relations in Toronto, and that he had threatened to commit suicide. His body was discovered by Mrs. Richard in his room.

When Richard came to Baltimore he boarded at the home of Mrs. Clinedienst, who was a widow. Four years ago he married her, and for the past two years the couple have made their home at 109 St. Paul street. Mrs. Richard said today that she had of en seen her husband brooding over some apparent trouble, and when she asked him what worried him he replied that he did not know. Richard let nothing to explain his act. Burial of the body will probably be made here unless word comes from Canada.

SHEARER TO TESTIFY AT WINNIPEG PROBE

WINNIPEG, Nov. 30.—The chief item of interest in the civ investigation before Mr. Justice Robson yesterday was the announcement that Dr. Shearer has consented to come to Winnipeg, having telegraphed from the sanitarium in which he is now resting at Clifton Springs, N. Y. He explains that he is under medical care, and was ordered to rest for a month, but is willing to come even at the risk of his life.

Judge Robson decided that it was most important that Dr. Shearer should attend.

CONVENT GIRL WHO RAN AWAY CAUGHT

WINDSOR, Nov. 29.—Miss Green and her companion, who escaped from St. Mary's Academy here, were located at Ionia, Mich., late last night, at the Calkins Hotel. They had registered as Irene and Mildred Simons, of St. John's. The hotel proprietor found the girls answered the newspaper descriptions and when he spoke to them they broke down and admitted their identity. Both canvasses were placed in charge of Mrs. Green's aunt. Mr. Green was overjoyed to find his daughter and says that she need not return to the convent.

NO HOPE LEFT FOR AMERICAN WOMAN DIVINE!

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—"Athletic work is making women flat chested, large waisted and small hipped. This is the figure of a man and is one reason why many artists doing work along classical lines find it difficult to obtain a model. A few more years of violent exercise and one more life will make women so masculine in figure that they will look ridiculous in women's attire."

These were the words spoken by W. Alexander, President of the National Academy of Design, supports the theory of Dr. Dudley A. Sargent, physical director at Harvard, who declared "that woman's physique has become revolutionized and already become like that of the other sex."

"In no other country in the world," Alexander says, "do you see such masculine figures as you do in America. In France woman is the personification of grace. In England woman is not so graceful, perhaps, but she has that motherly bearing that makes her a handsome that is not often found in our women. In England the gentleness and dignity of the women displays the slight suggestion of the masculine.

"Up to a certain point, outdoor life and development are excellent. They give the girl all that the women of this country have been distinguished for abroad—a free, easy carriage and an independence in movement and action that at once inspire confidence in her ability to meet a crisis.

Alexander and Sargent both declare that American women's feet are becoming larger. They also take charge openly, brazenly and in utter disregard

THREE DROWNED WHILE GOING TO DISABLED SHIP

(Intelligencer Special.)

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 30.—Andrew Harwood, James Boyce and Frank Lowe, all married men all of the Michigan Soo, were drowned at midnight, while going to the assistance of a disabled vessel in a terrific snow storm, in the tug General, which was rammed and sunk by the Canadian Pacific steamer Athabaska, which two years ago was stranded for days on Flower Pot Island. The rest of the crew of the General were rescued after much manoeuvring.

SAW EIGHTY-FIVE WOMEN IMBIBING

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 29.—As a part of the campaign to eliminate saloons from Des Moines, committees from the Citizens' Association last night "shadowed" every saloon in the city. In their report, which was read from every pulpit this morning, they claim that eighty-five women drank liquor in the saloons. The report shows that 12,933 entered the saloons between 8 o'clock and 10 o'clock that night.

WOODSTOCK BRIBERY CASE

Some Utility.
"Though money may not pleasure bring
And every trouble chase,
Still it's a mighty handy thing
To have about the place.
A dollar stuffed in a sock
And rubbed by two or three
Will soon bring you a clock
But it's as nice a friend in need
As you will fin across.

A quarter hidden in your jeans
Proves when you need not part
Don't mark you as a man of means,
But really it's a work of art.
And, adding slowly, it will grow—
A quarter and repeat—
Until you have a pile of dough
That speaks of Easy street.

Hold out a little here and there,
A nickel or a dime,
And you will be a millionaire
With chink to burn in time.
And when you get it you will find
That you can use the stuff
Nor will you ever be inclined
To think you have enough.

CURRENT EVENTS.

We understand that there is a committee consisting of His Worship the Mayor, the City Treasurer, and the chairman of the Executive to sell lots which have become vested in the city for non-payment of taxes. No report or statement has been made by this committee to the Council. It is desirable that a return be made SHOWING THE LOTS SOLD, TO WHOM, AND THE PRICE PAID. Let us have the fullest information in regard to these matters so that no inuendo may be unfairly made.

FOR MAYOR, ALD. H. W. ACKERMAN.

St. Andrew's Day!—Hail to the men of Scotland.

At all events winter seems to be doing its Christmas shopping early.

The merchant who advertises well before Christmas will get the biggest share of the early shoppers.

The English word "suffragette" has driven all other terms from the field of the political equality movement. It fits the case better than any rival word or phrase. Besides, it's English, you know.

The Public Works Department of the Council of 1910 is a department of this Council that the taxpayer in Belleville will have occasion to long remember. The expenditure, we are informed, will this year EXCEED THE SUM OF $115,000, and the end is not yet.

There ought to be a standard way of spelling the name of the lately dead, brassed, Russian novelist. Russian scholars seem to spell it Tolstoi, but news agencies have their spell Tolstoi. A and Y are substantially the same letter, barring the pronoun, and there should be a compromise on one of them.

Miss Irene Clayton, of Maryland, the Tom Moore, "dearly loved a lord" lass, has proved to be a pretender and then she divorced him, which was right and proper. A still better way would have been to test his title first. He called himself Lord Stanley, Duke of Aberdeen. The lady's brothers are looking for him, but he is missing from Maryland.

MARMORA CARRIES BY-LAW

Will Buy Electric Light Plant And Aid an Industry.

MARMORA, Ont., Nov. 30.—The result of voting here today on by-laws re Marmora village purchasing the Marmora Electric Light Co.'s plant, and also the granting to the Peavey Lumber Co., Ltd., a fixed assessment, was that both by-laws were carried by large majorities.

The State of New York, with its population, as shown by the census, of 9,113,275, shows an increase of 1,841,385. Two-thirds of the growth was in the counties of New York and Kings, including the boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn, of the city of New York. While this is the case the population in the agricultural districts has fallen off, showing the drift of the population is towards the cities. In Canada the result is the same, which is to be regretted, and which is realized when too late by those who leave the farm for the city.

Caught With Goods On Her at Napanee

Mary Gordon Charged With Stealing Furs from Wife of Proprietor of the Ontario House.

Last evening, at 8.30, Mr. Wm. Smith, proprietor of the Ontario House in this city, reported to the police that a valuable mink muff belonging to his wife had been taken out of her room. It was ascertained that a woman having in her possession a mink muff had boarded the evening train and gone eastward. Chief of Police Graham, of Napanee, was communicated with and within an hour had placed under arrest a woman named Mary Gordon, who had in her possession a muff answering the description of the one stolen. She had arrived in Napanee on the evening train from here.

Sergt. Harmon, of the local force, was this morning sent to Napanee to bring back the woman, and he arrived here with her this afternoon.

Policeman Makes Valuable Capture

Officer Thompson Lands Two Alleged Thieves Who Tried Hard to Make Their Get-Away

On more than one occasion Police Officer Thompson has demonstrated that he is possessed of detective abilities and knows how to exercise the same.

Last night, about ten o'clock, the officer saw two men walk down Pinnacle Street, and he followed them to Dundas Street. One of the men carried under his arm a new pair of long rubber boots. When the men detected the officer, the one carrying the rubber boots dropped the same on the sidewalk and both men decamped. Thompson, being in close proximity, caught one of the pair, and took him to the police station. A few minutes later he had in custody the second man. They gave their names as Michael Kelly and Thomas Hayes. The former alleges that the latter stole the boots and that he was carrying them for his companion. Both were charged with theft.

This morning they were brought up before Mayor Marsh, acting Magistrate, in the absence of Magistrate Masson. He adjourned the case until Monday next without taking any plea from the accused or any evidence being submitted.

In connection with the case, Mr. Simmonds, who resides in a business place here, called at the police station this morning and reported that a pair of long rubber boots were last evening stolen from his place. The boots were those dropped by Kelly. The accused will have to remain in jail until Monday. Kelly and Hayes have been in the city but a short time and are not known to the police.

His Worship intimated that the matter would be investigated to ascertain his correct age, and also where he obtained liquor. Hutchison was given a few days to pay his fine.

A PRESENTATION.

On Monday evening the friends and neighbors of Mrs. Cornish gathered at the home of Mr. David Hewitt and presented him with a bookcase and secretary combined and an address was read by Mrs. Chisholm. Mr. Cornish replied in a few well chosen words, after which Her. Mr. Connell, of Thomasburg, spoke in behalf of the Methodist church in regret in losing one of its members. Rev. J. A. McConnell then gave a short address. Lunch was served and the rest of the evening was spent in singing, closing by singing "Auld Lang Syne" till we all meet again."

Gilbert The Goat

Poor Gilbert! He seems to have got in wrong all right. He couldn't have been more icily received at Ottawa than he was had the door of the House of Commons been slammed in his face. Neither side of the House would indicate a welcome to the newly elected Nationalist member either by sound or look. To make his position still more difficult, he is compelled to sit among the Liberal back benches. He probably wishes by now that he were back on the farm.

Toronto Tipplers.

One man in every four in Toronto drinks intoxicating liquor; there are 20,000 Toronto men in bar-rooms every evening and there are 2,000 Toronto men drunk every night. Such are the statements made by Rev. R. H. Spence, General Secretary of the Dominion Alliance, and they seem to have created surprise in some quarters. Just why they should, however, is not at all clear.

Mr. Spence sought to prove his statement that there are 20,000 men in the bars in Toronto every night from figures secured by reporters at the time of the reduction campaign. It was discovered then, he said, that the crowds in the bar-rooms changed practically each half hour, and that of the 144 bars which existed then there were 2,620 men drinking in the half hour of which count was kept. On that basis, between the hours of six and eleven o'clock there would be 20,000 men in the bars in the evening or about one man in four out of the entire population. "And," Mr. Spence added, "while very few men would stay longer than half an hour, a great many would not stay so long, and so the number of customers would be even larger.

"It would be safe to say, further, that in the average bar-room one man in every four who is drinking becomes tipsy, and at least one in every ten is drunk. That means that there are two thousand men drunk in the city of Toronto every night. And Toronto is a very good city."

A New Era Begun

When the House opened next week there was presented to the members and the country at large the most drastic and complete reorganization that has been made in either political party since the days before Sir John Macdonald died. Mr. R. L. Borden, the Opposition leader, faced the Government benches with an entirely new bodyguard. It is the reorganization that has ever been gathered under the leader of an Opposition in the Canadian Parliament. It spells the beginning of the end of Laurier administration.

The men he has chosen to guide the counsels of the party directly are men of calibre, who have made their marks in other walks of life besides politics. They command respect for the manner they have achieved before entering Parliament. Therefore, they are certain to make the fight of the Conservatives to win power one of the most spectacular this country has witnessed.

Their names are familiar to every Canadian: George H. Perley, T. W. Crothers, Charles A. Magrath, John Stanfield, Dr. Roche, A. S. Goodeve and others. It is worthy of notice that each of these men bears the marks of his chief, Mr. Borden, in that they are men of lofty principles and strong convictions. It has been said that Mr. Borden is far too honest a man to be a political leader, and that Alexander Mackenzie was a failure because of his very integrity. But Mackenzie did not have the same power behind him that Mr. Borden has. The significance, therefore, of the Conservatives' reorganization is that Canada is approaching a new era in her public life. Mr. Borden and his bodyguard of brilliant supporters will force graft, corruption and immorality in public dealings out of the national life of Canada, and wipe away the blot that stains her name among the citizens of the British Empire.

THANKSGIVING SERMON BY DISTINGUISHED MAN

Pastor Russel Asks Some Pertinent Questions--Who Gave Thanks And By What Reason Did We Observe The Day?

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 27.—Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle spoke twice in our largest Opera House. He had a splendid hearing. If any came in levity and curiosity they remained to depart earnestly thoughtful. One of Pastor Russell's addresses was on the "HEREAFTER." The other was an enquiry as to why and how sincere, if we observed Thanksgiving Day last week. We report the latter discourse, which was based upon the words of the Psalmist—"O, give thanks unto the Lord, for He is good, for His mercy endureth forever" (cxxxvi., 1). The speaker was confident that the original institution of Thanksgiving Day was from the best of motives—reverential acknowledgment of indebtedness to the Creator. He doubted not, either, that the day was observed after the same manner by many early Christian people. He would not dispute the appropriateness of such a day indeed, amongst truly pious people who know what they did and why they did it.

He believed, however, that the masses of the people had no real appreciation of the Day and kept it merely as a holiday without the remotest sentiment of thankfulness to God. He felt that such formal and perfunctory thanks, devoid of either the letter or the spirit, would be far from acceptable to the Great Creator.

WHY IS TO BLAME FOR THIS?

Is education to blame for this? Higher Criticism in particular, to be blamed for this condition of unfaith in God and His providences? Is this spiritual fog, perfunctory thanksgiving which God must despise? Pastor Russell thought that a large share of the responsibility lay at the door of the Higher Critics and Evolutionists and the undermining of Christian faith which they had so successfully accomplished during the past fifty years. But he saw another cause back of the Higher Critics, back of the Evolutionists, which he thought lay the chief responsibility for the unfaithfulness to God now so prevalent throughout the world. That cause, charged the Pastor, was the untrines, mistranslations and misinterpretations of the Bible which were responsible for present conditions. These lights of education has merely shown up the inconsistencies of the creeds formulated during the Dark Ages. The light of our day, shining upon those false doctrines, has led the more clear thinkers of Christendom and produced the present unbelief amongst the masses, and has led to the higher criticism also in search for something more rational along the lines of Higher Criticism and Evolution.

Locating the proper source of our trouble, is, the speaker declared, a very important matter. All intelligent people are agreed respecting the wickedness of the creeds which during the past handed down to us by venerable and reverent forefathers, who themselves honestly deceived. Our difficulty has been our general assumption that the creeds of the past rightly represented and interpreted the Word of God, the Bible. Hence when we repudiated the absurdities of our creeds for those irreconcilable creeds. Pastor Russell declared that it is now high time that God's people, under the reverent of humanity—should take duties of the fast-failing and inactive subject. Mr. Garvin Berkley gave an address on the life and works of Rev. C. W. Gordon, of Winnipeg, better known by his pen name, Ralph Conner. Photographs were shown of the old log cabin where Ralph Conner was brought up, and the old log church in which his father preached, and of buildings as they stand, and the little old log cabin now used as a church house. An interesting relic was exhibited by Mr. Berkley, a pair of moccasins worn by Ralph Conner's father when he was a missionary to the Indians. Mr. Berkley's address was illustrated with stereopticon views.

CHAPTER XVI.

A merry circle gathered around the breakfast table at Fair Oaks on a sunny mid-June morning of the Centennial year, of 1876. Marguerite Calhoun sat beside, rolled a varied assemblage. Old General Everitt, gouty but still in the ring, pored at the journals, wiped his glasses, and opening an apocryphal letter, gazed sideburg at the sharp-eyed Flossie.

"I must run over to Washington. Must see a man at the club,—old classmate," he continued. Flossie's eyes darkened. The General's gout was always a little keener after these business trips. Several of the other convivials were busy with their letters, and did not remark Flossie's saucy sally:

"Why Marguerite! You are wearing the "Seventh Cavalry Colors" today!" It was true that a knot of the richest crimson ribbon, bound her snowy throat, this lovely morn. Flossie hummed "Somebody's Coming," to the smothered discomfiture of the graceful hostess. Maud was deep in the mysteries of her letter, in which a certain first Lieutenant of Infantry told that he had finally effected his exchange into the "Fifth Cavalry." That settles it, she said, sotto voce, for she, too, dearly loved a horseman. With fact born of long experience, she avoided Flossie's challenging eye. Vinton Maxwell stole a tender glance at his pretty girl wife, while the triumphant Flossie clapped her hands, and cried "Spoons! spoons!" These blushing married lovers addressed these selves, with humility, to that varied correspondence which is a mark of excellent cosmopolitan social rank. With perfect fury, regularity Harold Durnford ironed his bust, and swallowed several cups of tea—gazing in inane admiration of that bright young Flossie, whose spear was now in everyone's side. I wonder now, is she only chaffing manly Durnford steamed, as he opened a letter from the lonely head of the house. "Last night she solemnly told me she just hated all Englishmen. That is, intended as a settler for me." He alcohol waded through the Pater's raging lines. "Dear old boy." He will have me set up this furnace here, at Maxwell's mine. By Jove, I've an awful furnace in my heart. The Pater will work off his loneliness. What a game old boy.

Before Marguerite Calhoun lay an unopened letter. There was a touch of Quebec crimson in her face, as she rose when the little gathering began to break up. The wicked, roving eye of Flossie rested on that letter.

"Will you walk with me, Miss Rivers?" said Durnford, with absurd humility. "Ah, my dear boy," said General Everett, "I know George's sister's proud, wounded spirit. He fears no foe in front. He goes with a sigh for those he love him, and a scuffle for those who hate.

He can't get an decent command. By Jove I can see that long-legged Michigan boy, as he lugged off on his shoulders for the table that Sheridan give him the one that Lee signed his surrender with! Custer was the white flag of truce; which humbly signalled the end of the war. What is his crime? Is he a traitor? No, too honest! They shouldn't have let the Michigan boy go home before he had whipped Mr. Fi's Lee and Rosser, if they didn't want him."

Maxwell remembered the old barracks at Monroe Point. He thought of many surreptitious night visits to the "cock-tail" aforesaids, to A. Custer's, who was sunked upon the bright eating with a candle flame. He, too, had worshipped the ground the general.

"Astro temps, autre moeurs, General," said Maxwell bitterly. "Loyalty is at a discount now. It pays to be an American citizen in these piping times of peace."

"I'll see the men in the Department," said the General. Watch over Marguerite, Durnford. Tender-hearted old dragoon. "If anything happens to Gordon, I wonder now, is she only chaffing manly Durnford steamed, as he opened a letter from the lonely head of the house. "Last night she solemnly told me she just hated all Englishmen. That is, intended as a settler for me." He alcohol waded through the Pater's raging lines. "Dear old boy." He will

Ralph Canner Defends.

Winnipeg, Nov. 30.—Hon. Colin Campbell and W. J. Gordon were engaged in acrimonious conflict yesterday afternoon, the former was on the stand in the enquiry into Sheaver's charges. After stating that the Tory organization could be better than the truth than the accusation of Mr. Gordon in administration of the segregation district, the chairman went on to characterize Dr. Shearer's statements as "the most disgraceful thing I have ever seen before the public.

Mr. J. J. Gordon (Ralph Connor) took up the cudgels in defence of Shearer, and put the Attorney-General through a severe cross-examination, in which there was a good deal of mutual recrimination. The Attorney-General said he had formerly had a good opinion of Shearer, but in this case his zeal had run away with his judgment.

Ald. Adams shook his fist in the face of Charles D. Skeaff, and when commanded that the latter take back the offensive statement that the name of Adams should be placed with that of "Daly, Evans & Co." over every house in connection with the segregated area.

Attorney-General Campbell, in speaking of the difficulty of obtaining information under the present criminal law, suggested an amendment providing conviction on prima facie evidence.

Beat Up Constable.

Port Hope, Ont., Night Constable Burns, while attempting to arrest four men at an early hour yesterday morning, received a severe beating. One of the assailants knocked him down, while another used his baton and pounded him over the head, inflicting several bad wounds. Two of the men have been arrested, and the rest will come up as soon as the policeman has sufficiently recovered to appear against them.

Will Withdraw "Salome."

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Andreas Dippel, impresario of the Chicago Opera Co., announced at noon yesterday that Salome would be withdrawn from the repertoire of the company. This is a result of the criticism of Mary Garden's portrayal of the leading role and her hideous dancing.

Government Will Build Extension o' T. & N.O.

Toronto, Nov. 30.—"The Government recently passed an order-in-council providing for the building of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway from a point on the main line near Kelso or Porcupine. The distance will probably be 50 or 52 miles and the cost about $450,000. This work will be done under the powers given legislation last session and will be proceeded with without delay."

The above official announcement was made yesterday afternoon by Premier Whitney.

Chairman Englehart of the T. & N. O. Railway Commission stated last night that the action of the Government is all right. "We have the land up and think it will be a profitable undertaking that we are going to take care of it. The extension which I have supported, but not only to the Porcupine district, but the whole of the land up to Lake Abitibi, and further, and we want to develop it all."

R. R. Gosnell, C.E., spoke strongly yesterday morning of the need for the extension of the T. & N. O. now decided upon. "There can be no doubt whatever," he said, "that a railway is necessary and that millions dollars is invested already. The mines have to be equipped for operation and for shipping supplies have to be taken in. This means an expenditure of as much more. One concern received an offer of a million and a half for their property, a few days ago. The Government will be fully justified in building a line to Porcupine without delay."

VICTIMS OF CONSUMPTION.

MOTHER AND TWO CHILDREN AT MUSKOKA FREE HOSPITAL.

Are Now Under Treatment—Husband, Too, Had Been a Patient—A Tragedy in Real Life—Heavy Debt on Institution.

A story from the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives tells of a mother who, with her two children, is now under treatment in that institution. The husband had been a patient, but the case was an advanced one when the patient entered, and he has since passed away. There is little doubt but that the wife was infected as a result of caring for her husband, and now she is in the Muskoka Hospital. Her little girl, about five years of age, and a boy of ten are with her, both being afflicted with this dread disease.

The words of the mother are pathetic. She writes: "I went to a doctor and got him to examine my lungs to see whether there was anything wrong with them, and he said that the right lung was affected. A little rest, he hoped, would build me up. I have a little girl, about five years old, and the doctor says that if I could take her up with me it would do her ever so much good, as she is not very strong. I have three more children, and one of them, a boy of seven years old, is also afflicted, and it is advisable that he should enter the hospital."

These three are of the 104 patients who are residents in this deserving institution and being cared for without money and without price. The sorry part of it is that the trustees are carrying a debt of some thing like $40,000, incurred largely through the solicitous that have been made within the past year, and that have more than doubled the accommodation of the institution, together with the heavy cost of maintaining so large a number of free patients.

Readers who desire to help this great charity may send their contributions to Mr. W. A. Geary, Chairman Executive Committee, 84 Spadina avenue, or to the Secretary-Treasurer, 347 King street west, Toronto.

The Muskoka Free Hospital has ever lived up to its claims of never having refused a single patient because of his or her poverty.

STRANGER UNABLE TO FIND HIS WAY INTO CHURCH HERE

To the Editor of the Intelligencer—

Dear Sir: As it has been my peculiar custom when in a strange town or city on a Sunday evening to attend some church service, and as I happened to be in your city last evening, and while sitting in the hotel parlor reading the heads of the large clock stood near to seven, I enquired of the congenial clerk, who stood behind his desk ready to attend to his various duties, to direct me to a certain church, which he very politely did, and seemed in take special pains that I should find the one in question, as there happened to be more than one on that particular corner. As I had not many minutes to spare, I hurried on my way. Upon arriving at the church I discovered I must be a few minutes late. However, I opened the heavy outside door and entered the vestibule and was confronted by two signs, one on each door with the usual hand on such signs as an direction—"This way in," the hands pointing in different directions. As I looked each way I could not for the life of me discover which door to enter, so I decided to try and enter through the door that labelled, lest in my surprise and dismay, they were locked. At this I proceeded to try another door, entering from the same, and was met by a gentleman having similar signs staring at me, —"This Way In," one hand pointing to the outer wall and the other to the door from which I had just come. These two doors as well, were locked. As I was not a moment and heard the beautiful strains of music from the choir and also one of my favorite hymns, I really was bewildered.

Well, not being able to gain admission, and too late to enter another church across the way—and many an anxious, since barred from my favorite one, no hing was left for me but to hotel where the latch key always hangs out for strangers, and one almost falls in from the street, so convenient is the entrance.

Now I am coming in the moral of my story. I once heard a sermon preached from the pulpit as to places of amusement and impurity having bright lights and cheery surroundings and doors wide open—How easy for one to fall! Well, since man has been known to more long lines of least resistance, I think it would not be a bad plan for the churches to follow along these lines, in place of having such bewildering and confusing signs, on locked doors to daunt the stranger in a strange land who is anxious to enter.

SPORT.

BERLIN, Ont., Nov. 26.—This town, having had its fill of pro hockey, will not have another team for it. The first love and enter an intermediate and junior team in the O. H. A., and not alter those new rings of John Ross Robertson's.

"Cup Williams," who was the mainspring of the team last year, may take a hand in the amateur game, as he has always been a champion of clean sport.

There is some talk of splitting the inter-collegiate hockey union up into two sections, with McGill, Varsity and Queen's in one group, and Laval of Montreal, Laval of Quebec, and Ottawa College in the second group. Ottawa has expressed her willingness to stay in the league under this condition, and it will eliminate Varsity's trouble.

"CALL OF THE WILD."

The public is to see a dramatization of Remington's fascinating novel entitled "John Ermine," and it is full of dramatic interest from start to finish. It tells a most interesting story and tells it well, and none of its charms are lost in the stage production. The company is exceptionally strong, and Franklin Woodruff, who appears as "John Ermine," is one of the most talented actors who has appeared on the stage. This talented actor will be seen at Griffin's Opera House on Monday, Dec. 5. His work is meeting with the hearty approbation of his audiences, as curtain calls are given at each performance. The play is in four acts and a prologue, and there are handsome settings for each act.

Charting the Sky.

Sir William Christie, the astronomer royal, quitted Greenwich Observatory, after forty years' service, on Oct. 1. In an interview, he explained that great progress had been made in his time through the developments in photography. Some years ago eighteen observatories had taken upon themselves the task of making a chart of the sky. The section of the sky allotted to Greenwich had altogether to fit in the recognized catalogue 26,262 stars. Greenwich has now completed its portion of this work, and has in the aid of photography counted 710,000 stars in the section. It merely means that combined telescopic and photographic power were probing the heavens deeper than ever before.

"What," he was asked, "has been the principal discovery in your term of office?"

"The outer satellite of Jupiter," replied Sir William, "We discovered it in February, 1908, and we did it through photography."

Chief Inspector Dew Quits Scotland Yard

Man Who Arrested Crippen Retires After Twenty-Nine Years War Against Crime—Made Many Notable Captures.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Chief Inspector Dew, the man who raced across the ocean to capture Crippen, the principal detective figure in the most important criminal cases of the last 25 years, is to retire from Scotland Yard on Dec. 3.

"I have had nearly 29 years of it, and that's enough for any man," he said yesterday. But I feel far too young to give up work all together, and after my retirement I shall start as a private inquiry agent. I am not resigning in consequence of any attacks that were made on me in certain quarters at the beginning of the Crippen case."

Chief Inspector Dew is only 47 years old. He was barely 19 when he joined the Metropolitan police force, where he won early promotion.

He was one of the detectives investigating the case of Jack the Ripper crimes, and it was for his energy in this work that he was given the rank of detective sergeant. He rose rapidly, and was made inspector at Bow street, which led to his appointment as chief inspector four years ago in succession to Mr. Fleet.

His career has been one long, adventurous criminal hunt, and it is noteworthy that though he had to make many dangerous men, he never carried a revolver until the hunt after Crippen, and had only used handcuffs about three times.

Among the people he arrested recently were Miss Robinson and Miss Hamilton, witnesses in the Bruce case; "Harry the Valet," a crook expert; thief who stole $100,000 worth of jewels from the Duchess of Sutherland; Conrad Harms, the bank swindler; Dr. Crippen.

These are only the more striking cases, but there have been hundreds of minor arrests, and lately, Mr. Dew, assisted with some special inquiries for the war office, acted as legend to stolen cartridges, ran the thief to earth.

All the more important investigations came his way; he frequently had to leave for the continent at a moment's notice to secure the arrest of some infernational swindler.

It is also declared that, while it is imagined that detection of crime is now made easier by the use of telegrams and improved locomotion, he finds that that the work is far more difficult today.

"Criminals are better educated than they used to be, the means of escape are much easier and there are so many ways by which a wanted man may cover his tracks.

"Formerly it was only necessary to scour the country for a criminal—today the detectives much search the world.

Clever Capture Made By Police of Berlin

Young Man Murders Couple Who Had Discharged Their Servant, His Sister-Meal Clue To Crime

Berlin, Nov. 28.—Clever detective work has resulted in the capture within 24 hours of the author of a murder in the Pocklamer-strasse, where Herr Tetzke and his wife were shot by an unknown assailant as they opened their flat. Herr Tetzke was killed outright and his wife died yesterday. They leave a seven months old baby.

The motive for the killing was named Pippe, brother of a servant girl dismissed by the Tetzkes a week ago. He was incensed at the action by a young man whom he invited to join him in robbing the Tetzkes. The informer was not aware of Pippe's identity, but, furnished sufficient clues to enable the prompt arrest. The prisoner has made a full confession.

Herr von Jagow's detective force secured another success, to-day by arresting three burglars alleged to be implicated in the murder and murder of a girl whose body was found in a sack in the Spree canal on Sunday. The identity of the body and the cause of death were not found necessary, but the police dragnet revealed a corpse. Martha Sobanski, a Bydgoski was the only girl in a particular class of the cases who could not be located. An examination showing that the girl's last meal consisted of mushrooms and fruit helped the police to track the alleged murderer.

KING GEORGE'S SEAL.

Each Great Stamp of the Realm Only Lasts About Ten Years.

Whenever a new monarch ascends the throne it becomes necessary to provide a new Great Seal of Great Britain, the emblem of sovereignty, which is required to be the most important class of public documents, such as writs for summoning Parliament, treaties, and official acts of state. The Great Seal, like the coins, is made and struck at the Mint, and is composed of gold and silver, although there have been occasions when gold has been used.

The Great Seal of King Edward was of silver, 6 inches in diameter, and cost just over $2,500. It was the minute work involved in designing the Great Seal which made it so costly.

Generally speaking, the Great Seals for about ten years, by which time it becomes somewhat worn, the consequence being that the impression is imperfect. You will find four Great Seals were made for Queen Victoria, beginning with a little blow with a considerable time. A new one was made for the Prince of Wales in 1856, after her accession, others being delivered in 1860, 1878, and finally in 1900, the last costing over $2,000, and $2,500 respectively.

The old Great Seal is now one of the perquisites of the Lord Chancellor's office, and a handle or blow has been being slightly defaced by the reigning monarch, and the delivery of the new Great Seal by the Mint, a meeting of the King in Council is summoned, at which it is handed over to the charge of the Lord Chancellor by the King. The old Great Seal then undergoes a process called "demasking." The King himself performs the first blow with a hammer, just sufficient to make a slight but distinguishing mark, after which His Majesty presents it to the Lord Chancellor.

The new Great Seal, which in May, 1900, was substituted for the old one that had been in use since 1837, was given to Lord Halsbury, who was then Lord Chancellor, by Queen Victoria. The death of Her Majesty eight months later rendered another Great Seal necessary—the first and only Seal of the late King Edward—and when that was ready, late in 1903, the last Great Seal of Queen Victoria fell to Lord Halsbury, after it had been only three and a half years in use.

Fishing In Sydney Harbor.

A tenant of most of the shores around Sydney is the toad-fish, which looks like a toad although it is a fish, with a tough, leathery scaleless skin, and a bloated body, dully mottled brown above, and white below.

It is usually about five inches long, and disproportionately broad, but it has very lengthy, and in fact, active fins to help it to swim from place to place. Its head is also of large size, as bold and voracious as the fish.

The toad-fish, which swarms everywhere, no sooner sees a bait dropped into the water than they dart towards it by dozens, and fight among themselves for the honor of swallowing your hook, generally taking the precaution to bite off the line at the same time.

This extreme anxiety to be caught might perhaps be pardoned were the greedy little wretches fit to eat, but as nothing on earth can make them so, and as they are a perfect nuisance to anglers, they are generally killed as soon as caught.

The best way to get rid of them is to angle as near to the shore as possible, and to drop the hook in the water before any other fish had time to look at it, they especially enjoy the benefit of the fishing spear, upon which many hundreds, if not thousands, are frequently impaled in succession.

This sounds wantonly cruel, but let no one pronounce it so who is not well acquainted with the toad-fish from those who are, I fear no reproof. When speared, they directly inflate their slimy skin like a balloon, and eject a stream of liquid from their mouths, with a report as if they had burst.

If flung again into the water, however wounded, they instantly swim about, and begin eating; and should you spear a little less active than the lows, they forthwith attack him and eat him up.

King Edward and Labor Guest.

King Edward had—a fact which is recalled by the recent indisposition of Mr. Henry Broadhurst—a most courteous and non-obtrusive manner towards the old type of Labor politician. Mr. Broadhurst was there Lord Mayor of Gladstone's Ministry. He was, indeed, the first Labor member to be admitted to Ministerial distinction; thus when Prince of Wales invited him to spend the week-end at Sandringham. On the night of his arrival, the prince with his guest went over a cigar until the "wee sma' hours ayont the tow." As a fact, when the pair proceeded to retire the entire household was a rest. The prince escorted his guest to his room. "Ah, Broadhurst," said he, as he supplied a light, "I thought I'd like to see you safe in bed." Is there any other Labor Parliamentarian who can say he has been "tucked in"—thus Mr. Broadhurst terms the incident — by a King-expectant?

Where Will Manuel Live?

Where will the ex-King of Portugal live? In olden times Twickenham was a refuge for dispossessed royalties, and it was there that Louis Philippe and the Prince de Joinville came after the Revolution of 1848 had driven them from France, says The London Chronicle. Orleans House—Louis Philippe's Twickenham home—is now "to let." By the park gates there is a public-house sign, "The Duke's Head." Many years ago a former landlord of this hostelry saluted the exiled King of the French as he was walking through the streets of Twickenham: "What were you when I lived here?" asked Louis Philippe. "Please your Royal Highness," replied the man, "I served the Crown." "Did you?" said the exking. "Well, you have my body; you did what I was unable to do!"

Some Egyptian boats made of cedar, probably in use 4,500 years ago, have been found buried near the banks of the Nile, and furnish an interesting proof of the power of that wood to withstand the ravages of time.

REFERENDUM IS THE CRY.

Unionists Are Appealing to the People on That Ground--Already a Change in the Ranks Of Balfour's Party.

London, Nov. 30.—The politicians of all parties are straining every nerve to record lots a few days the work which in ordinary elections is spread over weeks or months. Nearly all the heavy guns were in action yesterday.

Arthur J. Balfour, leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, before a big meeting in Albert Hall, where he warmly supported the referendum, declares the Government as puppets dancing to the tune of John Redmond and his American paymasters.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, spoke at Reading; Chancellor Lloyd-George at Cardiff; John E. Redmond at Dublin; Winston Spencer Churchill at Colchester; Augustine Birrell at Bristol; Alden Barnes at Battersea, and Austen Chamberlain at Ashton.

The issues are narrowing daily. The Conservatives make much of the referendum of home rule. They proclaim that the plank of the Liberals for the reform of the House of Lords means a single chamber and put to the front their new policy of referendum.

An interesting factional cleavage has occurred in Balfour's party over tariff reform. The Spectator, which is the spokesman of the Unionist free traders, has proposed that the tariff reformers pledge themselves to submit the question to a referendum, if the party wins, is not being a leading issue of the campaign. The most ardent tariff reformers, led by The Morning Post, contend that it is the foremost principle of the party. "The Unionist party breaks into fragments," says The Post, "if Unionist victory does not mean tariff reform."

Mr. Balfour last night announced his willingness to leave it to a referendum. In the meantime, the leaders are making every appeal to the independent vote, believing that it controls the issue.

The tariff Unionists sent a message of defiance of home rulers to Mr. Balfour's meeting, and deputations from the Nonconformist Unionist Association of England, and 500 ministers of non-Episcopal churches in Ireland have addressed Mr. Balfour in opposition to home rule.

The reading of the message from the Irish Unionist at Albert Hall caused much enthusiasm.

"In all solemnity," said the message, "we now declare that home rule will bring Ireland, not peace, but the sword. If an Irish Parliament is set up the Unionists of the south, allied with the men of Ulster, will not acknowledge its authority. They will neither obey its decrees nor pay its taxes."

Mr. Balfour pronounced strongly in favor of the referendum as the best method of settling deadlocks between the two Houses without requiring the reform of the House of Lords, and it could be carried into effect before the House of Lords was reformed. This he declared to be Lansdowne's plan. He ended by declaring that the Cabinet was governed by its nonsistent members, who were governed by John Redmond, who was governed by Patrick Ford. "Don't trust the puppets who are performing their parts on the stage," admonished Mr. Balfour. "Don't trust the Irish wirepuller. Don't trust the American paymaster, who calls for a tune. Trust alone the sound judgment and enlightened patriotism of the people of the country."

J. H. Seavern, who was member of Parliament for the Brixton division of Lambeth in 1906, and who was at one time president of Banks, has become the Liberal candidate in the same constituency against Davideon Dalziel, who is also a resident of New York.

Lord Joicey, who was created a peer by the Liberals, has announced his defection from that party because of its failure to provide for the defence of the country, and for its alliance with the Socialists. It is stated that several other Liberal peers are tending in the same direction.

A Heroine Dead.

Newark, N.J., Nov. 30.—Miss Anna Haag, a heroine of the Newark fire, who saved half a dozen lives in the holocaust at High and Orange streets, yesterday, died yesterday from her injuries. Miss Haag was a telephone girl in the Wolf Engineering Co. It was largely through her coolness and bravery that many of the girls employees were rescued with fear escaped from the upper floors of the building.

FORCED TO APOLOGIZE

Member Who Styled Mr. Monk a Liar Brought to Book.

General Exodus of Liberals When T. W. Crothers Rises to Speak Causes Dr. Schaffner to Call Out "Cowards"—Demand For an Apology Reopens Affair of a Couple of Days Ago—Gauvreau Apologizes.

Ottawa, Nov. 30.—All hope of a division on the protracted debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne last night was dispelled shortly before 11 o'clock, and a scene was enacted well calculated in an encounter between the two parties which stirred the famous contretemps between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. George E. Foster two years ago.

The incident began when Sir Wilfrid had finished his oration defending the attitude of the administration on the naval question, which has been under fire since the opening of the debate. The Prime Minister was heard by a crowded house, and as soon as T. W. Crothers, (Conservative, West Elgin), arose to continue, there was a general exodus on the part of Liberal members. The noise was great, and Mr. Speaker shouted "Order, order. No attention was paid to his remark, and several Conservatives took up the cry, and in the confusion were heard such expressions as "Come back and take your medicine," and in the hubbub Mr. Speaker heard Dr. F. L. Schaffner (Conservative, Souris, Man.) use the word "cowards."

The Speaker at once called upon Dr. Schaffner to withdraw the expression. Speaker Marcil then intimated that an apology was due to the House.

Hon. George E. Foster: "What about 'liar' the other day?"

Cries of "Order, order," and "Apologize," filled the House, and Conservatives gave full vent to their lung power and shouted to the Speaker to have C. A. Gauvreau (Liberal, Terrebonne) apologize for saying that Mr. Monk lied.

Speaker Marcil appealed for order, and Mr. Borden arose to say, amid much kind of cheering on the part of his followers, "I respectfully suggest that the word 'coward' is no more offensive than the word 'liar'."

This was followed by another burst of Opposition cheering, with a counter-demonstration by the Liberals, throughout the uproar Mr. Foster thundered in stentorian tones, "Make the other man apologize. That's the only fair thing."

The Speaker explained that the other day when the Liberal member for Temiscouata used the expression "liar" he had not heard it. But, when he saw it in Hansard he proclaim the day he called upon Mr. Gauvreau to withdraw, and that hon. gentleman had done so.

Mr. Foster, evincing unusual anger, pointed out that the expression used by the member for Temiscouata had been reported in Hansard, yet the Speaker had exacted no apology from him.

Mr. Foster: "Make him apologize."

This was followed by cries of "apologize" from the Conservative benches.

Sir Wilfrid stemmed the melee of voices for a moment with a remark that the question whether the member for Temiscouata should apologize or not could not be discussed at this time. "When, an incident has passed," he said, "it cannot be recalled. I am not prepared to say whether the member for Temiscouata should have been called upon to apologize or not."

Mr. Foster: "No, he is dead silent."

Mr. Borden: "I am not prepared either to say whether such apology should be asked in either case, but I do say that when a question of such moment is being discussed, and when the Prime Minister is addressing the House, and when the leader of the Opposition is addressing the House, it is not fair that members should leave their seats in a body, and thereby prevent the proceedings from being reported in Hansard."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier interjected that all men were fallible.

Cries of "apologize" continued, and Mr. Borden brought forth renewed cheering from his side of the House, when he shot his ultimatum at the Premier and Speaker:

"We may as well have this matter threshed out now."

An all night session seemed imminent.

The Opposition leader pointed out that no one in the House has asked for ruling in this case.

Mr. Foster—"Let us have equal rights, no prejudice."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier—"The incident cannot be recalled in the midst of the debate. We must proceed with the debate."

The Speaker reviewed his rulings and explained that he had not called upon Mr. Gauvreau to withdraw, only because he had not heard him using the expression, and he had heard Dr. Schaffner.

After more turmoil the Speaker suggested that, if the member for Temiscouata considered it his duty to the House, he hoped he would apologize.

Mr. Gauvreau first said that he could not apologize under the rules, but a moment later said, that, in order to restore peace, he would utterly withdraw the word scarlet fever, and apologize to the member for Jacques Cartier. He added, amid laughter, "I won't ask him to take the carriage to settle that."

Mr. Crother's motion to adjourn then carried, and one of the most remarkable incidents of late years closed.

W. B. Northrup (Conservative, East Hastings), who resumed the debate on Tuesday, said it was time for Canada to stop and take stock of its national defences. He would liked to have seen the personal expenditure and control of his navy defence of the Government. He regarded as ridiculous the Government's expression of satisfaction with the increase in imports and exports during the past year, and argued that this was no indication of prosperity. By taking the duty off coal, and rescinding the duties on steel and iron, the volume of Canadian imports could largely be increased, but at the sacrifice of Nova Scotia collieries, and the satisfying of the iron and steel industries.

He argued that the naval policy of the Government had brought about a weakened condition of defence. Since last year, by the policy, two warships had been taken out of the Imperial navy, 800 sailors had gone out of the service, and millions of dollars of Canadian money spent in vain.

E. W. Tobin (Richelieu and Wolfe) produced three declarations from Mayor Lavigueur, published on which the meeting was held; James Smith and John Pertelaine, who were also at the meeting, bearing out the denial of Notary Bergin of Richmond, Que., of the accusation of Dr. Reid, that he stated from a public platform during the Drummond-Arthabaska by-election that the Canadian navy would be used to pound Great Britain.

Ralph Smith (Nanaimo), dealing with the speech made by Mr. Borden, said that he, like his leader, was at variance with Premier McBride, of British Columbia spoken of as a probable leader of the Conservative party, because, on the arrival of the Rainbow at Victoria, Mr. McBride had declared that he was in accord with Borden's naval policy. Clive Phillips Wolley, the president of the British Columbia branch of the Naval League, had expressed himself in similar terms.

Mr. Smith thought the people of Canada would remember that the Government had carried out the naval policy on lines approved by the whole House, whereas the Opposition had changed its policy every year and would likely do so again.

Result of Toronto Isolation Hospital Inquiry Made Known.

Cross-Infection In Hospitals Where Contagious Diseases Are Treated Cannot Be Completely Checked Under Best Systems—Doctors Were Negligent and Did Not Take Proper Precautions.

Toronto, Nov. 30.—Judge Winchester's report on the management of the Isolation Hospital was forwarded to Mayor Geary last evening. It consisted of 62 typewritten pages, and after reviewing most of the cases in which negligence in the hospital authorities was complained of, as well as the other evidence submitted, the findings are, as a rule, in the direction of exonerating the authorities. As regards the complaints of cross-infection while patients were in the hospital, his honor comments:

"I find with all the care that can be given by physicians and nurses in connection with cases of scarlet fever, diphtheria and measles, it has been found impossible in the English hospitals, with their new box and cubicle system and modern equipment to prevent cross-infection in the hospitals, although these cases are very greatly reduced.

"It is absolutely necessary that every precaution that can be devised by medical skill and knowledge should be taken to prevent the spread of contagion, and notwithstanding the watchfulness of the physicians who gave evidence before me, stated that they did not consider that scales from a patient recovering from scarlet fever would carry contagion, and that infecting was not received by mere exposure to the air in the room where the patient was. I consider that measures should be taken to prevent any possible infection by scales or otherwise.

"I find that the maids of both the scarlet fever and diphtheria wards continue without taking any precautions to prevent contagion.

"I find that a non-use-half of the outside physicians attending patients in the hospital do not rube themselves in cap or gown or take any other precautions to prevent contagion, although the necessary clothing is in the residence for them.

"Judge Winchester goes on to recommend a bacteriological laboratory at the hospital; completion of new building; enforcement of rules; an additional stenographer; special collection of accounts; free antitoxin; a Government grant; written certificates of disease preventing contagion; an annual report; reorganization of staff.

As to the medical health officer and hospital staff, he says:

"I find that Dr. Sheard has been careful and attentive to the performance of his duties with reference to the Isolation Hospital, devoting his energies in the interests of all times and without regard to his own personal convenience. He has done, as some of the physicians stated, noble work, and deserves commendation for the manner in which he has performed his duties and provided for the wants of the unfortunate; they stated that the only surprise was that he was able to do so much with the small amount of money at his disposal in connection with the hospital.

"With reference to Miss Mathieson, the lady superintendent, the greater number of witnesses gave testimony with reference to the Isolation Hospital which is in keeping with and conscientious work in connection with the hospital.

"In my opinion, however, the work in connection with the hospital has become too exacting for a lady superintendent to have charge of all the details in connection with the same. The grossly careless manner in which the employees attended to their work and not only their duties, but often work which was apparently not a part of their duties, should never have been permitted by the lady superintendent.

"Dr. Hazlewood and his assistant perform their work in the hospital satisfactorily, as does Miss Taylor, the secretary."

Severe Privation.

Fort William, Nov. 30.—L. M. Keating, night operator at Oscar, a small town 120 miles east of here on the Grand Trunk Pacific, was found on Saturday by W. Lowe and Harry and Mark Chown about four miles from the station, sitting beside a small lake, with both feetfrozen, and two weak to stand. He had not slept nor eaten for 96 hours. He was safely carried him to the station, and a message was sent down to Port William. A special engine was sent out.

It will not be known for a day or two yet whether amputation of the feet will be necessary.

A Black Picture.

Washington, Nov. 30.—A black picture of prospects for the railroads unless they are allowed to raise their rates was painted before the interstate Commerce Commission yesterday by C. G. McKay, chairman of the Trunk Line Association of New York, an organization of eastern carriers. He declared that the increased demands of employees and the whole rolling stock had been hamstrung by the involuntary reduction of rates.

Union of Canada and Newfoundland Dream Of The Hon. A. B. Morine

Tells Belleville Canadian Club He Hopes To See The Ancient Colony Annexed By The Dominion --Interesting Lecture on Newfoundland, Its People and Resources.

The Canadian Club is a live organization if one may judge from the attendance last evening at the first monthly meeting for the winter season. The gathering took place at Mr. Jas. Wallace's place of business, and the spacious dining room was filled to its utmost capacity. A bountiful spread was provided by mine host Wallace and an intellectual treat was provided by the Hon. A. B. Morine, K.C., of Toronto, formerly leader of the Opposition in Newfoundland.

Mr. C. M. Reid, President, occupied the chair, and in introducing the speaker of the evening referred to the fact that the Club had secured a number of prominent speakers for the monthly meetings which will be held. Hon. Mr. Morine's address was on Newfoundland, and all present were delighted with what they heard. The lecturer is particularly versed in his subject owing to the fact that for 20 years he was a member of the Parliament of that well-known and historic British possession. In his opening remarks the speaker said that in Canada there appeared to be considerable ignorance about Newfoundland, but he hoped that more attention would in future be given to that colony, which was one of the oldest colonies of the British crown. Newfoundland was called by many names, such as cod, dog and fog. Called cod because of its immense and valuable cod fishing; dog because they were poor; and fog, because on the coast line there was considerable fog arising from the Gulf Stream. The physical, moral and spiritual nature of the people was touched upon and the Hon. gentleman said they were good. The natural resources of the country were excellent. At one time lumbering was carried on quite extensively, but of late it had been superseded by pulp wood manufacture. Of course, its fisheries were an important and profitable asset. Seals to the number of 300,000 are killed there almost every year. The fur of these animals, while valuable, is not nearly so as the Alaskan seal. The climate of Newfoundland is invigorating. The winter is by no means as severe as the Canadian winter, and the summer is not so warm, and is most delightful. The climate is tempered by the Gulf Stream. The colony is rich in mineral and other resources. Iron, copper and marble are to be found in abundance and especially iron, But little coal has as yet been discovered. While wheat or corn could not be grown, vegetables such as potatoes, cabbage, turnips, etc., could be raised in abundance. Fruit is also a scarce commodity, as peaches, grapes and plums have to be imported.

The total imports of the colony amounted to about $4,000,000 per annum, and the population, all white, was 250,000. The latter was made up of Englishmen, Irishmen and Scotchmen, about one-third of each. The people were a religious people. About one-third were Anglicans, one-third Methodists and nearly one-third Roman Catholics. There were a few Presbyterians and Baptists. They were a churchgoing and God-fearing people. The value of Newfoundland as a defence for Canada was referred to. It is a most strategic place, and for this reason, if none other, Mr. Morine thought it should be annexed to Canada. The people were a most loyal people, and if attached to Canada what a gem it would be to the Dominion. The speaker referred to the fact that negotiations once went on to annex the colony to Canada, but the inhabitants for some reason voted almost solidly to remain as they were. He hoped, however, to see the colony yet attached to the Dominion. In concluding, the Hon. speaker said that with a big pull, a strong pull and a pull all together, it might be possible for the unification of that colony and Canada. (Loud applause.)

After a few complimentary remarks by the speaker by Mr. Reid the singing of the National Anthem brought the pleasing and profitable gathering to a close.

Kingston Wants Hydro Power.

Kingston, Nov. 30.—The City Council will likely carry out the suggestion of Messrs. Adam Beck and ask the cooperation of the neighboring municipalities in this district in securing the power from the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission. A meeting will be held in Brockville, if the municipalities will agree to enter.

Kingston wants to get power, and Prescott is said to be just as eager for it. It is hoped to get Brockville, Gananoque, Napanee and Deseronto to fall in line. Power could be secured at Morrisburg. The Seymour Co. of Cobourg have a proposition from Morrisburg. The Seymour Co. of Cobourg have a proposition from Morrisburg. The Seymour Co. of Cobourg propose to supply Kingston, Napanee and other points with power, and better concessions will have to be made by the company before a contract would be signed.

Trestle Gave Way.

Halifax, Nov. 30.—Seven men injured, two probably fatally, by the collapse of the bridge trestle at No. 2 Colliery, Glace Bay, yesterday. The engine and a train load of cars were being run out on the trestle when it gave way and the entire train dropped to the ground, a distance of 25 feet. James McRury, fireman, received cuts and bruises and is dislocated shoulder, and Jack McInnes, brakeman, bruises and cuts. The others injured were Joseph Mullins, broken leg; Dan Mullins, broken; John Morrison, Jack McInnes, conductor; D. Perry and Charles Gaudet. The damage will total about $6,000.

Electrocuted In Bath Tub.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 30.—Edward L. Uhrig, 23 years old, son of a wealthy coal dealer, was found dead in a bath tub in his home Monday night. He had been electrocuted by an electrically operated vibrator by which he was massaging his body.

The Turkish Government under the old regime, having reason to doubt the loyalty of its fleet, disbanded the crews and tied its war ships up in the harbor, where they could do no harm if they did no good. The same policy might be advantageously followed by the Dominion Government. It would save expense.

Smart high boots for the winter are made of black satin or of black velvet. They are buttoned and quite high.

Fancy band bags with broad metal tops are carried by means of long double silk cords. These cords match the color of the material in the case of suede, but when the bag is made of one of the Persian fabrics or of plaid the cord must match the color of the gown or suit with which it is carried.

The best lace to have dyed to match the gown is Irish crochet. This lace is so strong and durable that it may be employed again and again and will outlast many finer real laces, which are also far more expensive.

Simple circular capes are much worn by small girls. The cape in the cut shown has openings in the front through which the hands can be slipped and is finished either with a hood or a collar. When the hood is lined with a bright color the effect is very pretty. JUDIC CHOLLET.

Aprons that really cover the dress are what active girls require. The apron illustrated can be made simply, as in the cut, or with square neck or with and without pockets, as shown in the smaller view. JUDIC CHOLLET.

The Friendly Safety.

A historian of invention tells us that to the wails of a long-suffering infant he owe the boon of the safety pin. Here is the story. A little boy named Harrison, an English black-smith's son, had to look after his baby brother's wife. The baby often cried, and its years were usually traced by pin punctures. The boy nurse tried a long time to keep pins 10 such a form that they could be used with safety to his brother's flesh. In this he failed; but his father, the blacksmith, perceiving the utility of the idea that the lad had been at work on, took it up on his own account and eventually turned out the safety pin that is in use to-day all over the world. Whether the safety would have still remained in oblivion but for the torturing of that little English baby no one knows, of course.

Old Lord's Day Acts.

Oldest Act of Parliament in Great Britain aimed to stop Sunday travel is ing. In 1660, for example, two men were found guilty of the crime of walking from Bristol to Bath on a Sunday and were at once fined 5s each. All business was at a standstill on a Sunday. Nothing was allowed to be sold except milk. For of all the traders of England the milkman, and the milkman alone, was allowed to peruse his calling for the whole seven days of the week.

Shapes That Lead In the Fashionable Mélange of Hats.

Hat shapes are of three sorts—the large wide brimmed hat, the cloche or Charlotte Corday and the turban.

As a variant on these there is the big hat with a mushroom brim or a wide variety of shapes, all usually following the mushroom ilk.

The cloche shape comes more often in black satin, with a trimming of wide crush band and a flattened bow of satin. Underneath the brim is a frill of white lace.

There is a little French shape on the cloche order that covers the head like a mobcap. It has a slightly puffed crown of black satin and an inverted downpour brim plainly covered with crestune in floral pattern. Immediately in front, fastened to the base of the satin crown, is a broad ornament of dull gilt.

HER KIDNEYS WERE KILLING HER

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" SAVED MRS. WEBBER'S LIFE

After Three Doctors Had Given Her Up.

Clanbranzie, Ont.

Two years ago, the doctor made forty-four calls on me and then said he had done all he could for me. I was suffering with intense Kidney Trouble and severe inflammation had set in. Two other doctors were consulted and agreed that nothing could be done to help me.

On the recommendation of a neighbor, I took "Fruit-a-tives" and they cured me. To-day, I take "Fruit-a-tives" as my only medicine. I am in excellent health and "Fruit-a-tives" is the medicine that cured me after I had been at death's door for months.

I am glad to be able to give you this testimonial. It may benefit some other woman suffering as I suffered, as I believe that I would not be alive to-day had I not used "Fruit-a-tives".

Mrs. P. E. WEBBER.

"Fruit-a-tives"—the famous fruit medicine—is acknowledged the greatest kidney cure in the world. 25c. a box, 6 for $2.50; trial size, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FIVE CHILDREN LEFT.

MOTHER DIED OF CONSUMPTION AND ONE LITTLE GIRL IS NOW AT GRAVENHURST.

A short time ago a woman in the advanced stages of tuberculosis died in her own home. By her death five little ones were left without the care of their mother. There was money enough in the family to make some provision for the care of the children, but it was almost impossible to secure anyone who would undertake the service, as fatal are many people of this dread disease. A visitor to the home says that time and time again she had found the baby sleeping in her sick mother's bed, and now by food was stowed from which the children partook. As request is received in the fact that to-day one of these five children is a patient in Gravenhurst, and the baby is in the children's ward at the Toronto Free Hospital for Consumptives.

It is for the care of such sufferers as these that the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives has been built. The task of accommodation is heavy, and the Trustees have only been able to make the most pressing cases of the present year by borrowing heavily from the bank. An appeal is now made for funds to help on this work, and provide a place where children, such as are referred to here, may find a home and the possibilities of cure.

Contributions may be sent to W. J. Gage, Esq., Chairman Executive Committee, 84 Spadina avenue, or Rev. Treas. National Sanitarium Association, 347 King St., W., Toronto.

The Muskoka Free Hospital accepts patients from any part of the Dominion, and not a single patient has ever been refused because of poverty.

SENTENCE COMMUTED

SHIRT FRONTS SUFFER SOME

Waiters at St. Andrews Ball At The Windsor Rolled In Snow.

STRIKERS RESPONSIBLE

Last Vessel To Leave Montreal This Season Clears This Morning.

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—The last vessel to leave this port was the steamer Bornu, of the Elder-Dempster Line, which, covered with ice and snow, cast off this morning with a cargo for Mexico. Ocean navigation up the St. Lawrence now ends at Quebec.

There were several soiled shirt fronts at the big St. Andrew's ball, at the Windsor Hotel, last night, the waiters taking the places of the strikers having been attacked and rolled in the snow by strike sympathizers. It is expected that the strike will spread.

NURSES PROVE TO BE HEROES

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—There were instances of great heroism on the part of the nurses, attendants and patients of the Free Hospital for Consumptives at Weston this morning, when at four o'clock their place took fire and was burned to the ground. Forty patients in the last stages of tuberculosis were in the institution. Some of them were absolutely helpless, and had to be carried downstairs. The rescuers went back again and again through the smoke until everybody was out. The nearest fire brigade station was three miles away. The loss is $100,000.

PICTON, Ont., Dec. 1.—This morning, about four o'clock, Mr. Philip Dulmage, a wealthy farmer, living near Cherry Valley, a few miles from this place, was burned to death in h's barn.

Deceased was about sixty years of age and unmarried. It is said he left his house about three a.m. and went to his barn, and a few minutes later the fire broke out.

Mr. A. S. Dulmage, a member of the staff of The Intelligencer, was notified by long distance 'phone this afternoon of the sad occurrence. Mr. Dulmage is a cousin of the deceased.

OFF TO PRISON FOR ONE YEAR

(Intelligencer Special.)

WELLAND, Ont., Dec. 1. — John Bright, colored, who narrowly escaped being lynched by a mob at Port Erie when arrested charged with assaulting a white woman, was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison.

Second Edition

Old Man Guilty Of Murder Not To Die Saturday.

Shortly before going to press The Intelligencer learned that Robert Parker, under sentence of death here for the murder of Wm. Masters, had been reprieved. It was impossible to obtain confirmation of the story from Ottawa up to the time of going to press or to learn whether there had been merely a reprieve in the sentence, or whether the sentence had been commuted to life imprisonment.

An official announcement will probably be made in a second edition.

LATER.

(Intelligencer Special.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 1.—It is understood that the sentence of Parker, the Bellevil'e murderer, will be commuted to life imprisonment. At a meeting this afternoon the necessary papers will probably be made out.

OUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING.

Few, perhaps, realize that Christmas is less than a month off, when all are invited to be happy and to do their utmost for the happiness of others. How can this best be done? Most largely by consideration for others. Probably the hardest worked people in the city are those in the stores, who with untiring energy and zeal do so much to make our Christmas shopping—by no means an easy task as a pleasant and profitable undertaking. Much can be done for these hard workers with a little thoughtful consideration—do SHOP EARLY. Few are compelled to wait until the last moment before the store's close to make their purchases; many do so out of just that little lack of consideration that would go so far to lighten the burdens of the shop people.

There is another aspect of the matter. The merchants with their usual business activity are now ready for the rush of Christmas trade. The best of the season's goods are on view, the assistants are keen on making prompt sales and those who shop early have their best attention and the first choice of the many handsome gifts on view. In a busy store much must be done, even after the doors close, for the rearrangement of stock, and by shopping early the assistants are relieved of much late work and kept in bodily condition to enjoy a Merry Christmas.

First Polling In Britain Only 2 Days Distant

Campaign Becoming More Strenuous Every Hour—Liberals Admit Balfour Has Taken Win 1 Out Of Their Sails.

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 1.—With the first pollings within two days' time, the election campaign is getting more strenuous every hour. Candidates and their supporters are holding meetings in every available building and at every possible corner at every conceivable time. Hon. John Burns showed himself still very popular with the working classes of London this morning in his addresses to the grimy workmen of the night shifts from the foundries and factories. If loyalty to Burns meant loyalty to the Government they would carry London by an overwhelming majority.

In their speeches last night the Government leaders practically admitted that Balfour's change on tariff reform had really taken considerable wind from their sails.

The Liberal tactics now are much of a sarcastic round-up of Tories for deserting their pet platform of last year. It is almost beyond question, however, that Redmond, O'Connor and their followers are more solid for the Government than they were, owing to the threatening attitude of the Ulster people.

This all complicates the situation, and makes it anybody's election.

From a Canadian's standpoint it is interesting how frequently the campaigners use the name of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in their speeches. Both sides claim him as their supporter, the Unionists on the score of imperialism, and the Liberals as a friend of home rule.

SHOOTS GIRL BECAUSE SHE SPURNED HIS KISS

Leo Gerowski Puts Bullet Into His Head After Firing Four Shots at Helen Furman.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Dec. 1. — Leogirl around the waist, so the police say, and attempted to kiss her. She repulsed him and Gerowski backing towards the door drew a revolver from his pocket and fired four shots at her.

Two of the bullets struck her and three mostly glanced along the right cheek and forehead. Gerowski, believing he had mortally injured her, turned the revolver upon himself. Only one bullet was left in the revolver and Gerowski sent it through his right temple, falling across the body of the sick girl.

Gerowski was removed to the Sisters' Hospital. It is believed he will die. The girl is under the care of Drs. Camp and Good at her home. She will recover.

Gerowski had a foolish infatuation for the girl, which she did not reciprocate.

SHE LANDS IN THE MUD

Runaway Upset on Front St. And Woman Is Spilled Out.

COVERED WITH MUD

Delivery Waggon Collides With Buggy Standing on The Street.

Shortly before six o'clock last evening a horse attached to a buggy, in which were seated a woman and little girl, was standing in front of the Oak Hall store on the west side of Front Street, when the buggy was struck by another vehicle and upset. The woman was thrown out unceremoniously and landed in the mud. Fortunately she was not seriously hurt, but her clothes were covered with mud. The child remained in the buggy by clinging onto the side.

Owing to the centre of the street being excavated there was scarcely room for two vehicles to pass. It is stated that the man who was driving a delivery waggon, after colliding with the buggy, drove on up Front Street without having the courtesy to stop and ascertain if the occupants of the buggy had been injured. His carelessness was freely commented on. The woman and child are said to belong to the country.

INDIANA HAS THAW CASE

VINCENNES, Ind., Dec. 1.—Menlo E. Moore, lessee or owner of theatres in Vincennes, Washington, Mitchell, Princeton and Bedford today is on trial for the murder of Charles Edward Gibson, a wealthy oil operator, whom he shot on the platform of the Baltimore and Ohio station on the morning of October third.

The interest in the case hinges on the testimony of the twenty-six-year-old wife of Moore, claiming the "unwritten law." When she takes the stand she is expected to lay bare her life in an effort to save her husband. It is expected to be a frank, remarkable take, starting with an alleged attack and with details not unlike Evelyn Thaw's.

146 HUNTERS MEET DEATH THEMSELVES WHILE OUT HUNTING

(Intelligencer Special.)

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 1.—Over one hundred and forty-six killed and eighty-four badly hurt are the human casualties of the hunting season just closed in Canada and the United States, all being shot by themselves or friends in mistake for game. There were eleven killed in Ontario and ten in Quebec.

HAS CHOLERA BUT TRAVELS WITH SAFETY.

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—Despite the vigilance of Canadian immigration and health officers, who hail the steamer Royal George in cholera quarantine for some days, it looks as if a patient infected with the terrible disease landed at Quebec, entrained and passed through Canada a thousand miles or so and entered Michigan at Sault Ste. Marie. His name is Jaroschke, a Russian, and his new quarantine is in Wisconsin.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 1.—The authorities here have had many enquiries at Quebec, Montreal and the "Soo" regarding the story, and say there's nothing in it.
